$4,000,000 Voted In Two-Year Scrip For Back Pensions

Senate Concurs in House Amendments Leaving Only Signature of Governor Necessary.

GAS 'BOOTLEGGING' PLACED UNDER BAN

Bill Amended To Exempt Wholesale Users of Crude Gasoline Designed for Use as Solvents.

Plowing through a mass of accumulated legislation that clogged its wheels on the final night of the 1925-1926 legislative session, the house of representatives Saturday took final action on a number of important senate measures.

The most important step of the day was the passage, by vote of 128 to 3, of the senate bill providing for issuance of approximately $4,000,000 in two-year scrip to pay back pensions of all pensioners on the rolls of 1922, 1923 and 1924. The measure, which provided that banks should not charge more than 7 per cent for discount, was adopted after being amended to strike all reference to the discount rate so as to guard the constitutionality of the measure, and to make the act apply to widows on the pension rolls. The senate later concurred in these amendments, leaving only the governor's signature necessary for enactment into law.

Bar Gas Bootlegging.

Another important measure passed by both the house and senate Saturday was the gasoline consumers' tax bill, designed to prevent "bootlegging" of gasoline into the state by wholesale users who heretofore have evaded the state tax. The bill was amended to exempt wholesale users of crude gasoline designed for use as solvents, and to require railroads to report on tank car shipments of gasoline to the comptroller-general.

In the lengthy debate on the veterans' scrip bill, Weaver, Terrell, introduced a substitute providing that the governor be authorized to discount Western & Atlantic railroad rentals after 1926, to which date they have already been discounted, in order to discharge the obligation of back pensions. It also provided that loss of state revenue resulting from discounting of W. & A. warrants be repaid out of the cigar and cigarette tax

New W. & A. Proposal.

Culpepper, of Fayette, proposed to take the pension money out of the general fund in three years, subtracting one-third each year.

Bussey, of Crisp, proposed a state bond issue to provide the money.

Those who spoke for the original senate bill were Lanier of Columbia; Howard, of Chattahoochee; Wood, of Fulton,; Linder, of Jeff Davis, and others.

Milner, of Dodge, and Kelley, of Gwinnett, supported the Weaver substitute, while Culpepper and Bussey sponsored their respective proposals.

Repairs on Mansion.

Early Saturday night the house agreed to a senate amendment to the house bill appropriating $75,000 to repairing the state capitol, the amendment adding $5,000 for equipping the the new governor's mansion.

The house declined to concur in a senate amendment to a house bill appropriating $30,000 deficiency to the state board of entomology. The senate amendment provided that none of the money be used as a revolving fund to purchase calcium arsenate. The vote to disagree with the amendment was 79 to 54.

Speaker Neill ruled that a senate amendment to a house bill appropriating $750 for the Confederate cemetery at Marietta was out of order when the amendment sought to divert $150 to the Confederate cemetary at Dalton.

At its last morning session of the assembly Saturday the house passed the senate highway reorganization measure, giving the state highway board complete control of the entire highway department. The vote was 116 to 22. Before being put on passage the measure was amended to leave the salary of the chief highway engineer to the discretion of the board, and giving it the right to sue and be sued. Numerous substitutes were voted down, and the above-men-

OIL DISTILLATION TEST BILL BEATEN BY STATE SENATE

Action Prevents Proposed Cut of Commissioner J. J. Brown's Oil Inspectors From 186 to 6.

INHERITANCE TAX REPEAL IS VOTED

House Bill To Increase Speed of Autos Outside Incorporated Towns and Cities Beaten.

The Georgia state senate in its final session Saturday saved Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown and his department from suffering its most disastrous reverse of a session featured by continuous attacks on them, when it voted, 28 to 20, to defeat the house gasoline distillation test bill.

The measure proposed to reduce the number of Commissioner Brown's oil inspectors from 186 to 6, and it was beaten only after a spirited fight in which a strong element of senators opposed to the Brown department appealed for its passage and contested every inch of ground in the parliamentary battle preceding the vote.

Amendments Voted Down.

Two amendments were voted down. One, by Peeples, of the 18th, would have reduced the number of inspectors to 12 instead of six, and the other, by Harrell, of the 12th, would have required railroads to report all tank car gasoline shipments to the commissioner of agriculture. The Peeples amendment was beaten, 24 to 22, and the Harrell amendment was defeated, 26 to 21.

Other important eleventh-hour action taken by the senate included passage of the inheritance tax repeal, which action follows similar repeal in the house some time ago, and defeat of the house bill proposing to increase the legal speed limit of automobiles from 30 to 40 miles an hour outside of incorporated towns and cities.

Vote on Distillation Bill.

Senators voting in favor of the distillation test bill were:

Boykin, Carswell; Cole, 36th; Collier, Harrell; Hutcheson; Johnson; Knight; Knox; Maddox; Memory; Middleton; Morgan; Foye; McGregor; Norman; Perkins; Ricketson; Rountree; Wilkinson; total—20.

Those voting against the bill follow:

Andrews; Bell; Carlisle; Carr; Clary; Clements; Clifton; Cole, 42d; De La Perriere; Dixon; Foster; Hayes; Hendrix; Hughes; Luttrell; Matthews; Miller; McKenzie; Neal; Owens Peebles; Pickren; Pruett; Sapp; Stevens; Thompson; Welborn; Williams; total—28.

Classification Tax Substitute.

The senate Saturday afternoon adopted a substitute for the house classification tax bill, which proposed to classify all property, realty, personalty and intangible property, for taxation at varying rates.

The senate substitute proposes to classify all intangible property for taxation, but it would leave real and personal property under the present ad valorem tax system.

Only intangibles are affected by the

LAST OF SUMMER WEATHER SEEN

Breaking of Recent Heat Wave Ushers In Cooler Weather Period, Says Forecaster.

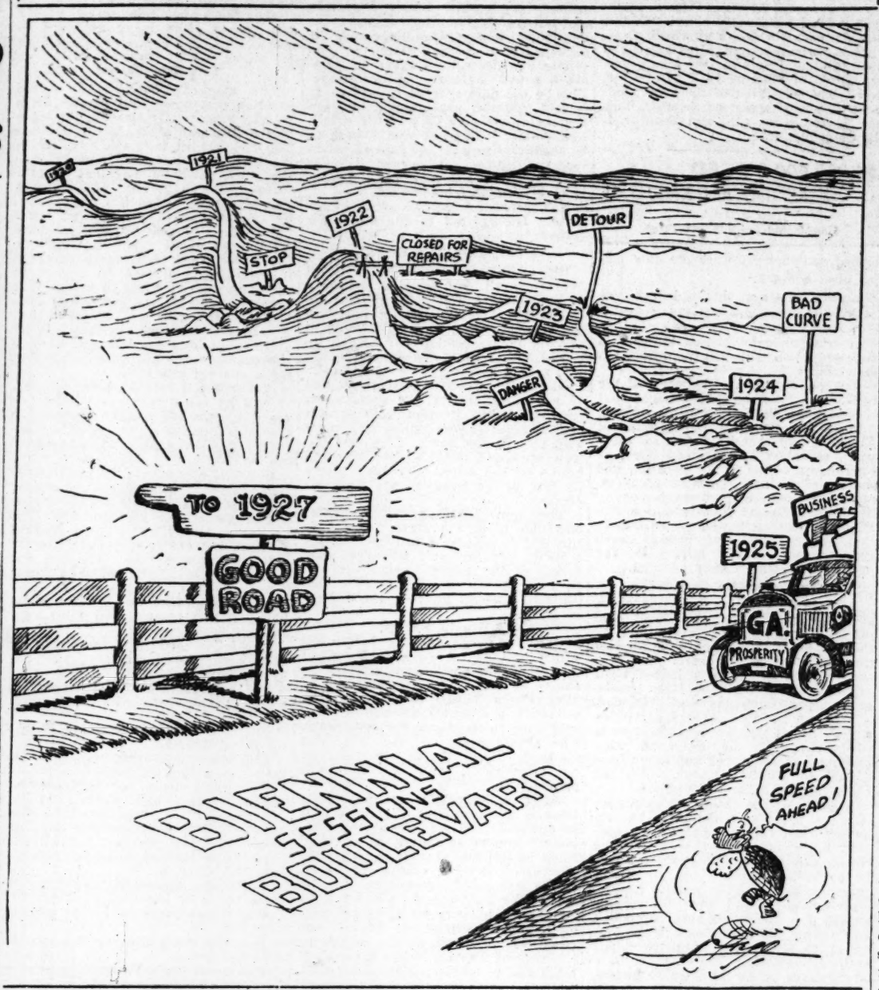

Moderate weather is forecast in Atlanta for the rest of the summer, according to C. F. von Herrman, in charge of the local branch of the weather bureau. In other words he believes that Atlanta weather is going to be the ordinary Atlanta variety—that of the summer resort.

The rout of the heat wave which had the city gasping during the first part of last week was completed Saturday, Mr. von Herrmann said, by cooling breezes. Bright skies and lack of clouds had little luck in running the mercury upward.

Cool breezes, said the forecaster, may be expected today and a range in temperature similar to that experienced Saturday. There may be a recurrence of warm weather early this week, but no such stupefying temperatures as those of last week are in prospect.

The low point of the day Saturday was registered at 68 and the top figure was 85.

GUARDS PROTECT MAN WHO FEARS BLACKMAIL PLOT

Rich Collar Manufacturer Says New York Banker Behind Plan To Defame His Character.

Freehold, N. J., August 22.—(AP)—A cordon of guards tonight was placed around the home at Eatontown of Max Phillips, wealthy collar manufacturer, to prevent attacks he said he feared on his life. Mr. Phillips tonight said that an unnamed New York banker had woven around him a plot to defame his character in connection with which three women and a man have been arrested.

Hattie Hager and Mrs. Anita Berg, the latter of whom claimed to be Countess de y Bouky, of the former Russian nobility, were two of the three women arrested, confessing today to Monmouth county police their part in the affair. They said they had plotted with Beatrice Johnston, of Rutherford, N. J., the third woman arrested, to make Phillips violate the Mann act.

All three of the women were released today in $10,000 bail on charges of conspiracy. Henry L. Berg, said to be Mrs. Berg's husband, was freed in $5,000 bail on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Officer Sleeps in Room.

Since the arrests Phillips has made elaborate plans for his protection at Eatontown, where he lives alone in a palatial residence. It was made known today that he had arranged to have a private detective sleep in his room.

"My life is in constant danger," the collar manufacturer said. "I have been shadowed by detectives every minute for two months. The four persons arrested are only a small part of the gang that is trying to defame me. There will be startling disclosures within a week.

"One of them will be the name of a prominent New York banker, in whose Manhattan home this plot against me was framed."

Promises Other Arrests.

Mr. Phillips' statement was supported by Detective Jacob Rue of the Monmouth county police, who said that he expected a number of arrests soon, including those of several prominent New York men.

Mrs. Berg told police that the plan was to get Phillips aboard a yacht

TOURIST TRAVEL BY AUTO TO SET NEW HIGH MARK

Washington, August 22.—Tourist travel this year may reach the highest peak since the automobile was invented.

More than half of the 1,000,000 who visited the national parks up to the end of July, traveled in automobiles, according to the interior department. The department estimated that before the year is over more than 2,000,000 tourists will have viewed the parks. The two heaviest months for tourists are August and September.

The increase in the number of automobiles owned by American families is said to have been a great factor in the rise in visitors. Also, camping conveniences and roads have been improved.

Many Important Measures Passed by 1925 Assembly

The first biennial legislative session of 60 days, which came to a close at midnight Saturday night—according to official clocks in the house and senate—was featured by passage of a number of constructive measures and defeat of many that attracted state-wide attention.

The assembly started its session with recommendation of Governor Clifford Walker for adoption of the following program: A complete tax reform, the children's code commission bills, proposals for bond issues or other methods of building the state system of permanent highways, the state port bill and others. His tax reform program included proposed constitutional amendments to empower the state to levy a classification tax on intangible properties and an income tax.

Bills Passed.

The following important measures were adopted during the course of the session:

Repeal of the state inheritance tax.

A bill providing for $4,000,000 scrip to pay back pensions.

The Atlanta viaducts resolution. This gives authority to the city of Atlanta to build two viaducts over the state-owned W. & A. railroad at Pryor street and Central avenue. It was sponsored by Fulton and DeKalb county delegations.

The motor vehicle registration and title act by Senator Carl N. Guess.

The gasoline consumers' bill, designed to halt wholesale shipments of "bootleg" gasoline which evades payment of the state tax.

Billiard Room Regulations.

A bill regulating operation of public billiard rooms in the state. Among other features, it makes it unlawful for any but an American citizen to operate a billiard room in the state.

A bill authorizing manufacture of ethyl alcohol out of sawdust, chips and other materials. Senator Pickren was the author, while Representative Mann was author of an identical bill in the house, tabled when the senate measure passed first.

A bill to prohibit operation of public dance halls on Sundays. Representative Marion Peacock, of Laurens, was the author.

A bill for inspection and standardization of all high schools in the state, under direction of the state board of eduction. Senator Miller was author of this measure.

A bill authorizing advances on crops by executing bills of sale for the crops. Senators Moye and Bell were joint authors.

Railroad Crossing Bill.

A bill requiring motorists to come to a full stop before crossing railroad grade crossings. The bill provides for designation of each crossing as "safe" or "unsafe," and makes it illegal to cross an "unsafe" crossing without first coming to a full stop.

A bill making army reserve officers eligible to hold civil office.

A bill establishing a state real estate board to have authority over real estate agents in the larger cities

A bill making the United States naval store standards the standards for this state.

Bar Negro Politicians.

A bill intended to keep the negro out of politics in Georgia particularly intended to remove the negro out of the republican party in this state.

The forestry bill, creating a state forestry board, so that the state may get federal forestry funds.

A bill creating a commission to purchase the present residence occupied by the governor as a permanent gover nor's mansion.

A permissive act allowing counties to exempt new industries from taxation for five years. This simply makes a constitutional amendment to this effect, ratified last year, effective in counties which desire, without having to pass special local bill.

Bill increasing state gasoline tax to a total of four cents and appropriating the additional half-cent to the highway department.

Bills Defeated.

Important measures which met defeat either through actual vote, failure in committees, tabling or failure to get in the calendar, were:

The income tax bills. In the house their defeat was attributed chiefly to a split in the ranks of the income tax supporters themselves, one faction desiring to abolish the ad valorem tax, while the other did not approve this. An attempt to reach a compromise and bring another income tax measure up for further consideration failed when the rules committee voted to keep it off the calendar.

The $15,000,000 bond issue for the educational institutions, another proposal backed by the governor. This was a senate bill and was killed there, never coming before the house.

The highway bond issue plan, which never came before the house, the bill being defeated in senate committee. This was a proposal for $70,000,000 in bonds. Two bills were passed, however, which will provide more money for roads, one being the measure increasing the gasoline tax to 4 cents, a half-cent increase, and the other the bill to place the gasoline tax levy on all consumers, including wholesale purchasers who hitherto have escaped by buying by the tank car outside of the state.

The Hughes county proposal, which would have added to the state its 161st county.

Constitutional Convention.

The constitutional convention proposal, which met double defeat, a house bill being adversely reported by committee and a senate bill meeting defeat on the floor of the upper house.

The session in the house was featured by attacks on the department of agriculture and its head, Commissioner J. J. Brown. The anti-Brown faction charged that the department was being used as a "political machine," and, gaining strength as the session progressed, they scored victory after victory in their fight against the department.

The climax came, however, in the defeat in the senate Saturday of the distillation test bill, which proposed to reduce the number of oil inspectors operating under the department from 186 to 6.

The state port bill.

The forestry contract bill, which proposed to encourage timber crops by granting favorable taxation rates.

The anti-pistol bill, a proposed amendment to the constitution to authorize the legislature to regulate the character of arms that may be borne.

The bill which sought to repeal the tobacco stamp tax, substituting a dealers' tax.

The search and seizure bill.

A measure which sought to abolish the Tenth District A. & M. schools, which failed to reach the house floor.

Local Legislation.

A constitutional amendment to allow municipalities and counties to pass their own local legislation.

A bill requiring all peace officers in the state to wear badges in plain view at all times while on duty.

The bill extending terms of the governor and members of the legislature to four years.

The measure to prohibit women from working at night in industries.

A bill to create a series of highway districts as bodies corporate. This was twice defeated in the senate.

A bill proposing to increase the legal speed limit for automobiles from 30 to 40 miles an hour outside of incorporated towns and cities.

EXTRA SESSION LOOMS AS HOUSES DISAGREE ON FINANCE MEASURE

WOMEN SEE MAN SLASHED TO DEATH IN TROLLEY FIGHT

A. W. Mullins Is Killed Almost Instantly on Ponce de Leon Avenue Street Car.

C. B. SMITH JAILED ON MURDER CHARGE

Conductor Admits Fight With Mullins But Denies Stabbing—Motorman Also Held.

His neck half severed and his heart pierced by a knife, A. W. Mullins, of Marietta, manager of a riding academy on Ponce de Leon avenue, was killed almost instantly in a quarrel on an inbound Ponce de Leon avenue street car about 9 o'clock Saturday night. C. B. Smith, 47, of 303 Lucile avenue, conductor of the car on which Mullins was riding, was arrested on charges of murder and suspicion, and C. G. Churchill, motorman, was arrested on a charge of suspicion. Detective Sergeant Robert Waggoner, who reached Kennesaw and Ponce de Leon avenues on an outbound car shortly after the killing, made the arrests.

Mullins, who was attired in riding costume, without any cards or other marks of identity on his person, was unidentified for several hours. Detective Lieutenant W. H. Andrews finally established his identity.

Smith Tells Story.

Only Smith's story of what took place on the car before the cutting was available to police Saturday night, and both he and Churchill denied inflicting the fatal wounds or having any knowledge of who did inflict them. At police station Smith's pockets yielded a small knife, which officers said could not have been used with such deadly effect as had the weapon which caused Mullins' death.

"This man got on my car at Spiller's park with a boy," said Smith. "He was cursing and I told him to shut up, as there were women on the car. He told me it was none of my business what he said, and continued. I offered him back his fare and told him he would have to leave the car, but he advanced and struck at me and reached toward his pocket. I reached behind for something to defend myself and he grabbed me. I hit him with a bar. I do not know who cut him or how it happened."

From Churchill it was learned that he had opened the front door of the car and walked to the rear, but he said that he did not reach the back platform before Mullins had fallen dead.

The car stopped after the stabbing and Mullins was placed in an automobile belonging to Frank Kaye, Jr., of 277 Briarcliff road. R. S. Campbell, of the North Decatur road, also was in the automobile. These men rushed Mullins to Grady hospital, but he was dead on his arrival there. Physicians

GIRL NEAR DEATH FOLLOWING JUMP

Miss Luna Glenis Wilkes Is in Critical Condition at Grady Hospital. Fright Blamed for Act.

Jumping out of an automobile in motion, Miss Luna Glenis Wilkes, 15 years old, of 810 Marietta street, Saturday afternoon suffered injuries which probably will prove fatal, according to Grady hospital physicians.

Miss Wilkes suffered a fractured skull, severe bruises and cuts on all parts of her body, and probable internal injuries, according to physicians.

The accident occurred on Ben Hill road near the Chattahoochee river and the car from which the girl leaped was driven by Miss Pearl Smith, 19 years old, of Adamsville. Mrs. Minerva Smith and William Smith, mother and brother of Miss Smith, also were in the car at the time.

According to Miss Smith, Miss Wilkes was on the back seat with her mother at the time she jumped. "My brother had been driving," she stated, "and had just turned the wheel over to me. As I changed seats with him, the car made a sudden lurch. This probably frightened Miss Wilkes, causing her to think I had lost control. Without saying a word she opened the door and leaped out."

Miss Wilkes was on her way to the Train Swindle Victims Claim $10,000 Loss

Countrywide Search Launched for Stewart Donnelly and C. L. McLeod.

As Fulton county authorities Saturday widened their search for Stewart Donnelly, former prize fighter of Indianapolis, and C. L. McLeod, indicted Friday on two counts charging larceny after trust and vagrancy in connection with a number of railway train swindles, additional complaints were lodged against the two men sought and against Jack Lance, who is now held at Fulton Tower under bonds aggregating $10,700.

The total now claimed by alleged victims of "fixed" card games is about $10,000, according to Bert Donaldson, special investigator of Solicitor General John Boykin's office. Other victims are expected to file complaints before the case comes to trial.

Atlanta and Fulton county officials Friday began an investigation to ascertain where Donnelly obtained the imported perfumes found in his effects and valued at about $800. Officers in Indianapolis, Donnelly's for-

BORAH INDICATES HE WILL OPPOSE DEBT SETTLEMENT

Wires Smoot Belgian Negotiations Are Almost Universally Criticised and Cannot Be Defended

Washington, August 22.—(AP)—Senator Borah, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, has wired Senator Smoot, of Utah, that the Belgian debt settlement is almost universally criticised, "and that it cannot be defended if it is to serve as a precedent for funding other foreign obligations."

Senator Smoot, in reply, emphasized that the Belgian agreement signed here last Tuesday, was not to be construed as a precedent for future settlements, and added that he could convince the committee chairman that it was the "best settlement under Belgium's present condition."

Senator Borah's telegram, under date of August 20, made public tonight, follows:

"If there was any reason peculiar to Belgium why this settlement was made, it should be stated to the public. It should also be stated that this is no precedent for other settlements. Pardon this suggestion, but this settlement is almost universally criticised, and if it is to serve as a precedent, it cannot be defended."

Reply Made by Smoot.

The reply of Senator Smoot, who is a member of the American debt commission, read:

"Reasons for special terms of settlement given Belgium were issued by our commission and published in all eastern papers. Settlement approved by press. Report stressed the point that the debt settlement is no precedent for other settlements. Think I can convince you it was best settlement under Belgium's present condition."

The terms under which Belgium is to pay back her war and post-war debts to the United States provide for total remission of intreest on the $171,780,000 loaned during the war, and for partial remission of the interest on the $246,000,000 borrowed by Belgium after the armistice. She is given 62 years in which to complete her payments.

The settlement was described by the American commission members as a recognition by the United States of "a weighty moral obligation," as a result of assurances given Belgium by President Wilson at the time of the Versailles peace conference.

Although the agreement must be

MONARCH OF SPAIN ADMITS BUSINESS MIGHT BE BETTER

Paris, August 22.—(AP)—Recently, says the Cri de Paris, a tall man, elegantly dressed, swung himself upon the platform of a street car in Bordeaux and took out a cigarette. His lighter failed to work, whereupon a fellow passenger, politely, gave him a light from his own cigarette. Then the two men entered into conversation on the perennial topic, the high cost of living.

"I suppose you are a manufacturer?" said the workman.

"No, I have no business," replied the other. "I have an old house, which descends from father to son."

"Things are going well?" asked the workman.

"Why, they might go better," replied his vis-a-vis.

The tall man, says the Cri de Paris, was Alfonso XIII, king of Spain.

MANY MEMBERS REFUSE TO PASS LAWS ON SUNDAY

Representative Malone Appeals to Entire House To Quit Work and To Leave State Capitol.

BATTLE CONTINUES ON MARKET BUREAU

Conference Committees Are Kept Busy Trying To Iron Out Differences Over Brown.

COMPROMISE REACHED.

The house and senate joint conference committee on the classification tax bill has reached a compromise on the senate substitute. Seven of the eight conferees agreed to the compromise, Representative Bussey dissenting. The compromise would provide a levy of six mills whereas the senate substitute would provide a levy of ten mills. The original house bill provided a levy of five mills.

With a second conference committee toiling away in an effort to iron out differences between the house of representatives and the state senate over items in the general appropriations bill, the situation with reference to an extra session was fraught with extreme gravity at 1 o'clock this morning.

The two houses were devoting their attention to comparatively minor legislation at that hour, with hands of the official legislative clocks turned back.

Led by Malone, of Bibb; Logan, of Banks; Mrs. Napier, of Bibb, and a number of others, a large number of members of the house left the capitol just before midnight determined to enact no legislation on Sunday.

Urge Sunday Observance.

Representative Malone appealed on the floor for the entire membership to leave before the advent of Sunday, and Mrs. Napier declared she would not stay after midnight.

Logan, of Banks, introduced a resolution providing for sine die adjournment at midnight regardless of whether the vital appropriations bill was passed, and Milner, of Dodge, introduced a resolution calling for immediate sine die adjournment.

Harris, of Jefferson, chairman of the ways and means committee, in reply appealed to the members to remain in their seats and finish the state's business without making an extra session necessary.

"It's a case of the ox in the ditch," he shouted.

On roll call, Milner's resolution to adjourn sine die was lost 59 to 51.

However, a large percentage of the house had left, and the same situation existed in the senate.

The first conference committee over differences in the appropriations act

Mother in Motor Launch Hunts Her Aviator-Son

:: SEARCH FOR TRIO MISSING THREE WEEKS ::

Chicago, August 22.—While automobile search parties tour the highways that bend about the southern tip of Lake Michigan, and men afoot tramp the lonely reaches of the Indiana sand dunes, Mrs. A. Coutelier has begun a motor boat cruise of the lake shore in the hope of finding trace of her aviator son, Eugene, who has been missing for three weeks.

Accompanied by two other young airmen Young Coutelier set out across Lake Michigan for Detroit the last week in July. The party has not been heard from since.

At first, little anxiety was expressed as Coutelier and his companions, Morris Gathercoal and Earl Banker, had done much stunt flying at country fairs, and it was thought possible that they might have altered their course for some such exhibition flying. For the past week, however, a vigorous search has been under way.

In a launch provisioned for four days Mrs. Coutelier will skirt the lake shore, putting in at landings to question campers. Meanwhile a report that an airplane was seen to fall in the sand dunes on July 29, has caused a search inland.

"I am convinced that they are alive and will be restored to us," declares Dr. E. M. Gathercoal, father of one of the airmen. "The boys may have had trouble. They may be in a hospital somewhere. But it is equally possible that they changed their plan of going just to Detroit and have traveled farther, perhaps to the Atlantic coast, not realizing the worry their absence is bringing to their perents."

EAT PIES FIRST FOR FOOD VALUE, IS EXPERT'S ADVICE

Chicago, August 22.—(AP)—Pie is a real food. Six months experimenting with rats has proven it, R. H. Shaw, nutrition expert for the American Baking association, announced today.

So highly does he regard pie as food, Mr. Shaw suggests that its place on the dinner bill is well forward. When pie is eaten for dessert, he said, the diner has had as much food as his body requires and does not get the good that abounds in pie. He thinks pie should precede other dishes.

Two groups of rats were used in the tests. One was fed custard pie and the other rice, potatoes, cabbage, spinach and bread. The pie-fed rats, Shaw said, gained weight more rapidly than the others.

Custard, pumpkin, squash and sweet potato pies head Mr. Shaw's list. Apple pie is low in protein, but is an excellent source of heat and energy and has slightly more value, pound for pound, than wheat bread.

House Burned, Police Hunt J. T. Weems

A mother and her three small children are homeless as the result of a fire that gutted the little four-room frame dwelling at 900 South Moreland avenue shortly after 2 o'clock Saturday morning, and the husband and father is being hunted by detectives in order to question him about the blaze. The residence was occupied by J. T. Weems, night watchman, and his family.

The flames started in a back room, according to detectives, and quickly enveloped the entire house, which crumbled to the ground as fire-fighters arrived. Weems was at home when the fire broke out, but others of the family were away, officers stated.

Police Investigating.

The investigation, which was begun on complaint of several persons living in the vicinity of the Weems home, is in charge of Lieut. T. O. Sturdivant, of the plain clothes department, and Detective John C. Davis. They are being assisted by Detectives J. Hiram Davis and L. H. Satterfield.

Shortly after noon Saturday Lieutenant Sturdivant and Officer Davis filed with Captain A. J. Holcombe, head of the plainclothes department, a written statement in which they expressed the belief that the little home was set afire.

"We gathered information which indicated that Weems and his wife are on the verge of separating and that he made certain remarks to her and to others showing that he intended that his wife and the children should suffer as a result," said the detectives.

"Further, we can show that he got excused from working Friday night, and that all of his belongings, which were neatly packed in a trunk, were saved, although his wife's clothing and that of the children were destroyed."

Report of Detectives.

The full report of the detectives, as filed with Captain Holcombe, is as follows:

"We went to 900 South Moreland avenue and investigated the fire which destroyed the house and contents. The house was occupied by J. T. Weems, white, and the best information we could learn, Weems burned the house. We talked with Mrs. Weems, who gave us good circumstantial evidence. Also neighbors are of the same opinion."

Detective Davis stated that they had been told that Weems removed a coop of chickens from the yard of the home. "It seemed he expected something to happen and had all the fowls cooped up and ready to be moved," Officer Davis said.

EXTRA SESSION LOOMS AS HOUSES DISAGREE succeeded in ironing out all differences except in the case of the bitterly-fought appropriation for the bureau of markets, the salary of the chief oil inspector and his chief clerk, and two others. It failed to proceed any further, and the second committee was named and was at work as this edition of The Constitution went to press.

Appropriations Changes.

Under the appropriations bill as first passed by the house the appropriations for 1926 aggregated $11,221,438.42 and with the Western and Atlantic rental notes added this would make a total of $11,561,438.42. For 1927 the house bill, as originally adopted, carried appropriations of $10,837,938.42 with no Western and Atlantic rentals available.

As originally passed in the house the appropriations bill, according to the estimated revenue for 1926 would leave a deficit of $644,060.98 and for 1927 a deficit of $1,087,227.98.

When this house bill was sent to the senate that body added appropriations for 1926 amounting to $399,269 and for 1927 amounting to $506,069. These additions would make the grand total deficit for 1926 of $1,043,329.98 and for 1927 of $1,593,296.96. The total deficit for the two years in the house bill amounts to $1,731,288.96 while the additions of the senate for the two years brings the total deficit faced for the two years of 1926 and 1927 up to $2,636,626.96.

Agree on Twenty-two Items.

The first conference committee reported at 9 o'clock Saturday night that it had reached an agreement on 22 of the 26 house items amended by the senate, but that it was deadlocked on the other four. These were the item of $50,000 annually for the bureau of markets, increased by the senate to its old figure of $100,000; the salary of $3,000 for the chief oil inspector and $1,800 for his chief clerk, deleted by the house; the maintenance of district A. & M. schools, increased from $15,000 to $25,000 annually by the senate, and the Augusta medical college appropriation, increased from $35,000 annually to $35,000 in 1926 and $55,000 in 1927.

In reading the report of the committee to the house, Milner, of Dodge, announced that this would cut off $228,000 annually from the senate's increases, leaving the 1926 deficit at $815,000 and the 1927 deficit $1,265,000.

Wilhoit, of Warren, moved to disagree with the committee report, and another house member moved to agree.

At this point, Milner moved to table the appropriations bill, which action would make an extra session absolutely necessary.

Motion to Table Beaten.

The motion to table was defeated on roll call by vote of 103 to 61. Barrett, of Stephens, chairman of the appropriations committee, then moved that the house agree to its conference committee's report, making an eloquent plea for an immediate settling of business and an orderly adjournment.

"I charge that there is a deliberate attempt on the part of a group of mean, selfish little men in this house to force the expense and trouble of an extra session on the state," he declared. "I appeal to you as public servants and as workers for the good of the state to refrain from mixing men and measures, to arise above personalities and to agree with this report. If you do, we will have taken a great step toward final settlement of the differences between this house and the senate."

Agreement Defeated.

The vote to agree with the conference committee report was defeated 84 to 80 after a roll call lasting over an hour, many members explaining their vote. Many appealed for composing of differences and adjournment without necessity of an extra session, while others denounced the senate and the agricultural department and laid the blame for the crisis at the door of the upper house.

The speaker immediately appointed a second conference committee composed of Culpepper, of Fayette; Hooper, of Fulton, and Wilhoit, of Warren, to meet with the senate conferes—Sapp, of the 43rd, Hughes, of the 21st, and Picken, of the 4th.

This joint committee went into conference at 11:15 o'clock.

On motion of Barrett, of Stephens, chairman of the house appropriations committee, the house started the day Saturday by refusing to concur in amendments tacked by the senate onto the appropriations act. The speaker appointed Barrett, Milner, of Dodge, and Vaughn, of Rockdale, as a conference committee to attempt to iron out the differences between the two houses of the legislature on this measure.

Senate Disagrees.

Voting to insist upon its 26 amendments to the general appropriations bill, the senate Saturday morning placed itself in direct opposition to the wishes of the house and necessitated the calling of the first conference committee of the day. The increases covered by senate amendments to the fund bill involve about $800,000 per annum over house appropriations.

The conference committee appointed by President Ennis for the senate was composed of Senator H. P. DeLaPerriere, 33d, chairman of the senate appropriations committee; Senator Walter A. Hendrix, 35th, and Senator J. B. Clements, 45th.

$4,000,000 VOTED FOR BACK PENSIONS

tioned amendments were the only major ones adopted.

Bussey, of Crisp, during lengthy debate on the measure, offered a substitute providing for a highway commission of six members, each member to represent two adjacent congressional districts.

Turner, of Brooks, chairman of the house highways committee, urged that personalities be forgotten in disposition of the measure, and Stovall, of Elbert, urged that no action on highways be taken at present. Beck, of Carroll, urged his own substitute, and Smith, of Talbot, appealed for complete supremacy of highway board authority. Kelly, of Gwinnett, and McWhorter, of Oglethorpe, joined him in this plea. Daniel, of Troup, urged the original senate bill with the amendments which were adopted.

Rules Committee Overridden.

After a spectacular fight the house overrode the rules committee and placed the Confederate script bill on the calendar. This was done on motion of Lanier, of Columbia. The first time it was proposed it lacked eight votes of passage, but on later consideration the committee was overruled.

The two houses Saturday agreed on a bill providing for an increase in the salary of the assistant commissioner of commerce and labor from $1,800 to $2,400 a year. W. E. Christie now holds the position.

Another of the children's code commission bills was defeated by the house, when the bill making non-support by a father of his children a continuous felony and providing that he could be sentenced to the chaingang on continuous refusal to pay for their support, and that the county should pay the dependants 50 cents a day during the father's imprisonment, failed to secure the requisite constitutional majority. The vote was 87 to 57 in favor of the bill, which already had passed the senate.

Game Law Amended.

A bill amending the state game and fish laws, and increasing the salary of the commissioner of game and fish by $400 a year, was passed unanimously, the vote being 137 to 0. This bill had also already passed the senate and now only requires the governor's signature.

A bill allowing the creation of credit unions, passed by the senate, was passed by the house by vote of 116 to 8.

A senate bill designed to prevent jewelry auctions and other auctions by itinerant merchants was passed, 132 to 19.

Another senate bill requiring referendum vote on charter changes in cities of less than 200,000 population was passed, 114 to 8.

J. L. Osburn Injured.

J. L. Osburn, 63, of 67 Farrington street, is in the Grady hospital suffering from a broken left leg as the result of being struck by an automobile Saturday afternoon at the corner of Mitchell and Whitehall streets.

"I was crossing Mitchell," Osburn stated, "when I was hit by a car going west. The driver stopped his car and offered every assistance possible. I didn't ask him his name. He told me but I have forgotten it. The police investigated the case and I suppose they learned his name."

The accident occurred about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and late Saturday night no report had been filed at police station.

Boy on Wheel Hurt.

Will Mullinax, who lives on Bellwood avenue, Saturday afternoon suffered bruises and lacerations about the body when he was knocked from his bicycle at the corner of Marietta street and Bellwood avenue by an automobile driven by W. A. Hester, of 887 Marietta street, according to police reports.

Hester stopped his car immediately, picked up the injured youth and carried him to the Mullinax home. Hester then went to police headquarters where he reported the accident to Captain J. L. Gordon.

Hester stated that he was going north on Marietta street and as he drove up to southbound street car the youth darted from behind the car on his bicycle directly in the path of his machine. No case was made against Hester. The accident was said to have been unavoidable.

who examined the body found that the jugular vein had been severed by a powerful stroke which had almost severed the neck and that Mullins' heart had been pierced.

Police were unable to locate any person who had seen enough of the fight to say definitely how the fatal wounds were inflicted. They returned to the scene of the killing to make a search for the knife used, and also were hunting for the man who boarded the car with the victim.

Police were told that the boy who got on the car with Mullins was Marion Baker, 14 years of age, who worked with Mullins at the riding academy. Lieutenant W. H. Andrews was told that Baker had stated that Motorman Churchill did the stabbing.

Lieutenant Andrews left a note at police station for Captain A. J. Holcombe asking him to have the youth interviewed when he reported for work at the academy at 7 o'clock this morning.

senate substitute to the house classification tax bill, and the tax rate on intangibles is cut from the house provision of 10 mills to 5 mills, half of which is to go to the state and the other 2½ mills to counties, cities and school districts.

Intangible properties such as money, stocks and bonds, accounts and bills receivable, and any other evidences of debt and other choses in action, are to be segregated by the senate substitute, and taxed at classified rates, the rates subject to action by the next general assembly. It is said that the measure will increase the state's revenue by at least a million dollars. The bill would have to be submitted to a referendum of voters for ratification. Governor Walker sponsored the bill and recommended it in his inaugural address.

The senate substitute was immediately transmitted to the house for action.

Inheritance Tax Repeal.

Signature of Governor Clifford Walker is all that remains necessary to strike from the Georgia statute books the state inheritance law, following the senate's action Saturday in passing the house bill calling for its repeal. With little discussion the bill was passed by a majority of 42 to 3.

Action in passage two weeks ago of a similar bill by the senate was rescinded when it was pointed out that revenue-raising measures must originate in the house. The new bill was introduced in the proper body and action of the senate Saturday places its fate in the hands of the chief executive.

The approximate annual revenue of $300,000 from the state inheritance tax will be met by a provision of the federal government whereby one-fourth of the federal income tax will be returned to the state. This sum otherwise would go into the federal treasury.

Raise in Salary.

The senate passed the house bill which amends the state banking act and added an amendment raising the salary of the state superintendent of banks from $6,000 to $7,500. The bill with the senate amendment was sent back to the house for conference. The senate vote on the bill was 27 to 1. Later the senate withdrew its amendment, and the bill was passed.

After a hot fight on the senate floor a bill providing that attorneys be authorized to read decisions of appellate courts to juries in criminal cases in full and discuss the decisions was defeated by a vote of 19 to 18.

The house bill proposing to increase the legal speed limit for automobiles from 30 to 40 miles per hour outside of incorporated towns and cities was defeated by the senate by the vote of 19 to 8, when Harrell, of the Twelfth, voted to indefinitely postpone it. Senators vigorously opposed the bill on the ground that it would give license to speed maniacs and would be dangerous to life and property.

The senate amended a house bill providing for sale of unclaimed feight after 30 days, the amendment providing that the sale shall take place in the home county of the consignee. The amendment was immediately sent to the house for concurrence. The senate later withdrew its amendment, and the measure was passed.

The senate amended a house bill providing that men who have served 10 years in the national guard may be retired, the amendment giving credit on the 10-year service to service in the world war. The bill was then sent to the house for concurrence.

Resolutions were adopted requesting President Howard Ennis to supply the senate with a portrait of himself for the senate chamber wall; thanking the press of the state for its impartial handling of legislative news, and thanking Atlanta and its theaters and places of amusement for their hospitality.

A deficiency appropriation of $25,000 for public buildings and grounds was adopted after being amended to carry an additional $2,500 to pay for the amplifier in the house.

Entomology Appropriation.

The senate voted to insist strongly on its amendment to the house $30,000 deficiency appropriation to the board of entomology, which amendment provided that none of the fund be used as a revolving fund for purchase of calcium arsenate. This action followed a heated attack on Ira Williams, of the board of entomology, by President Ennis, who took the floor of the senate as member from the 20th district.

President Ennis charged that Mr. Williams had abused his trust of state funds by using them to his private interest. He charged Williams with "speculating" in arsenate and said he had stored 30 cars and borrowed $30,000 on their contents in his own name. He further said Mr. Williams had contracted with an Atlanta concern for 2,000,000 pounds of the weevil poison and had not fulfilled his contract, thus injuring state credit. He also charged that Mr. Williams had bought arsenate at $7.85 and sold it to farmer at $8.50 instead of at cost, and had sold arsenate with a density of 77 that should have shown a test of 90.

Knight, of the 6th, replied and declared that the department should not be punished even if one of its employees was to be blamed. He said the revolving fund had broken the "calcium arsenate trust's" plans and had saved four cents a pound to farmers. He appealed for its continuance to "prevent dealers from banding together to increase the price."

Report Adopted.

The report of a conference committee on this bill, which committee agreed with the senate amendment providing that none of the fund be used as a revolving fund for purchase of calcium arsenate.

The senate passed the house bill amending the state code relative to bonds of superintendents of schools to make these bonds approved surety bonds.

The racial integrity bill was defeated in the senate by vote of 16 to 7.

The senate agreed in a house amendment to the senate bill providing for an assistant state school auditor, the amendment providing that this assistant shall audit common and high schools and the state auditor shall audit the university and its branches.

The house bill providing for amendment of charters of street railway companies to allow them to own and operate motor busses was first indefinitely tabled, then taken off the table and passed after being amended to give control of the busses affected to the public service commission.

Gas Tax Passed.

The muchly-amended and argued gasoline consumers' bill finally made its way successfully through the legislature Saturday night. It was a house bill designed to halt the practice of importing wholesale shipments into the state without payment of the three and a half cent gasoline tax. Passed by the house, it was amended by the senate to exempt wholesale users of crude gasoline, not intended for use as motor fuel. Returned to the house, that body again amended it requiring railroads to report to the comptroller-general in writing the number, content, consignee and content of tank cars. The senate late Saturday concurred in this latter amendment, and the bill now goes to the governor for his signature before being enacted into law.

A house bill providing for a referendum by counties as to whether or not they wanted county commission manager forms of government was defeated by the senate by a vote of 19 to 14.

One-half cent was added to the gasoline tax of 3½ cents when the senate passed a house bill which now goes to the governor for his signature. The consumer already was being charged 4 cents, the dealer keeping the extra half cent, it was said. The bill was designed to bring the extra half cent into the state treasury where the consumer intended it to go. The extra half-cent levy revenue will go to highways.

The following special appropriation bills were passed Saturday morning by the senate:

For construction of a cold storage plant at the state sanitarium, Milledgeville, $30,000.

For the Georgia Training School for Boys, $16,500.

Deficiency appropriation for the state sanitarium, $250,000.

For construction of a fence between Georgia and Florida in the counties of Clinch, Charlton, Lowndes, Brooks, Thomas, Grady and Decatur, $100,000, to prevent tick-infested cattle from Florida coming across the line into Georgia.

Deficiency appropriation for the state board of entomology, $30,000.

For maintenance of public schools, $325,000.

For the 12th district A. and M. school, $10,000.

For the Georgia Woman's college at Valdosta, $15,000.

For the academy for the blind, $10,000.

For repairs to the state capitol, $75,000.

For furniture for the governor's mansion, $5,000.

Deficiency appropriation for the University of Georgia, $25,000.

Hutcheson's Letter.

With reference to the recent highway investigation, Senator J. R. Hutcheson, chairman of the senate investigating committee, has written The Constitution a letter in which he thanks the paper for the "fair" manner in which news of the probe was handled.

The letter follows:

Editor The Constitution: I want to thank you for publishing, along with the majority report of the highway investigation, my minority report. I am sure the public has some interest in this matter and no one could understand my minority report without having its entire text. Giving so much space to this is the usual policy of The Constitution to allow its readers to judge for themselves the acts and conduct of persons who happen to be involved in the news it gives to the public. We naturally lean in political matters away from those who have been our lifelong "political enemies," but the fair-minded public is very much inclined to be fairer with us than the trained partisan.

This investigation has been an unusual one, in that it has gone on without any authority except to sit and depend upon volunteers. There could be much truthfully said that perhaps is best not said. Those who hasten to give the entire matter a partisan construction know better than the general public that this investigation involves more than those whose names have become familiar to the public.

It is to be hoped that never again in Georgia will there arise such a situation in any department as has arisen in the highway department, a situation that is so generally known to be "not good" and so generally accepted as one that would be expected under the circumstances. The public will not always treat lightly such a condition of affairs of state. With so many newspapers in our state and other means of keeping the public well informed, we are perfectly satisfied to trust to the future, to confidently expect that the conduct of public officials will grow better and better until we shall have better roads, a more efficient highway department and less probes.

I fully believe that this investigation has done a great deal of good. Those who have kept up with the newspaper reports of the evidence given the committee in this investigation, I feel sure, cannot but feel that my minority report has been fair and charitable to those involved.

I do sincerely trust that our highway department may never again be charged with an irregularity and that it will function perfectly, and that the public may restore to it that faith and confidence that its future conduct may justify.

(Signed) J. R. HUTCHESON,
Chairman Special Highway Investigation Committee.

Textile Firm Finds $600,000 Shortage; Treasurer Resigns

Boston, August 22.—(AP)—The resignation of Arthur R. Sharp, as treasurer of the Hamilton Manufacturing company, of Lowell, one of the oldest textile concerns in the New England district, and the discovery of a shortage of $600,000 quick capital of the concern, were announced tonight, by President Felix Rackemann. He asserted that an audit had shown inaccurate bookkeeping.

Mr. Rackemann stated that investigation of the books disclosed no dissipation of assets or personal gain to any one at the expense of the company while showing a debit against the company.

"There has been on stealing. We find no evidence of dissipation of funds. There was no personal gain to any one so far as we know. The president and directors have found that the company has been traveling on an inflated credit. We have borrowed more money that we ought to have borrowed."

Wigs Made of Feathers.

(From the Ohio State Journal.)

In Paris the woman who cares to be up to the minute in dress is wearing a wig made of feathers for evening affairs, the feathers being dyed to match her hair and gown in color, trimmed and fashioned in a fetching manner, the work being so skillfully done the ordinary observer has no intimation of the wig.

The feathers are taken from chickens, the short and soft feathers being particularly adapted to that use and, skillfully adapted, they give the appearance of a neat little bobbed and curled and waved dressing of the wearer's hair. Some of the wearers get a thrill of delight because of the tricks the bright lights of evening play on colors, a reddish color in fact appearing to be a light blonde, a color greatly in favor with women in the gay city. Other colors are white and the deep black has many admirers.

NEGRO "POTATO KING" DIES; WAS ONCE SLAVE

Kansas, City, August 22.—(AP)—From slavery to riches was the achievement of J. G. Groves, known as the negro potato king of Kansas, who died near Edwardsville, Kans., yesterday. He was 66 years old.

Groves was born a slave in Green county, Kentucky, in 1859. When the slaves were freed he learned to read and write and in 1879 came to Kansas, where he worked on a farm at 40 cents a day. Later the owner of the farm rented Groves ten acres of ground. At his death he owned a 523-acre farm besides 1,600 acres of wheat land.

Groves' title of "potato king" came from the success he had in raising potatoes. In one year, on 295 acres, he produced 72,150 bushels of white potatoes.

$80,000 DAMAGE CAUSED BY BLAZE

Fire which swept the plant of the Atlanta Showcase company, 10-16 Foundry street, Saturday, injuring two firemen, caused damage estimated at $80,000.

Firemen A. C. McCord and P. Hopkins, both of engine company No. 4, sustained minor injuries. McCord was overcome by smoke and was sent to Grady hospital for treatment. Hopkins was burned slightly about the shoulders and was treated at a neighboring drug store.

The blaze originated in the shavings room in the rear of the plant and spread rapidly before an alarm could be sounded and the fire department called. Firefighters were hindered in their work by three breaks in the hose while the blaze spread, fanned by a high wind.

Two other establishments caught fire before the blaze was controlled. They are the Dixie Government store, 245 Marietta street, and the store of J. E. Miller, 251 Marietta street. Flames in both places were extinguished without material damage.

The fire was watched by about 5,000 spectators while traffic was blocked for an hour.

Chief W. B. Cody directed work of the firemen personally while a general alarm from headquarters brought every available apparatus into action.

ROTARY MEMBERS TO BE ENTERTAINED AT WHITE PLANT

W. H. White, Jr., president of the White Provision company, will entertain the Atlanta Rotary club Tuesday at the White plant, which meeting takes the place of the usual Capital City club gathering.

An elaborate luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock and following this, guests will be taken for a tour of the entire plant and be shown the advance number of the new fleet of 16 company-owned refrigerator cars, which are to be put into service throughout the southeast.

The weekly publication of the Rotary club announces the completion of plans for a picnic at Druid Hills Golf club Thursday. A golf tournament will start at 1:30 o'clock followed by a picnic supper at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

DEKALB COUNTY BOYS PLAN FAIR EXHIBITS

Decatur, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—County Agent E. P. McGee reports the enrollment of 68 boys for the club exhibits at the Southeastern fair in poultry, pigs, calves, corn and cotton.

The interest of the boys has never waned since they first planned their club work. In spite of the long dry season corn and cotton indicate good quality and sturdy growth, owing to careful following of cultural directions. In the poultry, pig and calf divisions the boys will demonstrate the efficacy of farm-grown and home-mixed feeds in securing splendid growth at a great saving over imported feeds.

Mr. McGee states that in all sections of DeKalb county there is a strong sentiment in favor of the employment of a home demonstration agent for work among the farm women and club girls.

Charlotte Ryan, Metropolitan Star Sings in Missouri

Opera lovers of Atlanta learned with friendly interest Saturday that Charlotte Ryan, of the Metropolitan Opera company, who was one of the stars in the recent season of light opera in Atlanta, will appear as one of the principals in the grand opera season which opens at St. Louis Monday. The outdoor season of grand opera in St. Louis is entirely distinct from the ten weeks' season of light opera which has just closed.

The grand opera season in St. Louis will include "Aida," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and a new American opera, "The Music Robber."

Guy Golterman, well-known director, has charge of the production. Including Miss Ryan there will be six members of the Metropolitan Opera company and seven members of the Chicago Opera company in the St. Louis productions.

Miss Ryan is a popular favorite in Atlanta. She won many friends during her appearances here in grand opera and also attained wide popularity during her engagement here in the six weeks of light opera this summer.

ENNIS TO DELIVER SPEECH ON RAISING OF HOSPITAL FLAG

J. H. Ennis, president of the Georgia state senate, will deliver the oration upon the raising of the United States flag at the Junior Order hospital, 88 Cooper street, at 4 o'clock Sunday, August 30. The general public is invited.

Music will be furnished by the Georgia Railway and Power company brass band. The committee in charge of arrangements for the occasion is composed of Carl F. Hutcheson, John J. Thomason and Gordon Smith. Vocal solos will be rendered by local talent.

The Junior Order hospital in Atlanta is the first one opened by the Junior Order United American Mechanics in the United States.

Mr. Ennis, who is a candidate to succeed Governor Walker, is a prominent member of the Junior Order, his local membership being at Hardwick in Baldwin county. He will be introduced by Carl F. Hutcheson.

Prosecution of Case Against Government Approved by Governor

The house has passed the senate bill approving employment of Judge Frank Harwell and General Clifford L. Anderson and authorizing them to file and prosecute a suit in the name of the State of Georgia against the United States for the recovery of certain cotton taxes illegally assessed against citizens of the state of Georgia.

They were employed by the governor in October, 1919, by authority of a resolution passed by the general assembly in August of that year.

The present bill authorizes and directs them to file and prosecute in the name of the State of Georgia a suit to recover these taxes as soon as congress permits filing and prosecution of this claim.

These attorneys insist that these taxes were illegally and unconstitutionally imposed by congress, and that the United States government should recognize these valid claims against it and permit a suit to be brought to recover them.

There would be many claimants for these funds throughout the state in the event that the suit is authorized and these moneys refunded, it is pointed out.

MISS DAVIDSON WRITES BEST HIGHWAY ESSAY

Miss Jessie Davidson, of Cleveland, Ga., an employee of the Georgia Railway and Power company, has been declared the winner of the $25 gold prize for the best essay written on the opening of the Georgia link of the

MISS JESSIE DAVIDSON.

Appalachain Scenic highway, from Cleveland to North Carolina line. The prize will be awarded at a celebration in Cleveland September 14, according to tentative plans.

The opening ceremonies and a large barbecue were held at Neel Gap on July 4 and the prize for the best essay on the program and features of the occasion and the meaning of the completed highway to north Georgia was offered by Marion R. Miles and J. R. Robinson, of the Atlanta Audit company, active supporters of highway improvement in Georgia.

The judges who selected Miss Davidson's essay as the best of a large number of contributions to the contest, included B. B. Fite, chairman; Mrs. C. F. Auslund, Miss Addie Kate Reid, T. S. Candler and C. R. Waldroop.

The prize-winning essay—graphically descriptive, splendidly written in continuity of thought and with an excellent expose of the advantages of the newly-opened highway—was confined to less than 2,000 words. The document is worded in the poetical phraseology of one who understands and appreciates the beauty of nature.

It opens with a vivid description of things accomplished and of dreams come true. It tells of the struggle and the achievement. It tells of the possibilities of the new highway and its significance to that section of Georgia. The theme closes with a poetical "looking back" on past dreams.

Miss Davidson is now making her home in Atlanta, living at 59 Hopkins street.

Bank Clearings Make New Record For August Week

With a total of $68,823,161.88, Atlanta's bank clearings during the past week exceeded any August week of history. In setting the new mark, last week's total was more than $3,000,000 above the $65,555,317.01 reported during the week ending August 15. Figures for the same week last year were $48,248 887.44, or a gain of more than $20,500,000.

Clearings for Saturday were $10,339,617.79, according to figures issued by the Atlanta Clearing House association, showing a substantial increase over the corresponding day last year.

With the first three weeks of this month surpassing all existing records for corresponding weeks, it appears practically certain that a new August mark will be set.

ATLANTA RETAIL MERCHANTS HOLD MEETING MONDAY

Arrangements were completed at the summer meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Retail Merchants association, held during the past week, for the first fall general membership meeting. It will be held Monday night, September 24, on the roof garden of the Cecil hotel.

Many interesting facts about Georgia and the opportunities offered in this state will be brought out, and particular attention will be paid to the indirect benefits Georgia will derive from the Florida boom.

Carson, of Atlanta, who died suddenly Saturday in Toronto, Ohio, will arrive in Atlanta this morning and will be carried to the undertaking parlors of H. M. Patterson & Son, where it will remain until funeral arrangements are completed.

The girl accompanied her parents to Toronto, where they were visiting the parents of Rev. Carson, who is pastor of Clifton Presbyterian church, of this city.

Playground Directors Will Be Honor Guests At Watermelon Cutting

City officials and all playground directors will be honor guests at a watermelon cutting and band concert to be given at Springdale playground Wednesday night, it was announced Saturday by officials of the Ninth Ward Civic league, which is sponsoring the event.

STATE SPELLING BEE WILL FEATURE FAIR

Georgia's best speller will be the title bestowed on the winner of the monster spelling bee which will be held October 10 at the Southeastern fair and a prize of $100 goes along with the title it was announced Saturday. The spelling bee, which will be the largest ever held in the south, will be open to all grammar and high school students and a big list of prizes ranging from the $100 first prize down to $7 will be given those who make the best showing.

Leading educators of the state, headed by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech; Fort E. Land, state superintendent of education, and Professor W. A. Sutton, superintendent of schools of Atlanta, will direct the contest. Mrs. Clifford Walker, of Atlanta, and W. P. Martin, of Gainesville, will be referees.

Under the rules each county may send one entry to be chosen by the county superintendent under a competitive method. The contestant may be a boy or girl.

This is one of the most novel contests ever staged at the Southeastern fair and much interest is being shown by school officials in all parts of the state.

The Mastery of Words, Book No. 2, the state text, by Sarah Louise Arnold, will be used first as a list of the words to determine Georgia's best speller, and if any contestant remains after that long list has been exhausted then the 1925 high school spelling list will be used. When the 1925 high school list of words have been through and prospective prize winners are still standing then the old reliable Blue Beck Spelling book, which has been a source of much worry to thousands of students before the present-day books came into existence, will be used as a final test.

Same fine One-Profit Coach
-at a NEW REDUCED PRICE

INCREASED volume of sales—founded on Studebaker's policies of one-profit manufacture, and no yearly models—made it possible to reduce the price of this Standard Six Coach.

Already a wonderful value—a leader of the line—the lowest priced closed car ever sold by Studebaker—its previous low price has been cut one hundred dollars.

Many of the superiorities of this one-profit Coach are hidden until revealed by thousands of miles of usage. You can't see the fine workmanship inside the engine, nor behind the durable wool upholstery—the high-grade steel — the finest northern white ash and hard maple. But here are some things that you can check against competitive cars to satisfy yourself that this is a Studebaker of the same fine quality as before the price cut—a Studebaker more up to date than the newest yearly models.

EXCESS POWER—According to rating of National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, this is the most powerful car of its size and weight.

ABUNDANT ROOM—Room to stretch your legs—room to enter or leave without disturbing occupant of folding seat.

FULL-SIZE BALLOON TIRES—For which the steering gear, fenders and even the body lines are specially designed.

AUTOMATIC SPARK CONTROL—No spark lever on steering wheel, but—

SAFETY LIGHTING CONTROL—On the steering wheel, at the driver's finger tips.

INSTRUMENTS—Including 8-day clock, gasoline gauge, speedometer, oil pressure gauge and ammeter, in single grouping under glass, on beautiful silver-faced dial.

IMPROVED ONE-PIECE WINDSHIELD—Automatic windshield cleaner, weatherproof visor, rear-view mirror, attractive cowl lights and cowl ventilator.

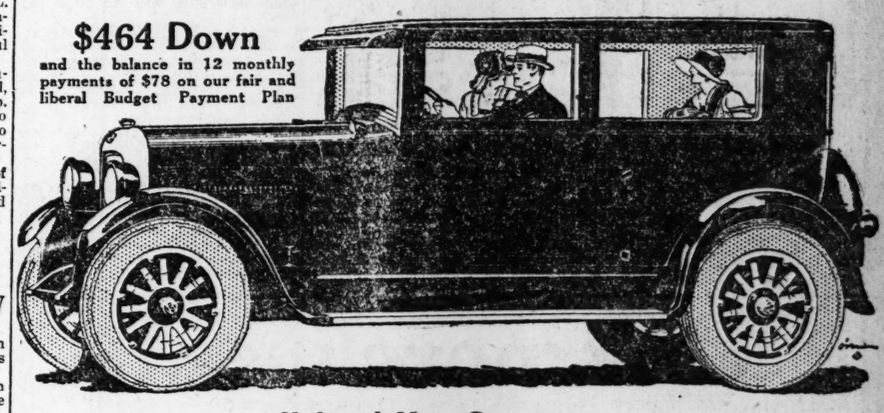

CO-INCIDENTAL LOCK—To ignition and steering wheel, which serves to reduce the theft insurance rates on Studebaker cars—single key operates this lock as well as that on the door and the clever device on the spare-tire carrier.

COMPLETELY MACHINED CRANKSHAFT—To obtain perfect engine balance and thus reduce vibration to a minimum.

There are only two cars manufactured on the one-profit basis. Studebaker in the fine car field, and the Ford in the low priced field. Only in these two cases does one company in its own plants make all bodies, all engines, all clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, gray iron castings and drop forgings.

The recent reduction was in price only. Quality has been maintained. Come in and see this coach. You will find it the same fine car as before the price reduction.

Chapman Declares Anderson

DUTCH WOULDN'T DO "SUCH ROTTEN DEAL," HE SAYS

'Incapable' of Slaying Hances

Hartford, Conn., August 22.—(AP)—Gerald Chapman, when informed today that Ben Hance and his wife were murdered August 14 near Muncie, Ind., and that his long-time confederate, George "Dutch" Anderson, was accused of it, declared that Anderson was "incapable of such a rotten deal."

The news, which had been withheld from Chapman by the state prison authorities, was carried to him by his counsel, Frederick J. Groehl, of New York, and Nathan O. Freedman, of this city. Told that Hance, in his dying statement, had said it was Anderson and Charles "One-Arm" Wolfe" who did the shooting, Chapman, referring to Anderson, exclaimed:

"Why, the man wouldn't be within a thousand miles of that place. It would be the last place in the world he would go to."

Chapman told his lawyers that he knew Wolfe, who is now held by the Muncie police in connection with the murder, having met him when he and Dutch Anderson stayed at Hance's farm at Eaton, Ind.

"I have known Anderson a long time," he said, "and he's incapable of such a rotten deal, particularly after the kind treatment Mrs. Hance accorded Anderson and myself when we stayed with them. Many times, when either of us was sick, she took care of us, showing the kindness of a mother. Hance testified in Hartford because he had to. The police had something on him, or he never would have appeared as a witness against me.

"I'm certain Anderson could not have had anything to do with this on my account, because he would realize that it would only react against me, and, heaven knows, I have enough odds against me now."

Slayer of Wife Leaps to Death From Hospital

Hot Springs, Ark., August 22.—(AP) Scotty Allison, indicted yesterday on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of his wife, Mrs. Mary Combs Allison, killed himself today by leaping from a third story window of a hospital where he was recovering from self-inflicted knife wounds.

Allison leaped from the window when a policeman guarding him stepped from his room into a hallway, in compliance with Allison's request for the summoning of a nurse. His neck was broken when he struck the ground.

Allison was found unconscious in his cell at the county jail Thursday night with his throat and arms slashed, and was taken to the hospital where he made his second and successful attempt to end his life.

Mrs. Allison was shot to death in her apartment Monday night. Ruby Jewell Pemberton, 8-year-old stepdaughter of Allison, was struck by a stray bullet and severely wounded.

Juvenile Logic.

(The Tatler, London.)

Two small girls were playing together one afternoon in the park.

"I wonder what time it is?" said one of them at last.

"Well, it can't be 4 o'clock yet," replied the other with magnificent logic, "because my mother said I was to be home at 4—and I'm not."

CONTEMPT CHARGE FACED BY EDITOR

Soperton, Ga., August 22.—(AP)—Because he published several editorials protesting the release of a man who last year shot H. M. Flanders, editor of the Soperton News, W. E. Boatright, editor of the Swainsboro Forest Blade, a weekly newspaper, has been cited to appear before Judge Eschol Graham Monday to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court.

Crosby Williams last year wounded Flanders and was given a sentence on the state farm. Recently Judge Graham signed an order releasing Williams on probation before the expiration of his sentence. The solicitor general of the circuit is said to have approved the action.

The editorials of Boatright, who is father-in-law of Flanders, are alleged to have criticised the court officials for the action. Both of the men are prominent in newspaper circles of the state, Boatright having been connected with the Forest-Blade nearly 40 years.

EXPLOSION HURLS BODY INTO WELL

Kathleen, Ga., August 22.—One negro is known to be dead and three persons are seriously injured as the result of a boiler explosion here this morning at the ginnery operated by H. E. Talton.

Jim Banks, negro fireman, was instantly killed. His body was blown into a well near the plant.

The injured are: Marsh Farr, Jessie Thomas and Red Bryant, all employees at the gin. Mr. Farr was badly scalded as was the other two men.

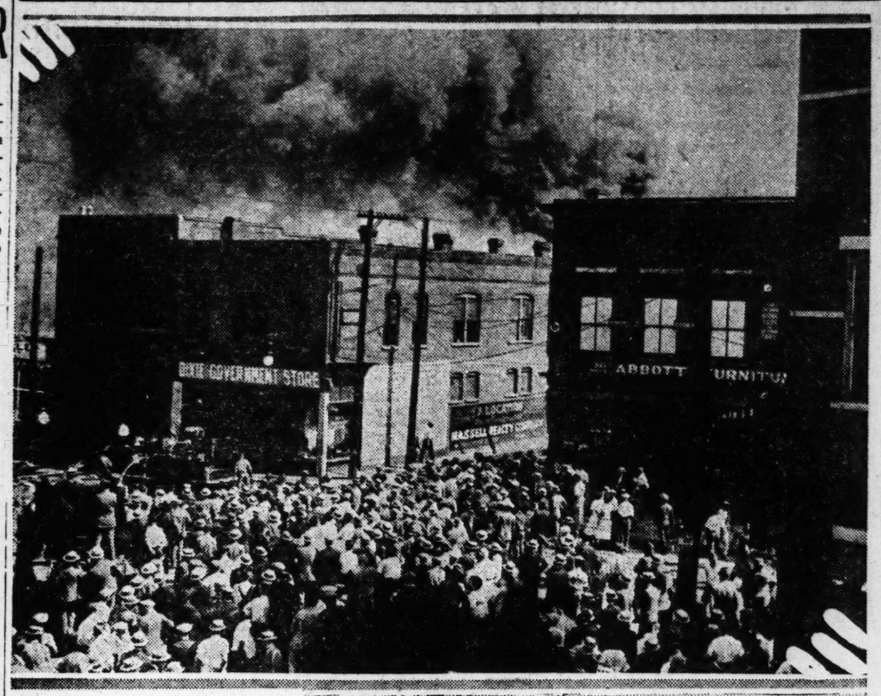

Fire immediately followed the explosion and the gin house and all its contents were soon destroyed. Several bales of cotton were in the gin house at the time. Kathleen is in Houston county, below Macon.

ratified by congress before it can take effect, both Senator Smoot and Representative Burton, of Ohio, another member of the American commission, expressed the opinion after the settlement was reached that it would be acceptable to the legislative branch.

It was made clear by the American commissioners that Belgium was considered "the most favored nation" among the debtor countries, and that the funding arrangement could not be construed as a new basis for settlements to be negotiated with France and Italy, the two principal debtors whose accounts remain open.

BELGIAN FINANCE MINISTER FAIRLY WELL SATISFIED.

Brussels, August 22.—(AP)—The Belgian ministry of finance, in an official statement today, declares that the Belgian debt agreement signed at Washington "takes reasonable consideration of Belgium's financial difficulties," and announces that maximum payments will not be reached until the lapse of ten years.

No additional taxes will be levied to fulfill the nation's engagements and, adds the statement, if the Dawes' plan functions normally, Belgium's war debt is practically cancelled.

"America," continues the statement, "held treasury bonds of the Belgium government legally issued during and after the war, bearing interest at 5 per cent, amounting to $377,000,000, and capitalized with interest at $480,000,000. The accord cancels this debt, replacing it by a funded debt amounting to $417,000,000, of which $171,000,000 bears no interest.

"The financial situation of Belgium has been greatly improved by the agreement."

BELGIAN COMMISSION REFUSES TO TALK.

New York, Aug 22.—Members of the Belgian debt commission sailed today for Europe on the Majestic, en route to Brussels.

George Theunis, former premier, speakinug for the party, said:

"We agreed in coming here not to talk for publication and we are leaving the same way."

One member of the commission, however, asked what attitude the Belgian people would take on the debt settlement, arranged in Washington, answered: "I believe that they will be satisfied."

DOUBLE DUEL PLANS MUTUALLY ABANDONED

Paris, August 22.—The double duel which was imminent in the Chilean colony here has been called off. The seconds of Eliodoro Yanez, publisher of La Nacion, in Santiago, Chile, met with the seconds of Ladislao Errazuriz, and decided that there should be no bloodshed.

Yanez's son-in-law, who also had challenger Errazuriz, following a political argument, likewise was relieved of the necessity of dueling, when his seconds and the others decided that a meeting on the field of honor was not necessary.

DROUTH CUTS YIELD OF BARTOW COTTON

Cartersville, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Bartow county's first bale for 1925 was brought to Cartersville this week, and the fleecy staple is now opening rapidly and being marketed. There have been very few boll weevils noted this year.

The continued dry weather will cut the county's production considerably, say farmers, who had expected to make much larger yields than now seem probable.

that Miss Johnston was said to be buying today for a week-end voyage to New London, where a "party" was to be staged. At the height of festivities arrangements had been made for a raid by detectives, with the object of compromising Phillips.

Mrs. Berg is said to have declared that she had been employed as a "witness."

It also was learned today that there is a citation for contempt of court against Phillips for failing to appear as a witness after he had been summoned when police raided a spiritualist meeting a short time a. Phillips is said to have declared that the raid was staged as part of the plot to "defame him."

Trap Is Laid.

The three women were arrested after Phillips told Prosecutor Quinn of Monmouth county that he feared a blackmailing attempt. Miss Johnston and the "countess" were invited by Phillips to a dinner at the suggestion of the prosecutor.

Detectives and a stenographer were hidden in the cellar where by means of a speech recording device the dinner conversation, which is said to have related to the watching trip, was recorded.

Miss Johnston and the "countess" were arrested in the dining room, and Miss Hager was arrested in Jersey City as an accomplice, her role being that of a maid, police said. Berg was arrested after he is alleged to have tried to help the women to escape.

"I did," replied her husband.

"What book is it?"

"My last," he answered.

AMERICA MAY MAKE HUGE LOAN TO ITALY

Rome, August 22.—(AP)— The return to Rome of Signor Como de Martino, Italian ambassador to the United States, is interpreted here as a step toward the consummation of a loan of $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 by the United States to Italy, which is reported here to be under consideration.

Il Sereno, commenting on the ambassador's conference yesterday with Premier Mussolini, points out that the preliminary negotiations over the American debt have been going on satisfactorily under the direction of Count Volpi, minister of finance; G. Belluzo, minister of national economy, and Dr. Mario Alberti, who has been named a special minister to coordinate consideration of Italy's debt problems. This question, Il Sereno asserts, did not require the ambassador's return from Washington. Neither was his journey made necessary by proposals for the participation of American finance in Italian authority and public works, the newspaper says.

Il Sereno considers it significant that Italy has made no denial of reports that a loan was to be obtained from America and expressing the opinion that Ambassador de Martino's opinion will be a clinching factor in the government's action.

The newspaper asserts the Count Volpi's returning today to Rome after which there probably will be a conference between the ambassador, the premier, Count Volpi, Signor Belluzo and probably Dr. Alberti.

Il Sereno adds that a conference may be held later this week in Rome between officials and representatives of American financial interests.

WASHINGTON ZOO INMATES KILLED IN ODD BATTLES

Washington, August 22.—(AP)—A baby monkey, center of interest at the national zoo for some weeks, is dying and two flamingoes are dead as the result of two battles witnessed by Sunday visitors.

The monkey suffered a broken back when its father leaped upon it as the youngster was reaching for a peanut. The mother fought off her mate until the arrival of keepers, who placed the baby in the zoo hospital.

The flamingoes, bright-hued birds from North Africa, where attacked by a black swan, said to be a natural coward, and were so beaten that they were killed by the keepers. A third flamingo was rescued.

Liquidating Plan Of Bank of Athens Considered Wednesday

Athens, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Judge Blanton Fortson, of superior court, will hear a petition from the state banking department next Wednesday to sell the assets of the defunct American State bank to the American Securities company, a holding company organized to liquidate the affairs of the closed bank in conjunction with the Citizens and Southern bank that has opened here, and which will pay depositors of the bank 30 per cent on their deposits as soon as the transfer of the assets is made.

The hearing on the petition will be at Monroe, where Judge Fortson will be holding court.

Assets of the bank are approximately $800,000, including a stock assessment of $100,000.

The plan of liquidation that resulted in the formation of the holding company came as the result of efforts exerted by a committee headed by Andrew C. Erwin. This committee was instrumental in bringing the Lane bank to Athens and in evolving a plan whereby it is also hoped to liquidate the affairs of the Georgia National bank without a permanent receiver.

A. M. E. CHURCH MEET TO CLOSE AT ATHENS

Athens, Ga., August 22.—(Special). The convention of the Georgia State Sunday School and Allen Christian Endeavor league A. M. E. church, being held in First church, this city, under the leadership of Bishop J. S. Flipper, head of church in Georgia; Dr. C. A. Wingfield and C. H. Harrold, state superintendents, closes Sunday night.

"The largest delegation of young people ever held in this state, gathered here in this congress to discuss the best methods to put forth to check apparent evils of the youth and inspire in them a better and wholesome life, which is possible to obtain through the work of Christian efforts and the preaching of the gospel of Christ," says Bishop Flipper.

"The meeting has pointed out the things that should obtain in the making of better men and women, to secure and encourage race pride and self consciousness of the 42,000 of our young people in the state engaged in the Sunday School, Allen Christian Endeavor leaguers and Allen Life Guards as indicated through the agency of the church, make further doubt impossible," continued the bishop.

Memorial services were held today in memory of Dr. C. I. Williams, late superintendent of the work. Resolutions of thanks were extended the press for the manner in which news of the convention has been handled.

State chair contest on Friday night resulted as follows: First church, Athens, Rev. R. J. Jefferson, pastor; second, St. Paul, Valdosta, Rev. W. O. Slade, pastor; third, St. Phillips, Savannah, Rev. S. F. Andrews, pastor.

WOMAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE IN CRASH

Mrs. Maude Plunkett, of 637 Capitol avenue, narrowly escaped serious injury Thursday when knocked down by an automobile at the corner of Hunter and Broad streets. Her left foot was badly mashed and her head bruised in several places.

The car which struck her was driven by E. L. Fuller, of 240 Peters street, according to police. He stopped and offered every assistance, taking her to her home when she refused to go to a hospital. Mrs. Plunkett requested Patrolman S. A. Greer to make no case against Fuller.

GERMANY REGAINING TRADE WITH TURKEY

Berlin, August 22.—(AP)—Germany appears to be regaining her former position in trade with Turkey faster than other powers, and the Soviet government of Russia is a factor that must be reckoned with by any governments dealing with Turkey, Senator William H. King, of Utah, said today on his arrival here after a tour of the Balkan states, Turkey, Syria and Palestine.

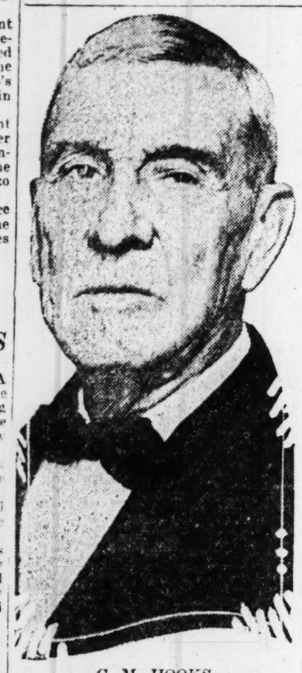

Senator King was one of the irreconcilables who opposed the Turkish American treaty for the reestablishment of diplomatic relations between Turkey and the United States. He is in Berlin for a visit with his daughter, Mrs. Carl Fisher, wife of a secretary of the American embassy here.

Veteran Official Conspicuous Figure In House Circles

"Mister Messenger—"
"Brother Hooks—"
"Uncle Charley—"
"Mister Hooks—"

Four members of the house are calling at one and the same time and, despite the fact that each name called is different, it is the same man they want.

C. M. Hooks, of Monroe, Ga., messenger of the house during the recent session of the genera assembly is one of the most popular officials ever to be elected by the Georgia legislature. For many years he has been a familiar figure among attaches of the house, and when the inevitable day arrives that he can no longer wait upon the lawmakers of the state, there will be hundreds of close friends, all over the state, who will recall with tenderness and delight the days they spent in the company of "Uncle Charley."

C. M. HOOKS.

Mr. Hooks was first elected assistant doorkeeper of the house for the 1917 session when Ogden Persons was speaker. With a brief lapse he has held one position or another ever since.

In 1923 Mr. Hooks was elected messenger in a runover race after tying another candidate in the first ballot from a field of five or six. This year he had no difficulty in securing reelection to his post.

Mr. Hooks is a native of Monroe, Ga., a Confederate veteran and a delightful character. He is a dignified and efficient "Mr. Messenger," a courteous "Mr. Hooks," a cordial "Brother Hooks," and a warm, friendly "Uncle Charley."

GORDON ELECTED POLICE CAPTAIN

James L. Gordon Saturday was elected captain of police by the police committee of city council to succeed Captain W. F. Terry, who died several weeks ago. Captain Gordon, who has been on the force for 16 years, had been acting captain since April, 1924, when he was promoted from sergeant.

Former Sergeant G. T. Butler was promoted to acting captain to fill Captain Gordon's place. He had been a member of the department for 20 years and sergeant for 11. Because of his seniority of service he often had filled the position of acting captain.

Acting Sergeant C. F. Allen was made permanent sergeant to fill Butler's place, and L. F. Carter was elected acting sergeant in Allen's former position.

Patrolmen Luther J. Carroll and Waldo H. (Buck) Weaver were named to fill newly created positions of acting sergeants in charge of traffic. Both have been engaged in traffic work for several years, and will devote their entire time to that department, one being in charge days and the other nights.

ART FIRM, BURNED OUT, OPENS AGAIN

The Georgia Art Supply company, whose plant at 65 South Broad street was destroyed by fire July 30, has moved its wholesale and manufacturing business to 1921 Garnett street, according to announcement Saturday by K. E. Edwards, president of the company. The retail store will be located at a more central position in the near future, Mr. Edwards stated, as soon as operations at the Garnett street plant have started.

"While we will not be ready to contract business until about September 1," Mr. Edwards said, "any of our friends and customers can confer with us now. Two buying agents who were sent to Chicago some time ago have returned, and we are getting in new stock on every train."

This company has been in business here for 15 years and is one of the best-known firms in the city. The fire which destroyed the plant July 30, caused a loss estimated at $73,000. This was partially covered by insurance.

YANK FLIER HURT ON RIFFIAN FRONT

Casa Blanca, French Morocco, August 22.—(AP)—The American flying squadron volunteering for service with the French against the Riffians suffered its first casualty yesterday when Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Kerwood, of Philadelphia, fell during a training flight. He was painfully but not dangerously injured.

SENATOR FOSTER WINS FIGHT TO PAY OLD VETS

Among the leaders in the recent session of the general assembly, despite the fact that the session was his first experience in either house of the legislative body, was Senator Albert G. Foster, of the Twenty-eighth district.

Senator Foster was author of the Confederate scrip bill which passed the senate 46 to 0, and passed the house by a vote of 128 to 3. The senator from the Twenty-eighth was joint author of Foster-Golucke measure, known as anti-pistol bill, which passed the senate 42 to 1, and was joint author of another measure giving municipalities the right to sell public properties. He was author of the bill whereby the standard of efficiency for admission to the Georgia Bar was raised. His successful fight for the payment of old soldiers was highly praised by leading citizens of the state.

Outstanding, however, in Senator Foster's efforts in the senate this year was his fight for the Uncle Remus Memorial highway bill. His interest in this measure and his vigorous fight for it on the senate floor was the subject of much favorable comment from older and veteran statesmen.

Senator Foster was regarded by his colleagues as one of the ablest men in the upper branch and proved a tower of strength in advocacy of many measures designed to improve conditions in Georgia.

SENATOR ALBERT G. FOSTER.

Soule, includes addresses by some of the leading agricultural and business experts in this country.

Among those who will address the conference are: Fairfax Harrison, president Southern railway; Arthur R. Rule, general manager Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers, Inc., New York; Eugene R. The meeting will be held under auspices of the college and in session simultaneously will be the State Agricultural society and the State Horticultural society.

Senator W. J. Harris Taking First Rest In Quarter Century

Senator William J. Harris, who has had offices in Atlanta at the postoffice building during the summer as well as in Washington is out of the city for a couple of weeks, taking his first vacation in 25 years. He is spending the time in Rabun county and reports from him indicate that he is greatly enjoying the novelty of a vacation.

Senator Harris underwent an operation for tonsil removal early this summer and was greatly inconvenienced by it for some time, but it is now believed he has entirely recovered. He states that he is greatly pleased with the north Georgia mountains as a summer resort and believes the section will be extensively utilized in this manner by the people of Georgia in the near future.

While Senator Harris is away his Atlanta and Washington offices will remain open and he will return to Atlanta around the first of next month, remaining here until the latter part of the month, after which he will go to Washington and get ready for the opening session of the senate, which convenes the first Monday in December.

CAMP HIGHLAND LAKE SCHOOL IS CLOSED

The summer school of the Georgia Military academy, which has been in session at Hendersonville, N. C., closed Saturday.

This school, officially known as Camp Highland Lake, with its faculty of 30 experienced teachers, embodies also a boys' summer camp completely equipped for sports and recreation.

It is held under the supervision of Colonel J. C. Woodward, president of G. M. A., and was attended this year by 200 from various sections of the United States. A feature of the camp this year was its 24-piece military band, which rendered daily concerts to the many visitors who crowded the campus each evening to enjoy the music.

House Officials Receive Tokens From Members

Closing sessions of the Georgia house of representatives Saturday were featured by the presentation of gifts—tokens of love and esteem of members of the body—to all officers of the body for the 1925 session.

Presentations were made by Representative Elmer E. Dekle, of Lowndes, who paid high tribute to the ability of the officers and the high regard in which they are held by members of the house. He lauded efforts of the officers and their tireless labors in behalf of the state and called on members of the body to emulate their example in their activities in the house.

Mr. Dekle is a member of what is considered the conservative element of the house and is highly regarded by his colleagues. He gained the floor by rising to a point of personal privilege.

Speaker W. Cecil Neill, of Muscogee, was given a silver bread and butter plate and a set of silver sherbet cups. Other gifts were to Dick B. Russell, Jr., of Bartow, speaker pro tem., a traveling bag; E. B. (Busy) Moore, of DeKalb, clerk, a watch; Rev. J. W. G. Watkins, of Atlanta, chaplain, a walking cane; Andy Kingery, reading clerk, fountain pen and pencil; James B. Nevin, Jr., reading clerk, fountain pen; C. M. Hooks, of Monroe, messenger, fountain pen; J. E. Dennard, of Webster, doorkeeper, fountain pen.

175,000 CHILDREN ATTEND PLAYGROUNDS

Attendance at Atlanta's playgrounds during the season closing Saturday was approximately 175,000, according to Miss Margaret Camp, playground supervisor.

Definite figures for the past week could not be obtained, but the attendance was 172,777 through the week ending August 15, it was stated. Because of the playground pageant Friday and Saturday nights and a dress rehearsal Thursday, last week's attendance was exceptionally small.

Adair playground led the list every week, with Joyner and Grant park taking second and third positions with regularity.

Because of the success of the 1925 season, which ran ten weeks, park officials are contemplating making the playgrounds a year-round proposition.

SUES AUTO OWNER, ALLEGING INJURIES WHEN STRUCK DOWN

Ulysees Green, 18, Saturday filed suit against Lawson W. Ellis asking $25,000 damages for injuries said to have been sustained in an automobile accident on August 15. The petition was filed through his mother, Mrs. Mary Green.

The boy claims he was catapulted 15 feet in the air when the machine, driven by the defendant, struck him at the intersection of Simpson and Walnut streets. He fell on the hood of the car, breaking several bones and receiving many other injuries, according to the petition.

LOW FIRE RECORD SCORED BY NEWNAN FOR SIX MONTHS

Newnan, Ga., August 22.—(Special).—According to statistics just announced Newnan had less fire loss than any other city in the state, for the past six months. Fire Chief W. L. Gilbert, of the local fire department, reports that during this period, he has had only 20 calls and the fire loss has been only $200.

Gilbert is known as one of the best fire chiefs in the state and Newnan's low loss is due to the rigid inspection employed by him.

Last year the city officials built one of the largest reservoirs in the state and the water supply here has not been curtailed on account of the drouth.

TRADE BOARD MEET HELD AT GRIFFIN

Griffin, Ga., August 22.—(Special). The Griffin and Spalding county chamber of commerce was reorganized for the year 1925-26 at an enthusiastic meeting held Thursday night at the Athletic court, with over 400 prominent business men present, who pledged their support and cooperation.

A feature of the meeting was the election of commissioners for the coming year. Five men were elected by popular vote, they were: E. F. Travis, Dr. F. L. Wilson, Otis Blake, John H. Rogers and I. E. Haisten.

Addresses by Colonel W. H. Beck and Judge Lucien Goodrich were highlights of the meeting. Secretary C. C. Thomas, of the chamber, made a splendid report on the activities of the organization during the year, citing a number of instances where it has been of untold value to the city and the county.

TWO RECORDERS FOR CITY VOTED

Two senate amendments to the city of Atlanta's omnibus charter bill in the legislature were approved by the house by an overwhelming vote at the Saturday night session and the measure now goes to the governor for his signature.

Senator Hendrix, of the 35th district, which incudes Fulton county, offered the amendments in the senate Friday and they were promptly voted by that body. One of the amendments gives Atlanta two recorder's courts and two recorders, while the other ratifies and legalizes baby bonds issued for street improvements made under the baby bond plan of 1919. The bill was amended a second time to provide that this latter provision shall have no effect on pending litigation, a number of Atlanta paving contracts now being in the courts.

At present the city has one recorder's court with one recorder and a recorder pro tem. Under the Hendrix amendment there will be two courts and two recorders having joint and equal jurisdiction.

The amendment relative to the baby bonds was tacked on to the omnibus charter bill at the request of Mayor Walter A. Sims and 22 members of council. It provides that all street improvements made under this plan which have been accepted by the city be ratified, confirmed and made legally binding. This amendment removes all doubt as to the validity of bonds issued for this class of street improvements.

Senate Situation In North Dakota Puzzles Capital

Washington, August 22.—(AP)—Uncertainty as to the plans of Governor Sorlie, of North Dakota, for filling the senatorial vacancy in his state, especially his failure to call a special election, is causing much speculation in political circles here as to his authority to appoint a successor to the late Senator Ladd.

The action taken by the senate upon the appointment of Frank P. Glass by the governor of Alabama is declared to be a precedent. The constitution and laws of Alabama at that time are said to have been the same as those of North Dakota at present, so far as the power of the governor to appoint is concerned.

Appointed by Governor O'Neill to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Senator Johnston, Mr. Glass was rejected by a democratic senate by a majority of four on the grounds that the governor had no authority to appoint. The record of the senate debate shows that Alabama, like North Dakota, had not at that time passed a law dealing directly with the constitutional amendment for the election of senators by the people, but that there was in Alabama, as there now is in North Dakota, a law giving the governor authority to fill vacancies in state offices by appointment, the United States senator not being mentioned.

Steel braces that are attached to the wall with four nails and have two legs that rest against them to prevent them from shaking, have been found practical for stucco and other construction jobs.

Atlanta Girl Back Home After Studies in France

MISS VIVIAN LITTLE.

Miss Vivian Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Little of Hardendorf avenue, honor graduate of Agnes Scott college and the only southern girl to be awarded a scholarship in 1924 to Lycee de Victor Duruy at Paris, France, has just returned to Atlanta after a year's study in France.

Miss Little left Atlanta September 23, 1924, and while abroad visited many historic points of interest in many European countries. These included Mont Blanc, in Switzerland; Brussels and Antwerp, in Belgium; Naples, Venice, Florence and Rome in Italy, and many cities in France.

She saw the opening of the International Exposition of Decorative Arts along the Seine river, and recounted her many experiences Saturday, explaining customs of the nations of Europe.

"Probably the most gorgeous thing I saw was the exposition of arts," she said. "Thousands of colored lights, fountains bubbling colored water, river boats decorated with gaily-colored streamers and a general Bohemian atmosphere prevailed.

"Almost every country where art is developed to any extent is represented, showing ultramodern development. This is considered one of the most extensive exhibitions of the world.

"Boys are still the pets of France, despite the fact that we are at the quarter-way mark of the 20th century. They are welcomed in French homes, while girls are frowned upon still. Woman there does not enjoy the same privileges and immunities she does here.

"The only other scholarship girl studying at the school was Miss Gertrude Hubert of Waukesha, Wis. We studied French history, literature, art and science.

"A peculiar custom still prevails at girls' schools there. Big gates are locked at night, and no student is allowed to go out after dark. The school is just like a convent, and when one is permitted to go out at all, she is chaperoned and guarded in much the same manner that we guard prisoners in transit in this country.

"If a party is arranged to go on a sightseeing trip, students march two-by-two and are preceded and flanked by a guard of teachers.

"We were entertained and feted by the Amica America society and the American University union, organizations which devote most of their time to helping American students in France to understand the French people and get a broad conception of French affairs. They are a godsend to American girls. The boys could get along without them, but they are doing a great work among the students and their efforts are appreciated.

Miss Little was awarded a "diplome d'etudes" from the Sorbonne for her work. She visited Miss Elizabeth McCarrick, former Atlantan, an Agnes Scott student, who now is assistant librarian at the Carnegie library at New York, on her return to the United States. She has just returned to Atlanta.

EFFORT TO EJECT VETERAN CAUSES CLASHES IN HOUSE

As an aftermath of the ejection of George L. Carson, a Confederate veteran, from the floor of the house Saturday morning, two heated clashes occurred in the house during the day.

Representative Barrett, of Stephens, who it was charged, was one of those responsible for Mr. Carson being put out of the hall, exchanged blows on the floor with an unidentified man during the noon recess. Representative Barrett afterwards stated that the man was not a Confederate veteran, but was a much younger man.

During the afternoon session, Miss Kempton, Fulton county representative, and C. M. Hooks, messenger of the house, engaged in a dispute growing out of the incident. The discussion became heated as the two approached the door of the house, and members of the house rushed outside, pell mell, to see what it was all about. The shouts of Speaker Neill for members to remain seated were unavailing, and his orders to the doorkeepers to close the doors could not stop the rush of the crowd outside.

The Confederate veteran was ejected from the house during the morning session, while members were debating the question of putting the Confederate veterans script bill calling for $4,000,000 on the calendar. Miss Kempton brought the messenger to where Mr. Carson was conversing with members, and insisted that he take Mr. Carson out of the hall, it was alleged by Mr. Hooks and by the veteran.

Representative Barrett reached the scene about that time, it is said, and Mr. Carson, the veteran, charges that Mr. Barrett told him to "get out."

Representative Linden of Jeff Davis rose to a point of personal privilege on the ejection of the veteran, denouncing Mr. Barrett and Miss Kempton. Representative Barrett replied that if the statements of Mr. Linder were meant for him, they were untrue. Miss Kempton denied having had any part in the affair.

GOEBEL DENIES MAKING POISON CONFESSION

Miami, Fla., August 22.—(AP)—John Gobel denied today that he had confessed poisoning Mrs. H. B. Hunt, as implied in the statement: "I'm sorry I did it," quoted by two witnesses at the coroner's inquest Thursday. He asserts he will prove his innocence.

He is being held in jail without bond and will probably not be brought before the grand jury until the regular session in early November. Acting State's Attorney Carl T. Hoffman said he has no intention of calling a special grand jury.

The body of Mrs. Hunt has been sent to her former home in Lexington, Ky.

Mrs. Gobel, Gobel's son and Don Riddles, a brother-in-law, of Cleveland, are expected to arrive here early next week to aid the accused.

ESTATE OF NOVELIST AMOUNTS TO $112,000

Chicago, August 22.—The estate of the late Emerson Hough, noted novelist, amounted to $112,000, according to a report of Judge Perry Parsons in the Highland Park probate court. His widow receives the entire estate.

HATCHER BUYS AVONDALE HOME

Another evidence of the growing interest in Avondale estates, Atlanta's new suburban city, was given Saturday with the announcement that Thurston Hatcher, prominent Atlanta protographer, has purchased the dwelling at 14 Kensington drive, for occupancy September 1.

The home, one of the most striking in the new suburb, has drawn the admiring attention of thousands of visitors in the last few weeks, and will be identified by every visitor from its description as the brown frame bungalow with a unique green roof of thatch design. Situated on an elevation within full sight of the central plaza, the home and its attractive roof design is one of the outstanding features of the new residential city.

Mr. Hatcher, who purchased the home for a consideration of $12,500, has been residing in Decatur.

Work Is Progressing.

Work is now progressing rapidly on the $500,000 building program which has been outlined for the development of Avondale estates during the fall season.

This program includes erection of 50 homes, establishment of a new business block as an extension of the present colony, and ultimate erection of an apartment house of twelve units.

Enlargement of the business section of Avondale will serve to increase the number of businesses available for the convenience of residents of this $5,000,000 development and the surrounding territory.

Twenty of the 50 homes are already under way or will be within a few days. All these are to be completed by October 15, while the remainder of the handsome homes to be a part of this program are to be completed by April 1.

Purchasers Build Homes.

A feature of the development plans is that many of the homes are being erected by purchasers of lots. The residences will be characteristic of Avondale, distinctive in architecture, many of them of old English and colonial types.

Unusual interest has been shown in the building program which was announced in The Constitution last Sunday and numerous inquiries have been received at the offices of the estates and at the downtown offices in the Aragon hotel block.

Sales are proceeding at a highly satisfactory rate, it was announced Saturday by the Avondale management.

SOUTHERN SHOPS DAMAGED $250,000 IN SERIOUS BLAZE

Knoxville, Tenn., August 22.—Fire sweeping through the Coster shops of the Southern railway late today destroyed the planing mill, coach and freight car repair shops and partially destroyed the paint shop, entailing a loss of probably $250,000 in buildings, equipment and cars.

The fire started in the freight car repair shed and spread quickly to the other buildings. Low water pressure hampered city fire fighting forces as well as shop forces in battling the flames.

The freight car repair shop is a frame structure, the others being of brick construction. No check up on cars lost in the flames has yet been made.

CENTRAL PLACES LARGE CAR ORDER

Savannah, Ga., August 22.—The Central of Georgia railway announces the placing of orders for 1,000 ventilated box cars and 19 locomotives. The cost of the new equipment is $2,750,000. The cars are being built by the Tennessee Iron & Railroad company, of Birmingham, and the locomotives by the Baldwin Locomotive works, of Philadelphia. They are to be Central type freight locomotives.

The engines will be used between Macon and Albany.

ROME MILL WORK GETS UNDER WAY

Constitution Bureau.

Rome, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Construction of the $1,750,000 textile mill by the Southern Brighton mills, now under way at Shannon, Ga., eight miles from Rome, together with a model mill town of at least 100 dwellings, is expected to prove one of the most important developments in industrial expansion of this section.

The plant will be a 35,000 spindle mill, and according to plans, will be ready to begin full operation by January 1 with a monthly payroll of $30,000. It will be a branch of the Brighton Mills, of Passaic, N. J., but will be incorporated separately from the parent organization, and $115,000 worth of preferred stock already has been purchased by Rome citizens.

Fabric for use in manufacturing cord tires will be the principal product of the plant, and a big part of the output will be sold to Akron, Ohio, tire manufacturers.

With foundations for mill buildings and warehouses already completed and materials on hand for starting work on the buildings themselves, officials of the company and building contractors have expressed confidence that the plant will be completed in time for the scheduled opening early next year. Twenty of the 100 bungalows which will comprise the first unit of the ideal mill village also have been practically finished.

J. E. Sirrine and company, of Greenville, are architects and engineers in charge of the work. The Fisk-Carter construction company, of Greenville, is putting up the mill buildings and the Daniel Lumber company, of LaGrange, Ga., is building the cottages.

Interesting Ceremony.

Rome, Ga., August 22.—(Special). "The ceremony at the tomb of Charles Graves, whose body was selected by the government to typify the Known Dead of the armed forces of the United States in the world war was the most beautiful and impressive that I have ever attended," said General J. P. McQuigg, of Cleveland, Ohio, last night.

"It was worth many times over the trip from Cleveland," said the former major general, commanding an Ohio division during the war, Shanklin-Attway post deserves great credit for the manner in which it has taken care of this grave and the efforts put forward to make it a national memorial.

"It will be my pleasure to ally myself with its friends before the national convention in support of the Georgia department's resolution to make it a national shrine," he concluded.

General McQuigg is one of the most prominent men in the American Legion. He is past commander of the department of Ohio, and is chairman of the national finance committee. His name has often been mentioned for commander of the legion, and it is said that his name may go before the Omaha convention in October as national commander.

BILL WILL MINIMIZE CAR THEFTS IN STATE

One of the outstanding accomplishments of the 1925 session of the Georgia legislacure was the passage during the last week of a bill which is designed to minimize the stealing of automobiles in Georgia. Georgia, prior to this time, has long been a fertile field for automobile thieves due to the fact that every one of the states adjacent to Georgia has had laws which practically eliminated automobile thievery, making Georgia the dumping ground and market for stolen cars, it is said.

Under the new bill it will be more difficult for a thief to get away with his ill-gotten goods in Georgia, because the market for stolen cars is absolutely destroyed through this new bill, proponents say. Under the terms of the bill, everyone who registers at the state capitol to secure an automobile tag is given a certificate of title which one is required to transfer to the person to whom the car is sold. Anyone who buys a car without requiring this transfer of certificate of title takes the car at one's own peril and under conditions which, on their face, imply that the car has been stolen. As thieves cannot produce a certificate of title, they are not going to be able to sell their ill-gotten property, and the inducement to steal is therefore eliminated, so far as Georgia is concerned, it is said. The chief credit of this accomplishment is due to the splendid cooperation between all parties interested, namely, the Atlanta Motor club, representing motor car owners; Atlanta Automobile association, representing automobile dealers and automotive trade lines (through its special committee, headed by J. H. Dillars and John E. Smith); the insurance companies, the detective bureaus and the secretary of state's office, which administers the law, according to those who led the fight for the measure.

Georgia is the 28th state of the union that has passed such a law and many other states are considering its passage as fast as its advantages can be brought to their attention.

VICTOR RELEASES FEATURE RECORDS COMING WEEK

The "Red Headed Music Maker" seems to be the same under all weather conditions and on his latest record entitled "Sunshine" he chants and chortles to the ukulele on a variety of subjects. On the reverse side his offering is "It Struck My Funny Bone," another tuneful number with clever nonsense rhymes worth memorizing.

The standard glide fox trot, strutty ones like the various "walks," sippy polka-like dances like some forms of the collegiate, grotestque half-exhibition dances like the "Charleston," all can be danced to two new fox trots, "If I Every Cry" and "Siberia," presented on a new record by Ted Weems and His Orchestra.

A new organization in the Victor lists is Busse's Buzzards, a Whiteman orchestra, making its initial appearance with "Deep Elm." On the other side Coon-Sanders' Original Night orchestra gives "I'm Gonna Charleston bay to Charleston," which takes its name from the knock-kneed "Charleston" fox trot.

"Alone at Last" is another brilliant number by this orchestra, in which the banjo is conspicuous and a vocal refrain is introduced. The companion number, "Flirting," by Meyer Davis' Le Paradis band, is light and elastic with some piano fireworks.

SILVERWARE STOLEN FROM DUNCAN HOME

Reports to detective headquarters Saturday showed renewed activity on the part of burglars operating in this city.

Loss of a quantity of silverware was reported by J. A. Duncan, of 193 East Sixth street. According to police officials, the thieves entered the house Friday night by jimmying a window and operated so silently that no members of the household were disturbed.

A diamond brooch, set with 11 stones, was stolen from Mrs. Annie L. Stephenson, of Daytona, Fla., while on a visit to this city, according to a report by D. E. Moodie, executive special agent for a number of insurance companies. He stated that the brooch was either stolen from the hotel where Mrs. Stephenson was stopping or was removed from her dress while she was in a picture show.

Mrs. Ola Hay reported that a handbag containing a quantity of clothing was removed from her car.

Others reporting losses included E. E. Cochran, of Dawson, suitcase; Walter Smith and Will Harris, of 67 Greensferry avenue, quantity of clothing, and E. C. Martin, of 16 Austin avenue, a bundle of laundry.

TERM HOME BUILDING 'CROSS-WORD PUZZLE'

Human nature likes a riddle. The cross-word puzzle fad has swept the country like a scourge, and many cynics call it that. But it really is a symbol of one of the most delightful characteristics of human nature. Man likes to work things out. He is doing it in almost every activity of his life. In society, in business, in politics, he is constantly solving riddles, putting this and that together and finding out what the result may be.

In home building, too, he is seen at work on a practical cross-word puzzle undertaking. He takes a certain kind of material, stone, brick, wood or stucco, a roofing material, a design, a piece of ground, and he fits them together in order to try to create a home for himself and his family. It is a great "game," and he loves it.

Further, this building game is made more complicated because while the builder is endeavoring to secure attractiveness, he also must have practicability. He must, for instance, have a good looking roof, but that roof must protect his home and keep on protecting it. "It is up to the manufacturer of building materials to make his product fit in," said J. Bulow Campbell, of the R. O. Campbell Coal company, who handles the Carey building and insulating products in this territory. "He must think of all the requirements of the builder, and deliver a product that will harmonize with other good materials. For instance, in our Carey Asfaltslate Shingle, we did not stop with the one quality, non-curling, but perfected a natural slate surface and a variety of colors which give the designer of a home every opportunity to secure artistic effects, while at the same time creating a home that is practical and durable."

"In our new Silver-Green color, which is supplied only in the big size Carey Asfaltslate Shingle we have a shade that is absolutely distinctive, at the same time quiet and restful. A roof of the Silver-Green Asfaltslate Shingle harmonizes with any style of architecture and blends into the surroundings with a degree of attractiveness that we do not believe is found in any other shingle on the market today. There is nothing of the spectacular in this color at all. The slate comes from a mine in Virginia, the output of which is controlled entirely by The Philip Carey company. It has a luster that appears almost like sparkling dew in the sunlight. It is to our mind the most satisfying shingle color that has yet been found in this type of roofing without any of the glaring color contrasts found in so many of the shingles on the market today."

SENATOR DIXON SEEKS TO SUCCEED NAPIER

Senator James A. Dixon of the 17th district, well-known lawyer and citizen of Millen in Jenkins county Saturday confirmed reports that he would be a candidate in the next election for attorney general of Georgia. The office is now held by George A. Napier and it is not known whether he will again offer for the post.

Senator Dixon is a native of Emanuel county and an active member of the Baptist church, the Elks, I. O. O. F., and Masons. He was educated at Young Harris and in Knoxville (Tenn.) schools. He is president pro tem of the senate and served in the house from Jenkins county in 1921-22-23-24. He has served as solicitor of county court of Jenkins county and solicitor of the city court of Millen. He is recognized as a leading member of the Georgia bar and one of middle Georgia's most influential citizens.

Senator Dixon declined Saturday to make any formal statement of his candidacy, stating merely that he had definitely decided to enter the race and would have more to say later.

LUMBER PLANT HAS TWO FIRES IN WEEK AT WASHINGTON

Washington, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Sparks from an engine today caused a fire loss to Davis & Arnold Lumber company amounting to $8,000, with no insurance.

The fire started on the roof of a small negro dwelling and soon spread to the lumber yard, where nearly 500,000 feet of lumber was stacked.

The plant is located five miles west of Washington. Today's fire was the second serious loss sustained by this concern during the week.

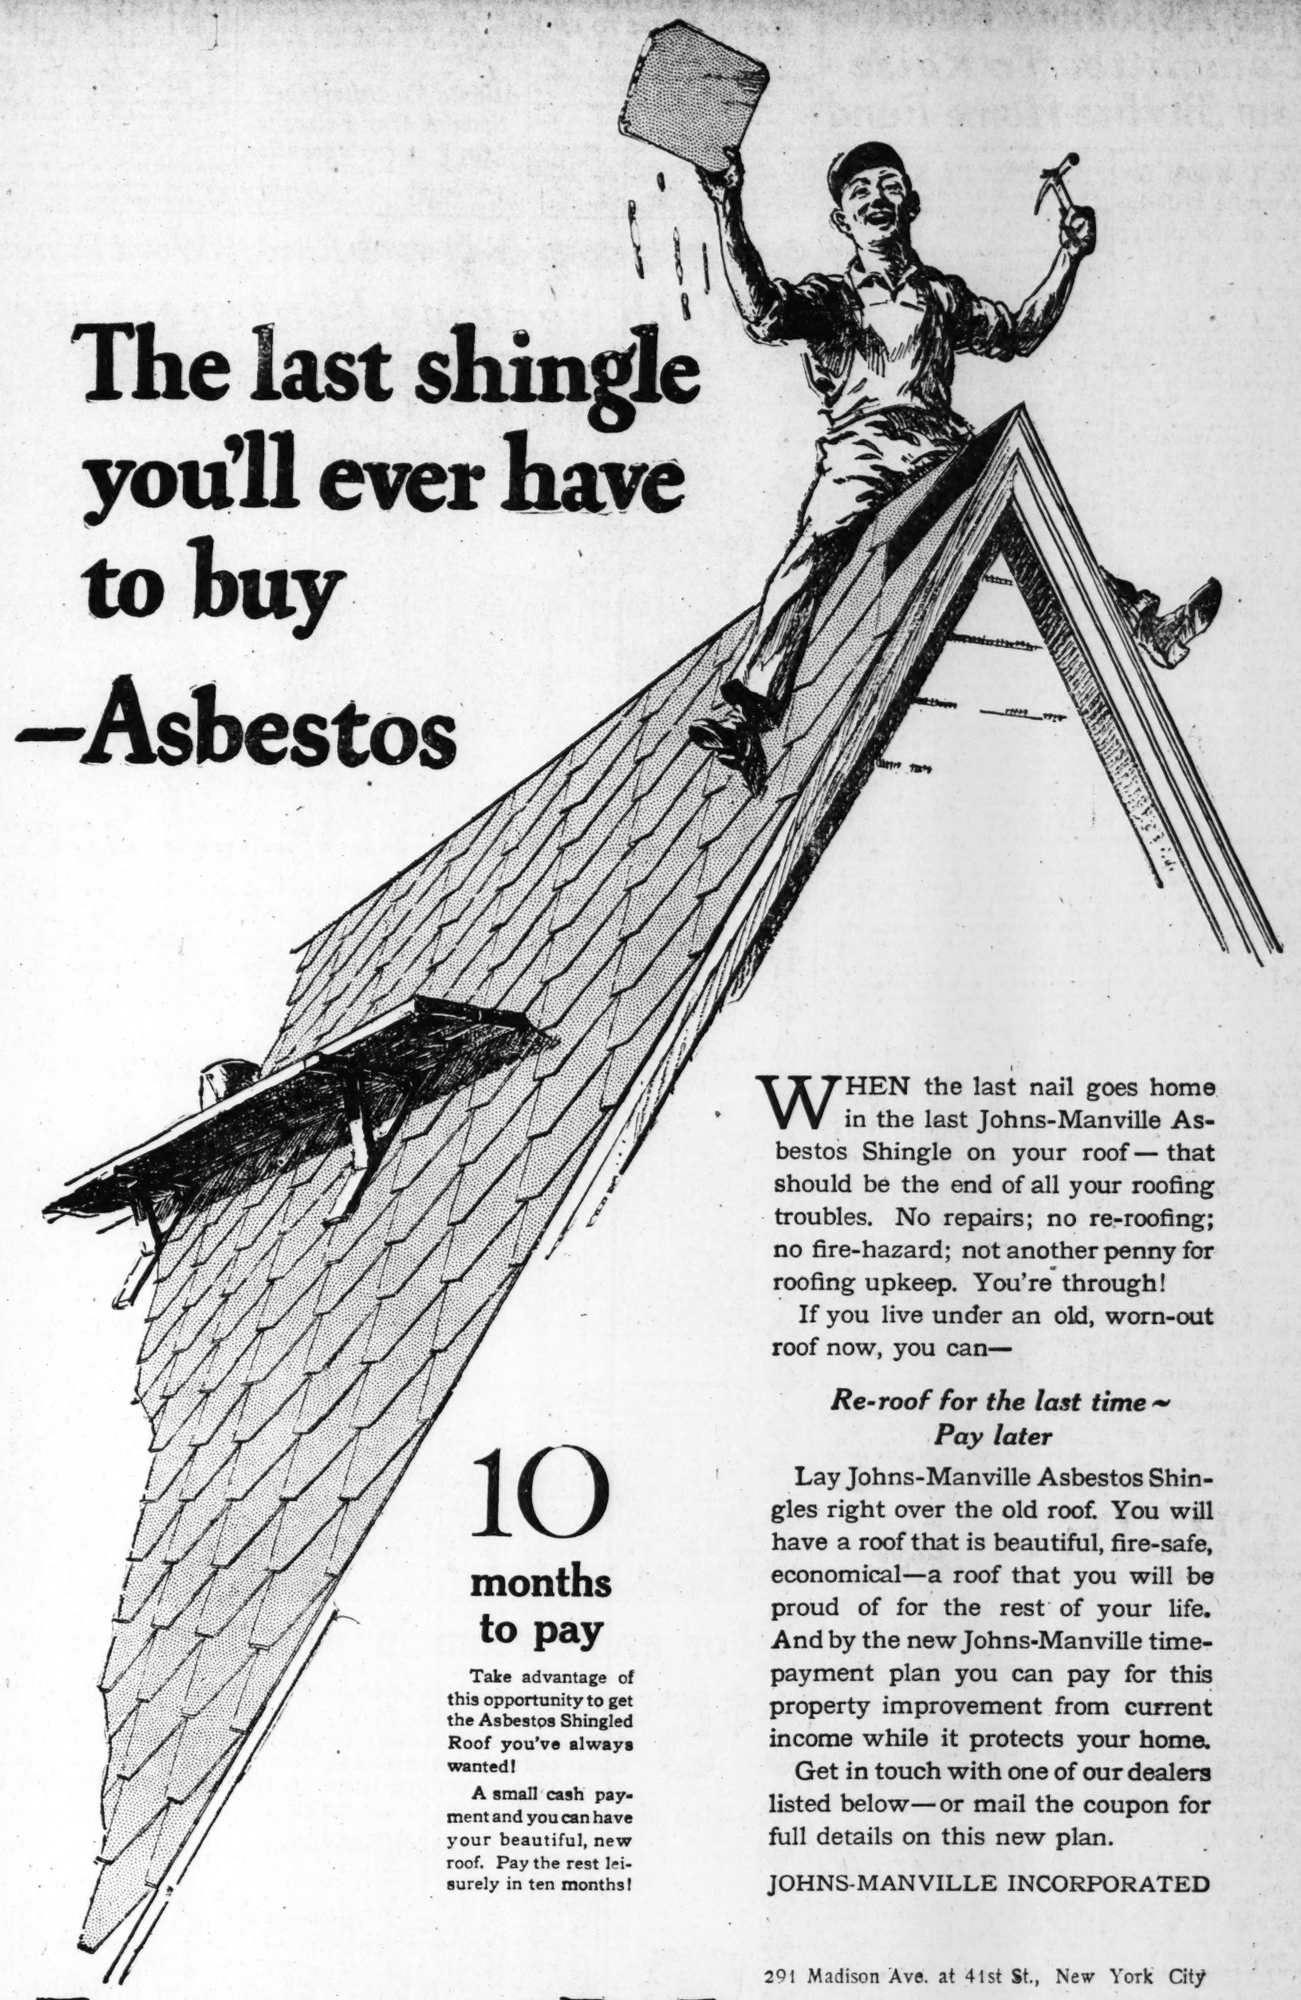

GWINNETT CLUB BOYS HOLD WEEK'S CAMP

Lawrenceville, Ga., August 22.—(Special).—J. E. Conwell, president of the Georgia Cotton Growers association, and C. R. Ware, vice president, addressed several hundred members here Thursday at the school auditorium. After the addresses the officers and members were entertained at an old fashioned barbecue given at the Lawrenceville camp ground by the Kiwanis club. F. Q. Sammon, ex-mayor and president, was host.

The Gwinnett county corn club boys, in session at the camp ground, were also guests of the club. J. Phillips Campbell, director of extension work for the state college at Athens, was the principal speaker during the afternoon exercises. He told the club boys that there was as much profit in raising cotton in this section as there was in growing tobacco in South Georgia.

Ira Williams, state entomologist, was one of the speakers in the evening. County Agent A. G. Robinson is being ably assisted by Mrs. A. G. Robinson in making the week interesting for the corn club boys.

Lavaque Appointed Head Of Committee To Raise New Shrine Home Fund

Groups To Canvass for Yaarab Temple Will Be Composed of Volunteer Workers.

A. A. Lavaque, manager of the local branch of the Pittsburg Plate Glass company, Saturday was appointed chairman of the organization committee in the Yaarab temple $1,000,000 mosque-auditorium campaign, by A. S. Adams, general campaign chairman.

Other members of this committee are F. E. Van der Veer, captain of Yaarab temple patrol; DeWald Cohen, president of the Shrine band; Clarence Aldred, president of the chanters; John F. Burdine, president of the Oriental band of the temple; F. M. Wooddall, director of the temple degree team, and J. O. Seamans, temple marshal.

Enthusiasm for the Shrine's project to build a $1,000,000 shrine mosque and civic auditorium at Peachtree and Kimball streets, where Yaarab temple now owns one of the finest building sites in the city, is so widespread that, for the first time since the several Liberty loan and war drives were conducted in Atlanta, a campaign organization will be composed entirely of volunteer workers.

When it was first decided to campaign for the building fund the executive committee sent out a general notice to all Yaarab temple Shriners describing salient features of the mosque-auditorium and explaining that the fund is to be raised in an intensive campaign, conducted from October 12 to 25 by volunteer workers who will sell non-interest bearing loan certificates to Shriners and others interested in the project.

Volunteer Cards Returned.

A printed card was enclosed with the notice and Shriners who wanted to have a part in the campaign were asked to indicate their desire by returning the card. Nearly 200 of these cards already have been received at campaign headquarters and have been turned over to Chairman Lavaque and the organization committee, so that the ranks of the workers may be filled from among those who really want a part in the building project. More of the cards are being received in each day's mail.

Mr. Lavaque's committee will have charge of organizing the intensive solicitation in Atlanta. There are 2,710 members of the temple in this city and during the campaign period, October 12-25, each one will be personally interviewed by a member of the organization and asked to purchase as many of the benefit loan certificates which the temple will issue as he can.

The organization will comprise 20 10-man teams, each team having a captain and lieutenant who will be responsible directly to Mr. Lavaque and his committee. For campaign purposes the city of Atlanta has been carefully divided into 20 zones by competent route men in the local postoffice, and each of the teams will confine its activities to one of these zones. The work of solicitation will thus be so centralized that the two-weeks' campaign period should be more than enough to allow solicitation of each of the 2,710 Shriners here.

Selection of suborganization heads to form a campaign committee is a new thought in fraternal campaigning Mr. Adams stated it to be his belief, however, that the plan will work out exceptionally well in this instance because of the very active nature of the five Shrine organizations of Yaarab temple. The Shrine band and patrol have won a national-wide reputation by their perfectly executed performances at the imperial council gatherings they have attended in various parts of the country.

Many Atlantans will remember the fine concerts of recent seasons given by the chanters, and this organization has been considered by some unsurpassed in the south as an amateur male choral group. The Oriental band and the degree team are officially represented on the organization committee because of the intimate knowledge their respective leaders have of the rank and file of the temple membership, and for the respect they command with Shriners generally who know their fine work in directing the activities of the Oriental band and degree team at ceremonial sessions and other gatherings of the temple.

Financing Plan Approved.

J. O. Seamans, the Yaarab temple marshal, has been in charge of all the recent public appearances of the Shrine. Mr. Seamans is well known by the Shriners and by Atlantans generally and has had an active part in the various civic and community campaigns of the last few years.

The plan for raising the $1,000,000 fund is finding general approval among Shriners in Atlanta and throughout north Georgia, where the temple's jurisdiction extends. This has been clearly evidenced both by expressions of local Shriners and the hearty indorsement given it when representatives of fifty communities where there are Yaarab temple nobles met here last week to discuss the building project.

So far as is known the financing plan has never been tried in any capital investment enterprise in this state before. It has been pronounced most sound and practicable, however, by leading bankers of the city and has been successfully used by the Shrine and other fraternal organizations in various parts of the country.

The plan calls for the sale of $1,000,000 worth of benefit loan certificates by the Yaarab Temple Building company. These certificates will be issued in denominations up to $1,000, the smallest certificate having a $100 value. They do not bear interest and for the lifetime of the purchaser constitute nothing more than a gift, but upon his death the full face value of each will be returned by the temple to any named beneficiary or to his estate.

Time Plan Provided.

Subscribers to the building fund will not be asked to purchase their certificates outright. Subscriptions will be taken on a regular pledge card form which provides that payments may be made in five installments over a period of two years, beginning 1926. The temple will issue the loan certificates after these pledges have been fully paid; but if a subscriber should die before he has completed payment of his pledge, the amount already paid into the temple will be returned.

In order to make certain the immediate repayment of all loan certificates as soon as they fall due the building company will carry a form of group insurance which can be purchased at a premium cost less than 1 per cent of the principal. At the same time a sinking fund will be established from initiation fees. In a few years this fund should reach sufficient proportions for the temple to carry its own insurance.

The advantages of the plan which Yaarab temple has adopted are obvious. It eliminates the burden upon the membership of subscribing to a gift campaign, although large sums of money have been raised for Shrine temples in this manner. It relieves the temple of borrowing money and paying heavy carrying charges, whether this money be raised through a bond issue or borrowed from the banks. And it makes possible immediate construction of the mosque.

DECATUR TRADE BOARD PLANS TO ADVERTISE

Decatur, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—The first meeting of the advertising committee of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce since that body reorganized into county-wide activities will be held Monday night at chamber headquarters at the Decatur courthouse.

The committee will authorize the immediate publication of an eight-page booklet of facts and information about Decatur, Stone Mountain and towns throughout the county, that will be of service to tourists and of interest to those desiring a home in a community of schools, churches and business opportunities.

Publication costs of this booklet and of another and larger one to be issued shortly will be financed, it is announced, through donations to the advertising fund, made by members coming into the Decatur Chamber of Commerce in its recent drive for new members and a larger sphere of activity. Before the campaign for a larger chamber is over, it is expected that an advertising fund of $7,500 will be available for constructive booklet, sign and newspaper advertising.

Another matter expected to come up for discussion and decision at this meeting is the adoption of a uniform booster plate for Decatur-owned automobiles. Better DeKalb county hotel facilities for tourists will also be discussed, as will the matter of signs for all highways.

Alabama Sending Power To Georgia Because of Drouth

100,000 Horsepower Said To Be Coming Into State From Alabama Power Company Lines.

POWER PRODUCED BY STEAM PLANT

Georgia Power Company Buying in Tennessee. Carolinas Also Hard Hit by Water Shortage.

Sheffield, Ala., August 22.—(AP)—Electric energy to the amount of 100,000 horsepower is now going from Alabama into interconnected systems for use mainly by Georgia industries. This is to supply a deficiency caused by a drouth, which is said by Alabama Power company officials to have resulted in one of the greatest power shortages in the history of the southern Appalachian region.

The government gauge on the Tennessee river near Wilson dam, which has been read twice daily by the same family for more than 50 years, today was more than six inches below the low water record of the stream. This condition is said by power company officials to be general in the southeast.

Steam Plant Running.

Due to what is described as "a critical condition," the government steam plant, located here and operated under lease by the power company, is running full time for the first time in five years, as are nine other steam plants of the company.

The government steam plant is said to be the principal source of supply for the power needed in other states. One generator was tested at Wilson dam this week, and others will be ready for use within a few weeks. During the test period, this power will be utilized by the company.

Will Continue Indefinitely.

The seading of a large amount of surplus power to the relief of Georgia industries will be continued as long as necessary to meet drouth conditions, it was stated. Alabama's full need will be met through the power company's interconnected system of steam plants, it was explained. The Sheffield station and enlarged Gorgas plant will enable the company to meet demands, irrespective of water conditions. An unlimited supply of fuel at the door of the company's steam plant is said to have aided in the acute situation. More than 3,000 tons of coal daily are being consumed in generating power for local and outstate needs.

GEORGIA POWER COMPANY BUYING AT CHATTANOOGA.

Although the Georgia Railway and Power company is buying power, using steam-driven dynamos and doing everything possible to meet an unprecedented crisis in the shortage of water to run its great turbines located in the mountains of north Georgia, it is getting none from Alabama, according to officials of the company Saturday night.

The company is purchasing power from the Tennessee Electric and Power company, of Chattanooga, and furnishing it to customers at a loss, it

FERRY BOAT BURNS, NO LIVES ARE LOST

Two Score or More Passengers Leap or Are Thrown Into Lake Ponchartrain; All Saved.

New Orleans, August 22.—(AP)—The lake ferry boat Southland was destroyed by fire on Lake Ponchartrain tonight without loss of life.

Two score or more passengers leaped or were thrown into the lake, when they hesitated to trust life preservers, and all were picked up by motor boats or the St. Tammany, another ferry boat, soon standing by the burning vessel.

The Southland, valued at $75,000, was a total loss.

Injuries were few and none is expected to prove fatal. Three deck hands were reported suffering from burns and bruises and six passengers were burned or suffered contusions.

Seventeen automobiles on the ferry were burned.

The craft had left for Mandeville and were perhaps 10 miles on its way when smoke was seen, followed by flames. Motor boats set out with the Winetka reported to have outdistanced companion craft and reached the Southland in time to take off and pick up a score of passengers. The St. Tammany followed to complete the rescue effort.

Many stories of heroism were heard. A mother placed her children in a life boat and dropped into the lake herself. Deck hands were busy for a time righting women and children, who were in danger of drowning with life preservers on.

Pendleton R. Lehde, president of the Lake Transit company, owner of the Southland, said tonight that the fire was caused by a cigarette or by gasoline dripping from an automobile.

BUSINESS LEADERS TO TOUR SOUTHERN SECTION OF STATE

Good Will Trip Will Be Made in September by Large Party of Atlantans.

PROJECT IS BACKED BY LOCAL CHAMBER

Receptions Will Be Given Tourists in Number of Cities—Low Rates Are Arranged for Trip.

Atlanta's friendship for neighboring cities in south Georgia and Atlanta's interest in the prosperous conditions prevailing in that section will be fostered in a good will tour of the southern tier of counties of the state by representatives of the biggest business enterprises of this city which will be made over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad, leaving here on the night of Thursday, September 3, and lasting three days, according to W. R. C. Smith, president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce.

Proposals to conduct such a tour recently were considered by the chamber of commerce and so many enthusiastic expressions of approval were received both from Atlanta business firms and from the many thriving cities in the south Georgia section that it was decided to take the trip on an elaborate scale. Upwards of 150 prominent Atlanta business men have given assurances they will take part and a much larger number than this will be ready when the day to start the trip arrives, according to information received by the chamber of commerce.

Ready To Cooperate.

Sole objects of the tour are to give assurances to the citizens of the south Georgia section that Atlanta is ready and waiting to cooperate with them in any move to develop their part of the state and to carry to them a message of cordial congratulation over the prosperity that has come to that region through expansion of the tobacco crop, through big yields of cotton, corn and other staples and over the success of the fruit and melon crops.

According to tentative plans as announced, the Atlanta party will leave on a special train over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad on the night of Thursday, September 3. They will arrive in Thomasville the following morning and from there will go to Moultrie, Tifton, Valdosta, Fitzgerald, Douglas, Alma, Waycross and half a dozen other cities and towns of south Georgia. They will arrive in Brunswick Sunday morning and will be entertained Sunday at St. Simon's island, leaving Brunswick Sunday night and arriving in Atlanta early Monday morning.

On their arrival in each of the cities the Atlanta good will party will be met by reception committees, according to notice already received from the cities along the itinerary. Side trips will be taken into the country where the Atlanta business men will be shown the great tobacco crops that have brought fame and wealth to the south Georgia section and also the great yields of cotton and corn in the fields. The Atlanta visitors will be shown the methods used in tobacco culture and curing and will be taken to the tobacco warehouses and markets.

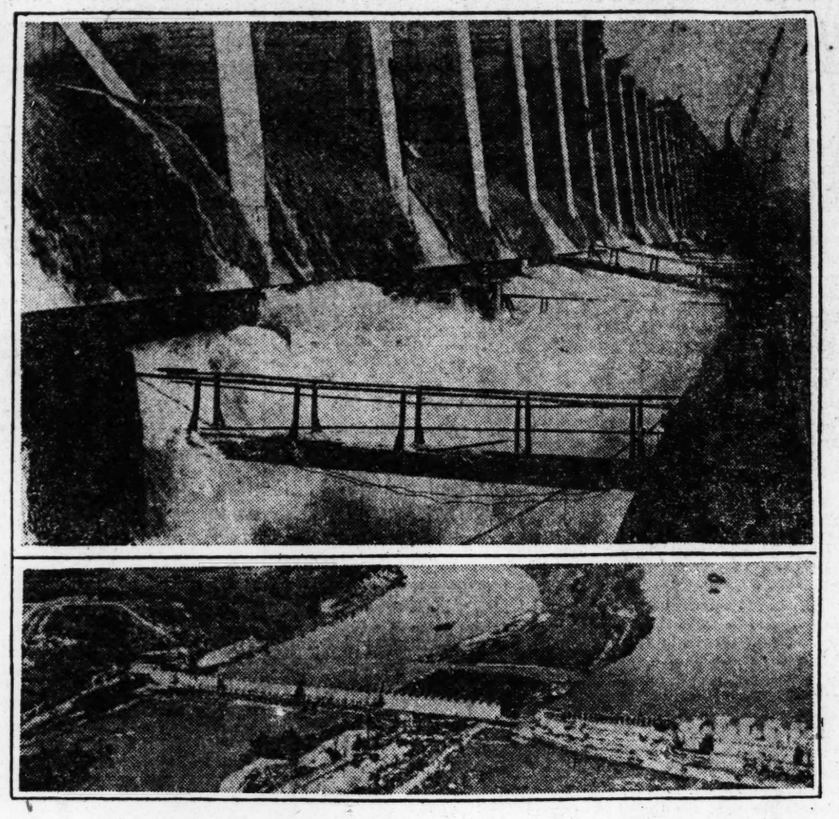

Carry Good Will Message.

Other phases of the developments in south Georgia will be shown the Atlanta business men and they, in their turn, will carry to the citizens of south Georgia a message from the business interests of Atlanta assuring them of the practical cooperation of this city in all moves for the development and expansion of the south Georgia section of the state.

Invitations to make the trip have been extended to more than 1,000 prominent citizens of Atlanta and it is expected that the minimum number to visit south Georgia will be 250. The trip is one of good will on both

DOZIER IS NAMED TAX COMMISSIONER VICE FULLBRIGHT

Prominent Athens Banker Confirmed by Senate To Succeed Henry L. Fullbright.

James H. Dozier, of Athens, was appointed Saturday by Governor Clifford Walker to be state tax commissioner to succeed Henry L. Fullbright, resigned. The senate promptly confirmed the appointment. The term of office runs until August 14, 1931.

Mr. Dozier is a banker and has been prominent in public affairs in Georgia for a number of years. He managed Governor Walker's unsuccessful race for governor against Thomas W. Hardwick, four years ago. He is a member of the Tidewater commission of the state game and fish department and is well known throughout the state.

Mr. Dozier is a graduate of the University of Georgia and prior to entering banking business was a civil engineer and later entered the lumber business on an extensive scale.

The new tax commissioner has been held for many years in highest esteem by Governor Walker and following the latter's accession to the governor's chair four years ago it is known that he tendered Mr. Dozier a number of choice appointments. He declined to accept any appointment, despite insistence of Governor Walker and other friends, until the tax commissioner's office was offered him.

Soon after Governor Walker was inaugurated he offered the place of trustee of the University of Georgia to Mr. Dozier, who declined to accept, although telling the chief executive that of all the appointments in the power of the governor he appreciated the offer of the trusteeship more than any other that could have been offered him.

Mr. Dozier will assume his new duties on September 1, Mr. Fullbright remaining with him until he is thoroughly acquainted with details of the office, it was stated.

Following confirmation of Mr. Dozier, the senate also confirmed appointment of Judge E. J. Hart, to be judge of the city court of Ellaville, Ga., and J. C. Rainey to be solicitor of the same court.

Vast Estate Turned Over To Mrs. Cecil

Vanderbilt's Daughter Celebrates With Party to 200 Friends.

Asheville, N. C., August 22.—(AP)—Marking the occasion on which she will receive her share of the vast estate bequeathed by her father, the late George W. Vanderbilt, Mrs. John Francis Amherst Cecil was hostess to about 200 of her friends here tonight.

The holdings include the large trust fund established by her father and her grandfather, the late William K. Vanderbilt, valued at several million dollars. Under the terms of the will, the property was turned over to Mrs. Cecil today, her 25th birthday.

The will of Mr. Vanderbilt, probated in New York March 25, 1914, when Mrs. Edith S. Vanderbilt and her daughter maintained their residence in the borough of Manhattan, stipulated that Mrs. Vanderbilt was to receive 30 acres of property at Bar Harbor, Maine; the property on "K" street, Washington, D. C., $1,000,000 to establish a trust fund and a portion of Pisgah forest, located in North Carolina.

With the arrival of the daughter at the age of 25, the residue of the holdings became hers.

Mrs. Cecil was married in the spring of last year to the third son of Lord William Cecil of England. Since their marriage they have resided here at Biltmore house.

The party held tonight was by far the largest since the wedding ceremony and attendant festivities. Among the guests present were many from New York and Washington. Mrs. Edith K. Vanderbilt, mother of Mrs. Cecil, received with her daughter. Mrs. Vanderbilt has been spending the summer at her lodge on Mount Pisgah, pending completion of her new home in Biltmore Forest.

A garden party for employees and tenants of the estate was held in the afternoon, several hundred attending.

A feature of the ball tonight was the presentation of an immense birthday cake, constructed entirely of ice cream, and fabricated by employees of the estate dairy.

MURDER CHARGE RETURNED BY JURY

Carl Magee, New Mexico Publisher Who Slew Bystander in Fight With Ex-Judge, Makes Bond.

East Las Vegas, N. M., August 22. Carl C. Magee, Albuquerque newspaper editor and stormy petrel of New Mexico, was named as the slayer of John B. Lassetter, state highway employe, in the verdict of a coroner's jury here late today.

Magee shot Lassetter, a bystander, in a fight with his bitterest political enemy, former District Judge David J. Leahy, in the crowded lobby of a hotel last night. A charge of first degree murder was filed against him today and he is at liberty under $10,000 bond.

The coroner's jury verdict said that "Lassetter came to his death by reason of a gunshot wound on the left side of his neck, caused by a bullet fired from a gun in the hand of Carl Magee."

ARCHITECTS' NEEDS SHOW EXPANSION, CRANE FIRM SAYS

More Specifications Asked in Last Month Than Any Thirty Days for Year.

More specifications to architects for building projects of all kinds have been prepared in the last 30 days by the Atlanta branch of the Crane company than at any other similar period in a year and this is an indication that a general stimulus is being felt in all kinds of business in Atlanta, according to L. J. Spencer, manager of the Atlanta branch, in an interview given The Constitution Saturday.

"Architects of Atlanta are busy men these days and we have been asked to furnish them more specifications for new building projects in the last 30 days than in any previous month in a year or more," Mr. Spencer said.

"There is business of all kinds being held out to Atlanta in all parts of the southeast and all we need to do now is to go after it," he continued. "Atlanta is the center of the southeastern section of the country and in many parts of the southeast genuine booms are in progress, not only in Florida but also in parts of Georgia and surrounding states. Atlanta business firms can get a large share of this business by simply going after it. All indications point to much activity in those sections of the southeast where crops have been good and where big building operations are under way."

Mr. Spencer said he had just returned from a trip to Alabama and Mississippi and stated that conditions there are excellent.

"When the states of the southeast prosper Atlanta is certain to prosper because a large share of the trade of those states is certain to come here and we are bound to feel the increases," he said.

The Crane company maintains a big branch house in Atlanta and also a branch in Savannah.

"Weare expecting a healthy increase in our general business throughout this entire section and our Atlanta branch will get a substantial share," Mr. Spencer concluded.

TREASURY STARTS ANNUAL CAMPAIGN ON TAX DODGERS

Washington, August 22.—Ten days ahead of schedule, the treasury department Saturday began a drive to collect millions of dollars from delinquent taxpayers and dodgers.

The collection campaign was to have started September 1, but officials decided to begin now with the hope of catching evaders unaware.

Thirty-three special investigators were dispatched to Florida to check up on the government's share of real estate transactions there. During the last fiscal year taxes collected in Florida amounted to $19,791,970, an increase of more than $10,000,000 over the previous year. Officials at the treasury anticipate that collections this year will be equally as large, due to the extension of the land boom.

Man Poisoned by His Wife

:: WOMAN NURSES HUSBAND BACK TO HEALTH ::

Gets Other Man Set Free

Cairo, Ill., August 22.—(AP)—Slowly recovering from the poison given him by his wife who desired her freedom so that she could marry an ex-convict, William Hethman today successfully pleaded with authorities for the release of "the other man," so that his erring wife would not be prosecuted for conspiracy with intent to commit murder.

Mrs. Hethman has admitted putting poison in her husband's coffee, causing him to become violently ill, so that she might marry Oscar "Red" Amos.

Amos was arrested on charges of conspiring against Hethman's life. He was released after Hethman had pleaded that he be freed, if his wife was to be prosecuted jointly with him.

"She was doped or she never would have tried to poison me," Hethman told police. "I love her and want her to continue to live with me and take care of the children." Amos was ordered to leave the city.

Mrs. Hethman is proving an efficient nurse for her husband, and hopes to have him restored to normal health soon.

"I don't want him to die, and I am going to live with him and be a good mother to the babies," she declared. The couple have two children, the youngest 6 months old.

Court Orders Man to Cease Visiting Child

Widow Granted Injunction To Protect Her 14-Year-Old Daughter.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

The third legal assault on Dan Cupid, who already has been battered in two former engagements in Fulton county courts, was launched Saturday—and the courts sustained the attack.

Mrs. Valeria V. Lanier, widow, of 146 McAfee street, appeared before Judge W. D. Ellis and asked the jury to protect Russelle Lanier, her 14-year-old daughter, from the ravages of the little love god.

The mother requested the court to grant a "love injunction" to prevent Steve Thompson from "paying any respects, communicating with in any way whatsoever, or sending presents to the daughter." Judge Ellis, who is disposed to deal kindly in such cases, made the restraining order permanent after an agreement to this effect was reached between the mother and the defendant.

Mrs. Lanier charged that her pretty daughter was left alone at their home almost all day, while she was away earning a living. Thompson often visited the home while she was away and the mother asked the court to stop this in order that "no harm might befall the child."

Attorney M. C. Rigsby filed the petition for Mrs. Lanier.

Mrs. Roy Pettis recently obtained an injunction to prevent her husband, a former Atlanta policeman, from having anything to do with Miss Edna Martell. Miss Martell and the officer since have violated the order of the court and eloped, according to information at Solicitor John Boykin's office. Miss Martell has been sued for $10,000 by Pettis' wife for alienation of the affections of her husband. The love god has defied court orders and attorneys and has thus far eluded searchers in this case. Pettis filed suit for divorce against his wife before Mrs. Pettis' actions.

The other case—that in which Jesse F. Tompkins, of 311 South Pryor street, asked that Harry Duncan be restrained from "showering presents and affection" on Mrs. Ella Tompkins, the former's wife, has been dismissed by order of the court.

COOLIDGE SPEEDS UP DAILY GRIND

Receives Several Visitors and Entertains Harvey at Dinner—Wadsworth Urges Tax Reduction.

Swampscott, Mass., August 22.—(AP) President Coolidge, at his desk after more than a week's absence, worked at a clip today remindful of the daily grind at the white house.

In quick succession he conferred with Postmaster General New on departmental matters, discussed the legislative situation, particularly tax reduction and governmental reorganization with Senator Wadsworth, republican, New York, and received Arthur Whitney, republican nominee for governor in New Jersey.

Names Port Collector.

In addition, the president found time to designate Marion O. Dunning to be collector of customs at Savannah, Ga., thus disposing of a vexing patronage problem.

Tonight, George Harvey, former ambassador to Great Britain, who was visiting Mrs. H. C. Frick at Pride's crossing, near here, was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge.

Postmaster General New gave the president an optimistic report on business conditions, basing his statements on increased postal receipts.

Advocating substantial reduction in income taxes and early action on a revenue bill, Senator Wadsworth expressed the hope that after taxation is out of the way congress will tackle the reorganization problem.

Woman Fears Her Pet Turtle

:: ADVERTISEMENT PLEADS FOR SAFE RETURN ::

Will Miss His Hot Pancakes

New York, August 22.—(AP)—Cedric, the pet turtle of Mrs. Edward Raynor, of Brookhaven, L. I., who came to her door summer and spring for four years to eat pancakes made from a family recipe 200 years old, has been kidnaped.

Mrs. Raynor advertised her loss as follows:

"Lost—If this notice comes to the man who took the turtle, will he please return him to Mrs. Edward Raynor, who fears he will miss his pancakes and also will never be able to find him way back to his winter location?"

"I want only to know that the turtle is well off," Mrs. Raynor said.

"If the man doesn't want to return him, I'll be glad to send him a recipe for the pancakes. I'm afraid the turtle will miss them and be unhappy."

Mrs. Raynor, like many others in Brookhaven, has made pets of turtles, especially those with initials of their ancestors carved on their shells.

When Cedric came to her house with the initial "B" on his back, Mrs. Raynor spotted him immediately as the pet of the Bartow family, her ancestors who settled in Brookhaven two centuries ago. Every morning except during strawberry time, and in winter when he hibernated, Cedric would waddle up to the porch for a breakfast of ancestral pancakes.

A few days ago, Mrs. Raynor said, a man picked up the turtle just after breakfast and drove off with him in an automobile.

STONE, WEBSTER GIVEN CONTRACT FOR BIG PROJECT

First Unit, Costing $5,000,000, Under Way by January, 1926, Senator Morgan Announces.

GEORGIA REFUSED TO ASSIST PROJECT

Warehouses, Cold Storage Plants and Free Port Zone Will Constitute First Unit.

Announcement that a large Massachusetts concern has taken over the project of constructing and operating the port terminal facilities at Savannah was made here Saturday night by Senator S. H. Morgan, of the first senatorial district, and a business man of Savannah.

From private sources it is learned that Stone & Webster is the concern which will develop the terminal project. The city of Savannah, it is understood, will retain title in the property granting the corporation an easement at a nominal figure over a long term of years and under a contract providing for a progressive development of the tract, which comprises more than 100 acres. Details of the transaction between Stone & Webster and the city of Savannah are being handled by Gordon Saussy, of Savannah, chairman of the Savannah Port Terminal committee, who has been in Atlanta in the effort to induce the state to develop the project.

Construction of the first unit will be under way by January 1, 1926, Senator Morgan said, representing an initial investment of $5,000,000. The unit will be constructed on the property fronting on the Savannah river now owned by the city of Savannah, Senator Morgan said. He declined to reveal the name of the concern which has taken over the project.

The proposition will not again be offered to the state of Georgia, Senator Morgan declared. "It has been turned down too often and Savannah cannot wait longer on this development which is so necessary to her growth and future prosperity," he said.

City Owns Tract.

The city owns a tract fronting on the river for about a mile. This tract is on deeper water that surrounds the terminals of the Seaboard Air Line, the Atlantic Coast Line and the Ocean Stemaship Company's terminals, Senator Morgan said. The unit, he believes, will prove of the utmost value, not only to the city of Savannah, but to all of Georgia.

The initial unit will consist of a series of bonded warehouses, cold storage plants and a free port zone, through which goods from foreign concerns may be shipped, stored and re-

GREATER SEASON OF CONCERTS SEEN

Suggestions From European Music Centers Will Be Given Symphony Orchestra here.

When the annual season of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra opens this fall a much greater and finer orchestra than Atlanta has ever heard before will present the series of Sunday afternoon concerts at Loew's Grand theater, beginning in October.

It is probable that a number of famous musicians from Europe will come to Atlanta especially to join this great local organization and a number of innovations in numbers and presentations will be included in the programs, as a result of a recent tour of the European musical centers just concluded by Mrs. George W. Walker, secretary of the Atlanta Symphony association.

Mrs. Walker arrived in New York Friday. Her three months' stay in Europe was devoted largely to intensive study of musical and other conditions there. She was accompanied by her mother.

Mrs. Walker represented the woman's division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce at the third annual meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce held in Brussels, Belgium, on June 21 to 27. While in Brussels Mrs. Walker seized the opportunity to discuss the working of the marvelous orchestra of that city, which played at an elaborate banquet given the commercial delegates.

Mrs. Walker was told by the presi-

Ingenuity of Plane Pilots Fails Before Arctic Perils; Modern Weapons Are Useless

British Writer With Mac-Millan Party Describes Dangers Encountered and Courage of Fliers.

[In the following dispatch, transmitted by The Associated Press, Maynard Owen Williams, widely known writer, describes the perils of the Arctic to those who invade its charmed circle afloat, afoot or on the wing.]

BY MAYNARD OWEN WILLIAMS.
(Staff Correspondent of the National Geographic Society.)

Aboard the Bowdoin, MacMillan Arctic Expedition, Pandora Harbor, Greenland, August 21.—The Arctic, as I have just seen it from an airplane, is the same cruel Arctic—only more so.

Sledging is hard and dangerous, but the dog motor provides a cheery companion. The dog can live off the country and be used as food in an emergency and an airplane motor cannot.

The Eskimo canoe known as a kayak is a fragile paper shell that takes an agile individual to manipulate. But it protects a man who cannot swim in water so cold that death would result from the attempt.

A sealskin tupik, the Eskimo's summer cottage, is frail, but it can weather a gale. A rock igloo, the Eskimo's winter bungalow, is dark and gloomy enough, but it is a welcome haven from cold and storm.

Airplane Almost Helpless.

Under the conditions we had this summer, it almost seemed as if an airplane flying over the beach where the Charles Francis Hall Arctic ship, the Polaris, was wrecked, is actually more helpless than were the 19 men and women who floated 1,300 miles on an ice pack to the coast of Labrador.

The region between Cape Alexander and Cape Hatherton, on Greenland's westernmost coast, has sheltered many Arctic explorers, including Kane, Hayes, Hall and Peary, but it had no equally safe landing place for planes this season.

Trips across Ellesmere island this summer meant that the fliers took their lives in their hands every time they crossed, and too much cannot be said about the courage, the judgment and the amazing ingenuity of the United States navy's personnel under the most adverse conditions.

Impossible to Land Again.

The very landing places they used before might harbor jagged masses of ice the next time they arrived. Within a few hours after some caches have been deposited, planes have found it impossible to land again within miles.

The Smith sound Eskimo is a primitive but he can live where a Ph. D. would starve. It would be interesting to apply an intelligence test to these Eskimos. MacMillan has paid hightribute to their ingenuity and resourcefulness. And our party has been amazed by them. Their manner of living is crude, they know nothing of the outside world, there are tribes which think they are the only people who inhabit the earth. They display not the faint beginnings, in many cases, of the cultural advancement of the pre-Columbian Indians which Dr. Judd has found in Chaco canyon. Yet they are able to cope with emergencies which would baffle highly educated men. And they survive in an environment where they and the tiny insects are the only conquerors.

Limitations on Modern Man.

The polar regions, hostile to the resourceful Eskimo, who asks little, puts harder limitations on modern man, who asks much and trusts to machinery instead of individual cunning and endurance.

The Eskimo's weapons against hunger and cold are reliable because they are simple.

Day before yesterday (August 19) we flew above Etah and the vicinity more than an hour and the only safe haven in sight was over our starting point. Even there one plane nearly sank and the others were seriously threatened by drifting icebergs. The hills northward toward Refuge harbor were covered with rocks, across which a man travels by stepping only on tips and having smaller ones roll under his tread. The coves are covered with ice.

Out we swung over Smith sound, with the northwestern horizon solid with jagged ice, punctuated by icebergs and broken by narrow, winding water leads. We sighted Cape Sabine, where the National Geographic society erected a farthest north memorial tablet in memory of the heroic sacrifice made by Greeley's men but we had to stay south of the grinding ice pack which bulged from Kane basin.

Cliff Region Picturesque.

The crystal palace cliff region, carved by glacier and wave, was especially picturesque, but not one sign of life did we observe between the sea and the interminable ice cap gashed with gullies. Etah seemed a real haven because there were the fuel and food which had been brought from thousands of miles away in cans. Did you ever think what the can means to civilization?

The scene was one of exquisite beauty under the bright sun, and we hope our cameras can convey to those back home some of the unusual features of these landscapes, never seen except by a few intrepid explorers of each generation. But there comes over one an indescribable feeling of loneliness—the scene is without one companionable feature, or a single sign of life.

The far north, so apathetic even to its primitive inhabitants, is brutally repellant, it seems, toward any machine, or any of the complexities of civilization. Those who can mount on wings as eagles are making new conquests, but they are running far more danger in their pioneering work than those who can run and not be weary.

Wonder That Few Return.

All the world honors Peary, but it is small wonder the men who have been up here, especially those of us to whom the arctic exploration is a new chapter of experience, come home to revere him.

Alongside us is the Canadian patrol ship, the Arctic, which has been north 13 times in 21 years. This ship has bulwark walls more than three feet thick, yet its captain this season cannot drive this moving fort north to Annoritok, 19 miles up the coast. In other years vessels have steamed the length of Kane basin without seeing ice packs.

Now, with young eider ducks straddling about on unseasonable ice, the old ice of years is blocking bays confidently counted on by Commander MacMillan as landing places for the planes.

With an open season, the fliers could have cast wing shadows over a far wider untrodden area than they have so laboriously explored.

Fox To Withdraw If Church Tries To Govern Belief

Riverton, N. J., August 22.—(AP)—Dr. Henry Fox, government biologist here, who was dropped last year from the faculty of Mercer university, Macon, Ga., for teaching evolution, and who has been asked by the Tattnall Square Baptist church here to quit the denomination for alleged unorthodoxy, today said he would go voluntary on one condition.

Quoting from terms he said he sent this week to Dr. H. M. Fugate, the pastor, Dr. Fox said he stood ready to withdraw provided the Tattnall Square deacons and congregation officially went on record as denying the right of an individual Baptist to be the sole judge of the soundness of his doctrinal views. Dr. Fox said this right had already been asserted and won by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick in accepting the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist church, "The Rockefeller church" in New York City. He cited Dr. Fosdick's stipulation that Baptism by immersion there was to be optional.

It was on assurance of this right by a Baptist clergyman, Dr. Fox said, that he himself was persuaded to enter the denomination in Clarksville, Tenn., in 1918.

After his troubles at Mercer university last fall Dr. Fox came here as an entomologist to do research work in the fight the United States department of agriculture is making upon the fruit-feeding Japanese beetle.

When he applied to the Tattnall Square church several weeks ago to transfer his membership to a New Jersey congregation the usual form letter to such effect was refused him, he said, on the ground that his public utterances were not consistent with Baptist belief.

H. D. Chapman, Macon church clerk, in a letter of July 13, which Dr. Fox revealed today, asked him on behalf of the church specifically to affirm or deny belief in the virgin birth and the divinity of Jesus Christ.

Dr. Fox answered on July 23 that the church authorities had failed to acknowledge a previous question he himself had already raised. Asserting that he had joined the Baptist church under the impression it had no fixed creed, Dr. Fox asked the deacons first to tell him:

"Do you, or do you not, unequivocally endorse the principle that the individual member is the sole judge of the soundness of its doctrinal views, and therefore is free to formulate the generally held doctrines of the church in conformity with what he conceives to be reliable knowledge and sound moral principle without dictation or interference from any human source whatever?"

Requested to Appear.

Dr. Fox was then told that failure to commit himself as requested left no alternative but to oust him. He accordingly was asked to appear in Macon on or before September 2 and show cause why his name had not been stricken from the church rolls.

When Dr. Fox countered that his own query was being evaded, Dr. Fugate replied on August 11 that enough had been said in the church for him to feel that an answer to the question would be unequivocally and unanimously: "No!" He asked Dr. Fox "to go out from us quietly."

Dr. Fox replied this week that he could not go to Macon for a hearing unless his expenses were paid and the date fitted in with his work. If, however, the Tattnall Square church definitely made "no" its answer, and sent him due official notice, the church could:

"Leave the rest to me."

CHURCH ACTION SOON IN MACON.

Macon, Ga., August 22.—(AP)—Final action in the case of Dr. Henry Fox insofar as the Tattnall Square Baptist church is concerned will be taken within a short time church officials here say.

Dr. Fox dismissed as professor of biology at Mercer university on account of his religious views which did not conform to the Baptist faith and whose church letter was withheld by the church here for the same reason, has written another letter to Dr. H. M. Fugate, pastor of the Macon church expressing a willingness to withdraw from fellowship on one condition.

This condition is as follows: "That the deacons and congregation officially go on record as denying the right of the individual Baptist to be the sole judge of the soundness of his doctrinal views."

The attitude of the church, according to local officials is that while the individual Baptist may be the sole judge of his doctrinal views, to a certain extent the individual Baptist, at the same time must be a Christian and must profess belief in the divinity of Christ. It is the claim of the church that Mr. Fox has not affirmed this faith and has even declined to answer the question which was directly put to him when he asked for his church letter.

Officials of the church here state that another letter is being prepared which will embody the views of the church on this matter and which will put the question of withdrawal squarely up to Dr. Fox. The exact form this letter will take has not been determined, it was stated but it will be prepared and submitted to the church for approval and it is expected that this will mark the final chapter in the Fox case.

Where Gold Comes From.

(From the Lincoln Journal.)

Recent figures show that Canada now stands third in gold production. First comes the Transvaal with an output of $198,000,000 in 1924. This was the largest record ever made by those famous mines. The commanding position of South Africa in the industry will not be challenged for a long time, for it produces more than one-half of the entire world's supply.

The United States, although second on the list makes a poor showing with a total of $51,900,000. This is only about one-half of the yearly output ten years ago. Canada's total in 1924 was $31,500,000 of which $25,700,000 was produced in Ontario.

Condition Caused By Long Drouth Subject of Meet

Athens, Ga., August 22.—(Special) A conference has been called at Camp Wilkins at the State College of Agriculture for next Wednesday of representatives from 31 counties in this section that will suffer crop curtailment this year on account of the prolonged douth.

The meeting is being sponsored by the Athens Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the State College of Agriculture. County demonstration agents, leading farmers, business men and bankers are expected to attend. It is hoped to work out some plan of relief, especially in saving the live stock of the counties which will suffer it is said, unless relief measures are adopted. It is stated that hardly enough feed stuff will be grown in many of the counties to last until the winter months and the farmers will be faced with the necessity of feeding their stock through the winter. The meeting will be at 10 o'clock.

The counties said to be heavily hit by the drouth are: Stephens, Franklin, Hart, Madison, Oglethorpe, Wilkes, Jackson, Pike, Spalding, Fayette, Fulton, Henry, Banks, Clarke, Oconee, Green, Morgan, Gwinnett, Rockdale, Newton, Jasper, Butts, Clayton, Hall, DeKalb, Walton, Forsyth, Barrow, Elbert, Milton and Campbell.

Only local rains have prevailed in these counties since crops were planted while in many of them some sections have not even had local showers. In Clarke, for instance, in the western section of the county, the last heavy rain was on April 12 while the last rain of any consequence in other sections of the county was June 10.

DROUTH SEVERE AT CARTERSVILLE.

Cartersville, August 22.—(Special.) Never within the memory of the oldest inhabitants has the Etowah river, which flows through this section of northwest Georgia, been so low. Rocks never seen before are visible in midstream and a person can easily wade across the river at several places where, ordinarily the water is quite deep.

Many wells are dry, people have been hauling water for weeks and stock are suffering for pasture, as well as water, though, so far, the town supply is not yet exhausted.

Consumers of electric current in this district are urged to be as saving as possible with power, because of the shortage which is being faced by the Georgia Railway and Power company, owing to the long-continued drouth throughout the north Georgia section.

TO CONSERVE WATER AT GAINESVILLE.

Gainesville, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—An ordinance to conserve water was adopted by the city commission here today, making it unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to use any water from the city waterworks system for the purpose of washing cars, sprinkling lawns, gardens, streets or for filling swimming pools.

On the first violation of this ordinance the offender will be punished by having his water supply cut off for three days, and on the second violation it will be cut off for 30 days.

SLAVERY PRACTICED IN ASIATIC STATES, REPORT DECLARES

Geneva, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Slavery is openly practiced in several Asiatic Mohammedan states, particularly in the Arabian peninsula, including the kingdom of the Hedjaz, where many slaves are girls who came from the Far East as pilgrims to Mecca, says a report by the slavery commission of the league of nations published today.

The commission recommends universal abolition of the legal status of slavery, and would give every slave the right to freedom without payment of money. It suggests the establishment of a concentration point to which freed slaves may be sent pending their return to the country of their origin and also recommends the extension of the right to pursue slave dealers.

In order to end the abuses that tend to make forced labor virtually a disguised form of slavery, the league of nations' commission suggests the prohibition of compulsory labor except for public works, for which there must be adequate pay.

French Battle Riff Hosts In Blinding Dust Storm

:: SKIFA POST RELIEVED IN HOT FIGHT ::

BY JOHN O'BRIEN.
(Copyright, 1925, by United News.)

Ojara, French Morocco—(By Courier to Fez.)—August 22.—I watched 4,000 French troops battle an invisible enemy Sunday during a howling, blinding dust storm that hid the sun and made the battle field a swirling pall of grit. Through the gritty gloom could be seen the flashes of rifles and the sounds of battle rang sharply in my ears.

"The Skifa post has been relieved," was the brief description given the fighting in the French official communique. That was all it said of the operations, which extended along an eight-mile front and compelled the French troops to cross the Ouergha four times under Riffian fire from the crags which commanded the crossing. For two hours the troops were handicapped by the suffocating dust storm.

A column of Senegalese infantry, Algerian cavalry and one white battalion of infantry left Ojara, 60 miles north of Fez, at 3 a. m., in inky darkness. Cigarettes were strictly forbidden. The columns advanced through the brush under a high peak, but despite the precautions for concealment, Riffian bullets began whizzing at 4 o'clock. Your correspondent was riding horseback with the colonel's staff and was just able to perceive the lines of infantry and the mule trains 100 yards to the right and left. Then came our first crossing of the Ouergha, which theoretically is the frontier of the French zone and the Riff.

It was near daybreak. Riffian sharpshooters were posted on every summit, their rifles spitting constantly. The column was across the river when the sun appeared. The Riffians were clearly visible then afoot.

Mounted French batteries opened up, deluging the mountain with hot metal while two planes sailed above dropping bombs on the Riffian positions.

The infantry had maneuvered into more open formation, covering a front of two miles as it advanced. Parties of from 50 to 100 were left behind to occupy the Riffians on the peaks and to guard the return of the infantry. It was dangerous work.

By 7 o'clock the peak overlooking Skifa, a mile and a half distant, was occupied by a convoy advancing from the open plain beneath. Another burst of artillery fire was directed at the peak where the Riffian snipers were dashing for cover like rabbits.

The enemy never was more than a quarter of a mile distant.

Dust Storm Rises.

Suddenly the sky blackened. A hurricane of suffocating dust swept up the valley, hiding the sun in darkness that was pierced only by the flashes of the guns. The Riffians crept closer under cover of the storm.

The colonel's orderly dropped, hit in the forearm and my horse, nicked in the knee, stumbled and fell as another bullet whizzed a bit overhead.

When the storm had passed the sweltering troops moved forward in groups, the Riffians galloping a few hundred yards ahead, firing as they fled. Many of the retreating horsemen fell under the hot French fire.

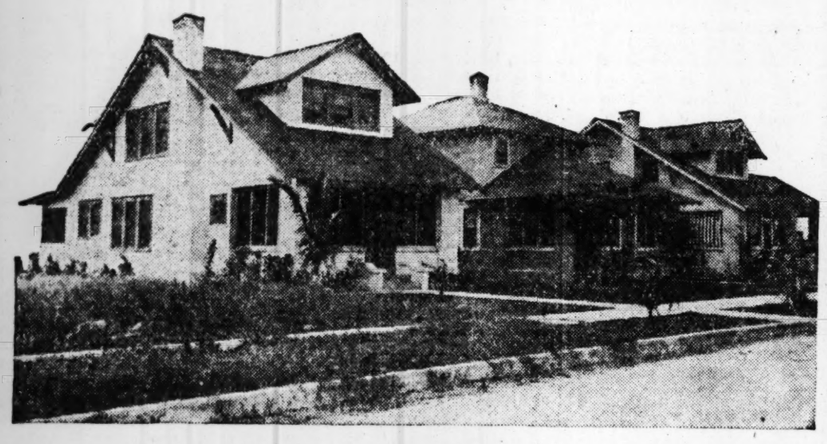

Through glasses I watched a relief battalion enter Skifa, where Senegalese troops had been isolated for a month. These filed out to join the main column.

"Now," remarked the colonel commanding the column, whose name must be omitted because of regulations, "we are going to see the real works."

After we crossed the river, the Riffians in the background had occupied rocky cliffs where they intended to wait to catch the returning troops. Twice the returning raiders forded the Ouergha but were forced back by the Riffian fire while the French artillery rained shells on the cliffs. The river banks are cliffs 100 feet high. There are no paths. We were forced to give our horses the reins, trusting to their sure footwork. Officers of the Chasseurs Afrique gave an exhibition of horsemanship seldom seen outside a circus, sliding down boulders and through crevices less than two feet wide.

We got back to Ojara at noon, when the troops got their first cup of coffee and a drink of muddy water. The colonel, gathering the folds of his Arab gandura (a sleeveless, shirtlike garment), his only outer garment, around his shoulders, replied to your correspondent's hopeful suggestion that there was nothing to do until tomorrow by saying:

"We are starting another raid after lunch. There is just time to grab a mouthful before going to the relief of Tafrant. I hope to accomplish that by dinner time."

"Moving Day"---Sept. 1st

WHAT ABOUT YOUR LIGHTS AND GAS ?

LITTLE more than a week remains before annual leases expire and thousands will be moving into new apartments and residences. Thousands of changes of electric and gas meters and new installations will have to be made.

You want YOUR lights and gas ready the first night in your new home, but you can easily see how impossible it would be for our Service Department to make all the necessary "Moving Day" changes in one day. LAST YEAR THE NUMBER OF CHANGES AND NEW INSTALLATIONS OF METERS AROUND SEPTEMBER 1ST TOTALLED NEARLY 7,000, and the number may be larger this year.

With your cooperation this heavy work can be handled more easily and promptly and to your better satisfaction. With your assistance, we can lighten some of your discomforts of moving. WON'T YOU HELP US TO HELP YOU?

THIS IS WHAT WE ASK:

Give Us As Much Advance Notice As Possible

1. If you have already signed your lease, let us know AT ONCE, even though you won't be able to move in for another week.

2. If you are still apartment hunting, make a note to let us know about it IMMEDIATELY when you find the place you want.

3. If you can get possession this week, or if you are moving into an apartment which is now vacant, let us attend to your electric and gas connections NOW before the Moving Day rush starts. CHARGES FOR THE SERVICE WILL NOT BEGIN UNTIL YOU MOVE IN.

Every minute counts. If you give us advance notice now, your name will go on the list ahead of hundreds of others who delay. It may also enable us to do the work for you ahead of time and have things ready for you when you arrive. With advance notice of all the changes or a large number of them, we can plan the work of our Service men more efficiently, map out routes for them so they can cover the city more quickly, save them from going over the same territory several times and thus enable us to give you service more promptly.

Make the Necessary Arrangements So That the Work Can Be Done When the Service Man Arrives

1. As far as possible, check up on the condition of wiring and connections in your home, so that defects will not prevent service being turned on.

Frequently the Service Man is ready to turn on your lights and gas and is prevented by difficulties of this kind. Sometimes wiring in new apartments isn't completed. Sometimes your apartment isn't properly piped for gas. Sometimes the former tenant hasn't removed his old appliances, and your range, etc., cannot be connected. Delays in getting service turned on often are caused by conditions of this kind.

2. Plan to have some one at your new home when the change is to be made.

Frequently the Service Man arrives and finds the apartment locked. Sometimes the basement is also locked, the janitor is out, and the meter cannot be put in. In making gas connections, it is an unchangeable rule of the company that the Service Man must enter the apartment and see personally that all outlet cocks are turned off before the gas is turned on. This is for your protection, to prevent explosions. So, if you can arrange to have some one at the apartment when the Service Man is due there, it may save you a delay of a day or more before our representative can get around to your place again on his second trip. If there is any difficulty about this, leave your phone number with us so you can be located any time during the day.

If you already have electric and gas service and are moving to a new location, notice of the transfer can be handled by telephone. Call IVy 4400 and ask for "Application Department."
If you are a new customer, you should call in person at the Electric and Gas Building, 75 Marietta Street, and sign up for your service at the "Front Counter."

$1,000,000 Baking Plant Is Opened For Service of Atlanta Housewives

Standing at the entrance of the new $1,000,000 plant of the Stone Baking company, located at the corner of Highland avenue and Jackson street, are thirty salesmen with their electric sales trucks, who will deliver Southern cakes and bread to Atlanta homes, beginning Monday morning in accordance with the new policy of the organization. In the insert, Mayor Sims is shown receiving the first loaf of bread manufactured in the "South's Most Modern Baking Plant" from H. O. Miller, general manager of the Southern Baking company and vice president of the subsidiary Stone Baking company.

"The south's most modern bakery plant"—The Stone Baking company—one of five southern branches of the Southern Baking Company system, located at the corner of Jackson street and Highland avenue, Saturday morning was dedicated to service of the southern housewife—a service policy which is to be formally inaugurated Monday morning with delivery of approximately 20,000 loaves of bread to Atlanta homes.

The big plant, which fronts an entire block of 301 feet on Highland avenue and extends 307 feet in depth on Dunlap and Jackson streets, is of a beautiful Spanish design of architecture. There are 83,000 square feet of operating space in the bread plant. The cake plant has an addition of 27,000 feet with subsidiary shops of 39,000 square feet.

The wheels began turning Saturday morning for the manufacture of the first loaf, which is to insure Atlantans that the company's plans for direct home delivery of fresh bread and cake daily will be carried out.

Witnessing the manufacture of the first loaf of bread at 8 o'clock in the morning were many visitors, among whom was Mayor Walter A Sims, to whom the loaf was presented. The presentation was made by H. O. Miller, vice president and general manager of the Southern Baking company. Mr. Miller also dedicated the plant to the service of Atlanta as the finest baking institution in the south."

Mayor Sims, in a brief response, accepted the loaf as the token of success for the unique plans of the new institution.

After a complete inspection of the new plant by the mayor and visitors they were escorted to the central shipping department and into the truck storage room, where a fleet of handsome electric trucks were viewed.

Painted in rainbow colors, their whistles blowing, these 30 trucks moved through downtown and residential streets in a spectacular parade following the opening ceremonies at the plant. The drivers distributed the products of Southern Bakeries to citizens who lined the streets to welcome the opening of the new industry.

Heading the parade was a large five-ton electric truck, said to be the largest in the south, equipped with musical chimes. This truck is to be used as a means of attracting Atlanta's attention to its newest big enterprise. H. O. Miller and M. O. Efird, general manager of the Stone Baking company, headed the parade.

The parade will start again Monday morning, but this time the trucks instead of moving in a body, will separate and visit all sections of this municipality, carrying with them loaves of bread and cake to Atlanta homes.

The entire building is equipped with electric elevators.

The policies and purposes of the new organization were explained by Mr. Efird, manager of the Atlanta branch. The organization is an enlargement and extension of the noted F. O. Stone Baking company, whose products are well known to persons in Atlanta and the south. The products are to be known as Stone's Southern Bread and Stone's Southern Cakes, the latter including angel food, cocoanut layer, golden sunbeam, sponge and pound cake.

Officers of the organization are: Harry D. Tipton, president; F. O. Stone and H. O. Miller, vice presidents, and M. O. Efird, manager.

Defense Attacks Letter Evidence In Sheffey Case

Maryville, Tenn., August 22.—(AP)—Testimony of George M. Clarke, of Chattanooga, Tenn., given in the trial of William D. Sheffey, indicted and on trial here for the murder of Luther Wells, that handwriting on a letter signed J. J. Emory and sent to J. M Campbell, was similar to known writings of the defendant, was challenged by counsel for the defense.

Cross examining the witness who appeared for the state, M. H. Gamble, of defense counsel, drew from him statements that series of letters selected from the Emory letter and compared with the same letters in instruments written by Sheffey were very dissimilar, and without the characteristics appearing in the defendant's known handwriting.

Examination of the witness was the beginning of a general campaign to tear down the identification of the Emory letter as being a disguised writing of the defendant which had been set up by the state through Clark, D. W. Pongue and Mayford Cusick, the latter being friends of the defendant and acquainted with his handwriting.

Testimony of these three, led to a ruling by Judge John Blair, that the "Emory" letter was competent for admission as evidence in the trial. This instrument indicating that the writer had a general knowledge of marauding cases in Alcoa and Maryville, and the state's announcement that it was ready to prove that incidents of this nature, referred to in the letter, had actually occurred.

DEATH TOLL REACHES 47 IN STEAMER BLAST

Newport, R. I., August 22.—The toll of the boiler explosion on the excursion steamer Mackinac rose to 47 with the death of Michael Gilligan, of Pawtucket, R. I.

There were 25 injured still in hospitals. Six were on the danger list.

Investigation of the disaster was halted at Providence, pending recovery of important witnesses now in hospitals.

Witnesses who testified yesterday admitted an examination showed the boiler had worn down to a thickness of less than one-fourth of an inch in places.

SOUTHERN PROMOTES CONFEDERATE VETERAN

Washington, August 22.—(AP)—C A. DeSaussure, divisional passenger agent of the Southern railway at Memphis, has been named general agent of the passenger traffic department with headquarters there.

The change was said to be a promotion for Mr. DeSaussure, who has spent his entire career with the Southern system.

Mr. DeSaussure is one of the oldest Confederate veterans living today. His business career has been devoted entirely to railroads that make up the present Southern railway system.

ANTHRACITE COAL PRODUCTION SLUMPS

Washington, August 22.—With the scheduled strike in the anthracite coal fields but a week away, the bureau of mines announced Saturday that production for the week ending August 15 dropped 157,000 tons from the previous week.

Production for the week amounted to 1,904,000 tons, a decrease of 7.6 per cent from the previous week. Bituminous production, however, showed an increase of 3 per cent with a total of 10,244,000 tons. Bituminous production since the first of the year is 13,000,000 higher than in 1924.

HEARST TO BACK HYLAN TO LIMIT

New York, August 22.—(AP)—William Randolph Hearst in his first formal statement in the municipal primary campaign, published today, says he will follow the leadership of Mayor Hylan in the campaign for renomination and reelection wherever the mayor may lead.

Without committing himself as to whether he would back Mayor Hylan as an independent candidate if defeated in the democratic primaries September 15, Mr. Hearst emphasized that he would abide by the mayor's judgment.

"I will do whatever Mayor Hylan thinks best to do," the publisher telegraphed from his California ranch. "I have perfect confidence in the loftiness of his purpose, and the sagacity of his political leadership.

"The objects which he and I desire to accomplish in public life, loyalty to the public interest, honorable adherence to preelection promises, and equal justice in government to the more prosperous and the less prosperous alike.

"The situation presents a choice between an honest administration by an honest man or private exploitation of the public by speculative financiers and corrupt bosses whose records are discreditable and whose word is worthless."

Governor Smith, visiting at Glens Falls yesterday, was asked if he was on his vacation in the Adirondacks.

"There isn't going to be any vacation this year," the governor replied. "I've got to get back to New York and get Jimmy Walker nominated."

Republicans have described the primary campaign as a fight to determine whether Governor Smith or Mr. Hearst shall control the New York delegates to the next democratic national convention.

Mayor Hylan's last opportunity to withdraw from the primary race and enter both the primary and the election as an independent candidate expired last midnight when the board of elections closed.

Tammany leaders pointed out that if the mayor runs independently, he must do so with a primary defeat against him and risk the loss of his chief supporter, John H. McCooey, Brooklyn leader, who has said he would abide by the results of the primary and support the winning democrat for election on November 3.

State Senator William L. Love joined half a dozen other senators who have presented the mayor, and gone over to Senator James J. Walker's Tammany camp because of the mayor's attack on Governor Smith's $300,000,000 bond issue, proposed for the elimination of railroad grade crossings.

Woonsocket, S. D., August 22.—(AP)—A gasoline war here between two rival dealers has brought the retail price down to 17 cents a gallon.

The price war started August 15 when one dealer cut from 25 to 21 cents.

Klan Will Join In Church War On Modernism

Sandusky, Ohio, August 22.—(AP)—The Ku Klux Klan has unequivocally committed itself to a fight for fundamentalism in religion, Clyde W. Osborne, grand dragon for Ohio, declared in an address at a district meeting of organizations near here tonight.

"We will take up the torch as it fell from the hand of William Jennings Bryan, carrying on his fight for the religion of our fathers."

Exactly how the klan will pursue this course probably will be determined at the national meeting of grand dragons at Buckeye Lake, a resort near Columbus, next week.

"Our great army of men and women believe in the teachings of Christ as recorded in the Bible and in the immaculate conception, but we do not necessarily believe in a literal translation to the extent that it is necessary to believe that a whale swallowed Jonah," he declared.

JUDGE TO CONSIDER RAWLINGS' APPEAL UPON OCTOBER 17

Wrightsville, Ga., August 22.—(AP) Charles G. Rawlings, Sandersville banker and planter, will appeal from the verdict of the jury which last night found him guilty of first degree murder with recommendation for mercy in connection with the death of his business partner, G. A. Tarbutton. October 17 was set by the court as the date for hearing the motion for a new trial.

The jury returned the verdict which carries a life sentence, after deliberating for nearly six hours, and attorneys for Rawlings immediately filed an appeal for a new trial.

Rawlings and J. J. Tanner, overseer on the Rawlings plantation, were indicted for murder by the Johnson county grand jury following the shooting of Tarbutton while the trio were on a hunt for bauxite.

Tanner, who claimed the shooting was an accident, was tried first and given a life sentence. An appeal to the supreme court is now pending in the case.

His defense was that he did not fire a shot, but Joe Brown, a friend with him, did shoot when the night watchman fired at them.

ESCAPED SLAYER TAKEN BY RUSE

Centralia, Wash., August 22.—(AP) Tom Murray, escaped killer from Oregon prison at Salem, was captured through a ruse today in a hotel here.

Philip Carson of Portland recognized Murray in Vancouver, Wash., last night and persuaded the convict to accompany him to Centralia, where he pretended they would rob a roadhouse.

Murray had separated at White Salmon, Wash., from James Willos and Ellsworth Kelly, convicts associated with him in the escape, and had agreed to meet them in the east.

After taking Murray to a hotel room, Carson called policemen and Murray submitted to arrest without resistance.

BIG GAINS CLAIMED BY FRENCH TROOPS OVER MOROCCANS

Fez, French Morocco, August 22.—(AP)—A French official communique issued today says:

"We have reconquered in three days territory which the enemy had taken three months to occupy."

The communique announced the arrival of Marshal Petain at Casablanca, where he was met by Marshal Lyautey, the resident general. The two generals proceeded to Rabat immediately.

Small mopping up operations continue, says the communique, and tribesmen are daily sending emissaries seeking peace negotiations. Calm prevails in the Ouezzan sector.

The general staff along the entire front is regrouping the troops, ready to strike a new blow from the recently conquered bases. Troops, which have been at the front for several weeks, are being sent to the rear for a rest.

Big Advertising Campaign For Labor Day Celebration Will Be Launched Monday

Details Completed for Drive To Bring From 50,000 To 100,000 People Here for Fete.

All details of the advertising campaign planned to bring a crowd of 50,000 to 100,000 visitors into Atlanta Labor day had been arranged Saturday and only the formal signatures of Alderman W. B. Duvall, chairman of the finance committee, and Mayor Walter A. Sims to the city's check were necessary to release the advertising copy to nearly 75 north Georgia newspapers, reaching nearly 500,000 people in 100,000 north Georgia homes.

It was expected Saturday that the campaign, which will run during the two weeks until Labor day, would be launched Monday.

The first week's advertising copy will be in the form of an invitation to Atlanta by Mayor Sims, with a strip of free tickets to the big entertainment events of the day attached to the invitation.

Invitation to Atlanta.

"Come to Atlanta to celebrate Labor day," is the caption. "The Empire state is on the threshold of its greatest era of prosperity.

"People are coming south by the hundreds of thousands.

"We want to keep them in Georgia.

"Let's get together in Atlanta on Labor day for a great good time and good will revival.

"Atlanta will furnish free entertainment every minute of the day.

"All we ask of you is to come with a friendly smile."

Free Admission.

The visitors will be admitted without charge to the city cyclorama, showing the Battle of Atlanta in one of the greatest paintings of modern times, to all the city park swimming pools, the usual charge for both having been removed by city council for Labor day, to a big dance at Grant Park during the evening, and a $1,000 fireworks display later during the night.

Plans for extending the celebration to include union church services at the city auditorium Sunday night and a big free show at the city auditorium Tuesday night were held in abeyance over the week-end after it had been decided not to call upon the merchants of the city for additional contributions to the entertainment fund. Most of the money to be expended on the Federation of Trades float in the Labor Day parade Monday morning, the prizes to be awarded at the field-day exercises at Grant park Monday afternoon and on the fireworks, music, dancing and other entertainment at the park Monday night was contributed by Atlanta retail merchants, according to members of the finance committee of the Labor Day committee.

Big Representation.

Louie P. Marquardt, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, declared Saturday that a larger representation of different crafts and trades would be found in the parade this year than ever before. With floats, most of them advertising chief points of superiority of Atlanta over rival cities, to be entered by civic organizations of the city, the parade should be one of the biggest advertisements Atlanta has ever had, both to Atlantans and to visitors who will see the parade.

Ivan Allen, chairman of the floats committee of the Labor Day advisory committee, which is composed of representatives of all civic organizations, Saturday had mailed the following letter to the presidents of more than fifty leading civic organizations:

Letter to Presidents.

The first Monday, September 7, is national Labor Day. It will be celebrated all over the country. The day's program in Atlanta is being sponsored very properly by the Atlanta Federation of Trades. All the other civic and commercial organizations, especially those in the President's club, are taking part in the celebration.

It is Labor Day all over the United States and is recognized by the federal, state, city and county governments. It is Labor Day for those who work with their hands and those who work with their brains.

The big idea is to have each of the other civic and commercial organizatons put an individual and appropriate float in the parade. With a little thought and planning a very unique float can be made to represent the activities of your organization.

It is a good opportunty to let the people of Atlanta know what your organization stands for. It will prove to the outside world the true meaning of the Atlanta spirit of cooperation between our labor and civic and commercial organizations.

Will you pledge a float for your organization?

Mayor Walter A. Sims is chairman of another advisory committee composed of general passenger agents of eight railroads entering Atlanta which is working out special five-day limit excursion rates which are to be announced during the early part of the week.

Prisoners Pick Lock Of Blackshear Jail; 5 Escape; 1 Captured

Blackshear, Ga., August 22.—Five prisoners picked a cell lock and escaped from the Pierce county jail this afternoon. J. Walter Dixon, one of the quintet, was recaptured after an exciting chase. Those at liberty are Leon Williamson, Homer Mizell, Ed Robertson and Albert Dixon, who were accused of stealing leaf tobacco from a farm near here.

The Failure.

(From Pearson's Magazine.)

Maud—When are you going to marry young Scribbler?

Anne—Never. I broke off my engagement as soon as I found that he'd never make a name at writing.

Maud—How did you find that out?

Anne—I submitted his love letters to nine publishers, and they all turned them down.

No Use for Them.

(From London Tid-Bits.)

"What do you mean, Smith," a friend inquired, "by pawning all your nightshirts?"

"Haven't you heard?" said Smith. "I've got a job as night watchman."

SALES OF TOBACCO HEAVY AT BLACKSHEAR

Blackshear, Ga., August 16.—(Special.)—The Blackshear tobacco market to date has sold 3,117,760 pounds which sold for $500,000, an average of 17.32 cents per pound.

The figures of the state department of agriculture in its report for last week, gives Blackshear from 39 cents to $2.44 on the 100 pounds above any other market in the state.

There was a vast quantity of common tobacco on the floors last week, which explains the reduction in average price. Improved grades are looked for this week and a consequent advance in prices. It is estimated that approximately one-third of the tobacco in the Blackshear territory has been marketed.

In the face of so much common tobacco and consequent low prices, it is gratifying to find lots of high-grade leaf. J. Harvey James, a Pierce county farmer, sold 1,986 pounds for $685.20, an average of 34.50 cents per pound.

The figures given for the Blackshear market were officially compiled by the Tobacco Board of Trade and are authentic.

RUSH EXPECTED AT CAMILLA.

Camilla, Ga., August 16.—(Special.)—With 85,000 pounds of tobacco sold yesterday the Camilla tobacco market completed another successful week. The prices averaged about 16 cents per pounds.

Two more weeks remain in which tobacco will be sold here and it is expected that a rush will prevail during that time.

One grower from a distance has engaged all the available trucks to bring in 100,000 pounds next week.

MARKET STRONG AT FITZGERALD.

Fitzgerald, Ga., August 16.—(Special.)—A total of 210,000 pounds of tobacco was sold on the local market last week, at an average price of $20.72 per hundred.

Fitzgerald's market proved exceptionally strong, the average having been higher than that reported from most of the other Georgia tobacco centers.

Loss of $3,000 Cotton Charged To Negro Worker

Ed Adkins, 37-year-old negro, who lives at 27 Randolph street, pondered all day Saturday in a police station cell over the pitfalls in the path of a dusky gentleman, who, having grown expert enough in the cotton business to become a sampler whose judgment was considered first-class, determined to branch out some and become a broker.

According to Detectives O. D. Evans and Pat Campbell, Adkins did his branching at the expense of F. M. Inman, who employed him. While sampling cotton, they said, Adkins would pick the finest grades from the bales before him and some of it would go into a bag which hung nearby. When the bag became sufficiently full it would be shipped to McDonough, and would be placed on the market, they stated.

In all, something near $3,000 worth of cotton had disappeared before three shipments were traced and laid to Adkins' door, the officers said. Enough cotton to make a bale was recovered from the consignee.

Public Opinion May Keep Mine Workers on Job

New York, August 22.—Public opinion will prevent any general walkout of anthracite coal miners on September 1, is the feeling that is daily increasing in strength among the industrial leaders who are now giving the situation their close attention.

In the event of all other plans failing, the power of public opinion undoubtedly will be used in a last-minute effort to avert the strike, now set to begin in less than two weeks.

It is pointed out that the fuel situation concerns so many and that public opinion is so large a factor in the success or failure of strikes today that neither the miners nor operators can afford to ignore it.

Even the less optimistically inclined have little doubt that if the strike should occur it would be of short duration, for it would effect too many directly and indirectly to long remain an issue between only the miners and operators.

On the other hand, coal dealers say that the part of the public which uses hard coal has been buying it ever since the first threats of a strike were heard and they declare that many a cellar bin is filled with the fuel now where heretofore they have been empty for another month or two.

CHILEAN POLICE PROTECT LANDING OF PERU PAPERS

Arica, Chile, Augus t22.—(AP)—The Peruvian newspapermen who were maltreated yesterday by a Chilean crowd, were heavily and elaborately guarded by police today when they landed from their transport Ucayali to sell copies of their daily newspapers. Five hundred copies of the paper were distributed without any untoward incidents.

A local Chilean committee has issued handbills urging the inhabitants of Tacna and Arica to remain calm and not to offend the Peruvians, as such action would give color to Peruvian claims that terrorism exists in the plebiscite area.

GIFTS PRESENTED TO HOWARD ENNIS AND M'CLATCHEY

Members of the senate, during a short recess Saturday night, presented to President J. Howard Ennis and to Secretary D. F. McClatchey handsome gifts of silver as tokens of their esteem for these officials.

Senator W. M. Sapp, of the 43rd district, made the presentation to President Ennis, while Senator Albert G. Foster presented the gift to Mr. McClatchey.

Both officials made responses.

Gifts also were presented to President Pro Tem J. A. Dixon, of the 17th district, by Senator R. O. Perkins, of the 24th district, and H. G. Griffin, doorkeeper, and Uncle Dave Strother, by Senator T. T. Knight, of the 6th district.

Fortune Recovered From Suite Of Accused U. S. Narcotic Chief

A. Converse, special agent, Rose Huebsch (center) and Mae Dales, inspect articles recovered from Chicago hotel suite of W. G. Beach, former head of local federal narcotic staff, who is accused of a $1,000,000 graft. Beach avers he is innocent. Government officials say he sold seized drugs back to dealers and fiends, or traded them for such articles as the $7,500 jeweled opium pipe Miss Dale is holding, or the $5,000 jade vase in Miss Huebsch's hand.

HOUSE IS READY TO "TAKE MEDICINE" FOR HIS CRIMES

Aampa, Fla., August 22.—Albert House, Tampa's confessed bandit, back in the Hillsborough county jail from which he escaped last spring, will "take his medicine" without "squealing," he said tonight.

True to the ethics of gangland, House will stand trial for his series of crimes here without divulging the name of the person who is supposed to have smuggled the saws into the cell from which he escaped. Shirtless and barefoot, House today was taken from the cell which he occupies with John Kenny and Paul Huhn, alleged accomplices with him in the $24,000 payroll robbery of the Hav-A-Tampa Cigar company here last March and removed to the office of the jail, where he spoke freely to newspaper men.

His speech, colored with the crisp language of the underworld, House told how he made his escape here on March 23 and his subsequent actions since.

"All I want now is a quick trial. I'm sick of hanging around this place already," he said. Asked the name of the person who is alleged to have smuggled the saws into his cell, House said he had them on his person when he went in.

"A lot of these guys in here think they know how I got out, but they're crazy," he said, with a nod toward the cell in which his alleged accomplices are lodged. "I'm the only one who knows, and I'm the only one who ever will know."

No special efforts are being made to bring House to an early trial, according to Sheriff Hiers today. "It may be in September and it may be December," he said. R. E. L. Chancy, county solicitor who, is preparing the case against House, said he hoped to have it ready some time in September.

AMERICUS FARMERS MAY PLANT MUCH TOBACCO NEXT YEAR

Americus, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—H. A. Cliett, county farm demonstration agent, will go from Americus to Tifton and Quitman next Tuesday to attend tobacco sales held in the two cities. He will represent Sumter tobacco growers at both places, and the first tobacco crop produced upon a commercial scale here will be disposed of at these sales.

Approximately 200 acres were planted to the weed in the Leslie section of the county this year.

Provided satisfactory prices are secured at Tifton or Quitman, Cliett plans to return to Americus and discuss with the various civic organizations and the chamber of commerce plans regarding the establishing of a warehouse at Americus. Indications are that 1,000 acres will be planted to tobacco in Sumter next year which would warrant the erection of a warehouse.

NIAGARA THREATENED BY EROSION, IS CLAIM

Washington, August 22.—(AP)—Declaring the scenic grandeur of Niagara Falls is threatened with destruction by natural erosion, Secretary Hoover today urged that international engineering attention be given the subject.

Geologically, he said, the falls are based upon a strata of hard rock, underlaid by softer material, and during the last 25 years the incessant flow of water has cut deeply into the soft strata. Near the center of the horseshoe, a V-shaped section of the overlying hard rock has broken down because of the removal of the supporting material.

France To Return To Gold Standard Banker Declares

Williamstown, Mass, August 22.—(AP)—France is determined to revert to the gold standard, Robert Masson, of Paris, French banker, said tonight in his fith lecture at the Institute of Politics on the "peace problems of France."

Whether she was to revert to her pre-war standard or stabilize the franc at a new, but lower value was yet to be decided, he said.

"In either case, we must begin by stabilizing the currency and the preliminary measures are the final balancing of the budget, which the present government is determined to see through: an increase in taxation to attain that object, which is being voted; a careful financial policy, avoiding an increased public debt and making provisions for its reductions; a settlement of the international debt question, and a continuation of habits of thrift among the public. All this is either done, being done, or likely to be done in the near future. Practically, the exchange will be stabilized or will fluctuate only between narrow limits."

TAX BOOKS COMPLETED BY BURKE RECEIVER

Waynesboro, Ga., August 16.—(Special.)—George Blount, tax receiver for Burke county, has completed the tax digest for 1925. The total taxable values are $8,449,624; the valuation for 1924 was $8,709,426. The 1923 values decreased $259,802; 502,798 acres of land were returned for $4,565,693. This is 54 per cent of the entire taxable values returned for the county. The average land value per acre for the county is returned at $9. The actual land returns range from $3 to $20 per acre.

The negroes returned 43,659 acres of the land at a value of $399,255, which is $9 per acre. The negroes own 8.3 per cent of the land of the county.

The tax receiver explained the slight depreciation in values to the fact that there was considerable supply of cotton on hand last year that was given in; also to some readjustments made by the tax assessors.

The 1925 levy has not been made by the county board of roads and revenues. For 1924 it was 10 mills and the school tax was 5 mills. The school levy for 1925 has been fixed at 5 mills for the county; the Waynesboro school district has levied 3 mills.

TRAMPS OF OCEAN ARE GIVING WAY TO GIANT LINERS

Washington, August 22.—Tramp steamers which roam the seven seas without a home port are slowly becoming extinct.

Ocean liners are gradually absorbing the ocean-borne trade of the world and are making serious inroads on the tramp ship trades, department of commerce figures show. Nearly four-fifths of the ocean traffic is now moved by liners.

Tonnage of motor and steam ships of the world increased 1,300,000 gross tons in the year ended June 30, 1925. All of the new tonnage is of modern type, and a major part is composed of motorships.

UNION PROTESTS KLAN DISORDERS

Boston, August 22.—A new element entered the Ku Klux Klan situation in Massachusetts yesterday when the American Civil Liberties Union, through a member of its national committee, John S. Codman, protested to Governor Alvin T. Fuller against placing any ban on meetings of the order.

Earlier in the week the governor received a protest from Daniel L. Harrington, president of the Massachusetts Law and Order League, urging him to take steps to halt further meetings on the grounds they tend to incite to riot.

Codman's protest was embodied in a letter which carefully pointed out that "the American Civil Liberties Union has no interest in the klan, either for or against.

"But it does take an active interest in maintenance of our civil rights, including the right of free assemblage," his letter continued.

Codman characterized the Massachusetts situation as the result of "attacks by unsympathetic outsiders" and submitted the argument that to ban the meetings would be "a plain invitation to the disorderly elements in the community to break up by force any meetings which to them were distasteful." He concluded his letter by appealing to the governor to "protect lawful meetings through the use of state police if necessary, and by the prompt arrest of those who interfere with such meetings."

As yet the governor has not made known his stand in a situation which shows no indication of bettering. He is expected to make some kind of an announcement early this week.

Meanwhile klan meetings are held with almost clocklike regularity in a two-day cycle. Every other day for the past ten days a klan meeting has been terminated by a riot of some proportion. At Sudbury on Tuesday five men were shot and at Reading on Thursday tear-gas bombs put in their first appearance. The local police are seldom able to cope with the disturbances, and call in the state police, who thus far have been successful in restoring order quickly.

Let's Avoid a Power Shortage!

An Appeal to Every User of Electricity, Large and Small, to Conserve Power to the Utmost in Order That a Complete Shut Down of All Service May Be Prevented

THE COOPERATION of every electric customer of the Georgia Railway and Power Company is asked in order to avoid the possibility of a complete shut down of service.

Owing to the long-continued drought throughout the whole Southern territory and the consequent rapid and continuous depletion of the water on storage in the company's lakes, it is essential to conserve what water is left by using only what is necessary to meet the requirements of the public.

With only enough water left to meet normal demands for a period of about FOUR weeks, we feel that all customers will gladly cooperate with us in making the present supply last as long as possible. We believe that you will agree with us that it is far better to save water by using less electricity than to exhaust the supply in storage by disregarding the emergency.

Steam Plants Running Every Hour

Rainfall during the first seven months of this year was approximately one-third below normal. To offset this we have been and are now operating our steam stations continuously for twenty-four hours a day to their full capacity. We have bought from connecting companies all of the power they were capable of delivering, most of it being steam power purchased at rates in excess of that charged our customers for the same power.

Owing to the continued drought connecting companies are not now in position to sell power to us. The only power we can now buy during the day is a small amount which we have leased from the United States government at its Sheffield steam plant near Muscle Shoals and a small amount provided for in a long-time contract with the Tennessee Electric Power Company.

Your Help Is Asked

Since we are entering upon what is ordinarily the driest season of the year, it becomes necessary to appeal for the most economical use of power possible.

We have been granted authority by the Public Service Commission to make a slight reduction in street railway service during the emergency.

We have presented the facts of the case to our large industrial customers at a series of conferences during the past week, and we wish to take this opportunity to thank them for the FINE SPIRIT OF COOPERATION which has been manifested. Almost without exception the industrial plants have agreed to cease operation on week days and operate nights, Sundays and Saturday afternoons during the emergency, the change to become effective Monday. By this action the industries have performed a distinct service to the public and this change in working hours will go far toward preventing a possible entire shut down. The reason for this is that we will be able to purchase steam power at night which is not available in the daytime because of other demands.

Municipalities using electric power for pumping water have also agreed to cooperate, and as far as possible will change the hours for pumping water from daytime to night.

We now renew our request to all other customers, in homes, offices and business houses, that they also assist in conserving electricity by using just as little as possible during the hours from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Beyond Human Control

The situation, of course, is one that is beyond our control. It is not confined to North Georgia. The rivers in every state in the southeast are lower than at any other time on record.

We wish to thank all of our customers who have notified us of their willingness to use only what electricity is necessary during the daylight hours.

DUNNING GETS JOB AT SAVANNAH PORT

Swampscott, Mass., August 22.—(AP) Marion O. Dunning of Savannah, Ga., was appointed today to be collector of customs at Savannah.

The appointment of a new customs collector at Savannah has been hanging fire for several months and there were at least a dozen candidates in the field for the post. Dunning succeeds George V. Denny, resigned.

ACTIVE IN POLITICS AT SAVANNAH.

Savannah, Ga., August 22.—M. O. Dunning, who has been appointed collector of the port of Savannah, has his legal residence here, voting in the elections recently. He, however, spends much of his time elsewhere, coming to Savannah for frequent visits. He represents south Georgia on the state game and fish commission and owns a yacht which is kept near Savannah. He is a close friend of John Monroe, considered for a long time a likely candidate for the collectorship. He has taken a prominent part in local politics.

Dunning attended the New York national democratic convention as a delegate from Georgia, supporting McAdoo until the Georgia delegation switched to Davis. He is understood to have done political service for the republicans in West Virginia following Davis' denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan.

Since the election of President Coolidge he has been active in the ranks of the republicans, it is said.

ALABAMA SENDING POWER TO GEORGIA

was stated. A total of $1,250,000 worth had been purchased up to August 18.

There is now about four weeks' supply of water in the giant hydro-electric reservoirs of the Georgia Railway and Power company and hundreds of tons of coal are being rushed to meet any emergency which might be caused if the water were exhausted, officials said.

The company has curtailed transmission, and cities are using their pumping stations only at night. Managers of textile mills, brick, marble, granite mining and other industries, using power in large quantities, have agreed to cut their consumption as much as possible and to operate at nights during the present crisis.

The Columbus Electric and Power company probably is the big buyer of Alabama power, according to officials of the power company.

PLANTS ARE ASKED TO SHUT DOWN ONE DAY.

Charlotte, N. C., August 22.—(AP)—On account of low water resulting from drouth conditions, said to be without precedent in the last 35 years, the Southern Power company today announced that it had asked that all industrial consumers of hydro-electric power produced by the company shut down their plants one day each week, beginning next Wednesday, until further notice.

The curtailment of the use of power will affect about 300 mills in the Piedmont section of the Carolinas, with more than 5,000,000 spindles. However, many of these mills have been operating on a part-time basis for several months on account of unfavorable marketing conditions.

Zone Schedule Arranged.

The mills are grouped by counties and a zone schedule has been arranged by which each group will close for one day each week, the several groups suspending operations on alternating days. Eleven counties in South Carolina, constituting zone five, are the first in which mills are to close, these being asked to suspend operations next Wednesday. Mills in eight North Carolina counties are scheduled to be closed Thursday.

"There being no immediate prospects of relief in sight," Charles I. Burkholder, vice president of the Southern Power company, said in a letter to its customers, made public today, "we are forced to ask our customers to assist us by power curtailment."

In an explanatory statement issued today, Mr. Burkholder said that the precipitation in the valley of the Catawba river, on which most of the company's hydro-electric plants are located, from the first of February to the present time has been less than 45 per cent of the average for the last five years.

Clears Complexion

"Oh! how clear and beautiful your complexion is today, my dear!"

THERE IS a certain joy—a certain pride—in knowing you are admired, whether it be from father, brother, husband or sweetheart! And back of that joy is the satisfaction of knowing all is well.

Men are fascinated by the charms of beauty. Women gaze with envy, secretly jealous, perhaps, wondering—hoping—praying for that attractiveness which is not theirs. But why the wondering—the hoping—the praying for that craved for attractiveness—that clear skin—that beauty. A clear skin—is the barometer of one's condition. A healthy skin radiates beauty. Pure, clean blood means a clear skin.

S.S.S. is waiting to help you. It will rid your blood of its impurities and give you that clear complexion. Since 1826 S.S.S. has been ridding people of blood impurities, from pimples, from blackheads, boils, eczema and from rheumatism, too. Because S.S.S. is made from fresh herbs and barks, it may be taken with perfect safety. Try it yourself. You will not only look better, but you will feel better, too.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

dent of the Bank of Brussels that the great 60-piece orchestra was composed entirely of the bank's employees.

After interviewing the conductor of this great orchestra and many other noted musicians during her visit to Belgium, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria, Ferrovia, Italy, France and England, Mrs. Walker says she hopes to give Conductor Enrico Leide a few suggestions which ought to help make the Atlanta Symphony orchestra's concerts even more interesting and entertaining. Mrs. Walker expects to be in New York with her sister a few days, where she will meet Mr. Leide and talk over definite plans.

While Mrs. Walker was abroad, a number of accomplished musicians, learning of her connection with the Atlanta Symphony orchestra, placed their applications with her for any possible vacancies, should any occur. She will advise with Mr. Leide regarding these applications and others which have been made from New York city, with the view of filling any vacancies which may have occurred here during the summer.

The board of directors suggests that those who have been sent subscribing membership blanks and who have not signed and returned them, do so now, as more than two-thirds of the seating capacity of the house already has been subscribed for, and they desire to give former supporting members preference. On September 14 the names of all subscribers will be published, at which time the board expects a rush for a greater number of seats than the house will accommodate.

Tickets for a season of eight concerts can be had for two people, each having a ticket to every concert for the loges for $20, for the orchestra $15, and for the first balcony for only $10. Those who have misplaced their application blanks may secure and sign them at Philips & Crew Piano company.

hot fights are expected in the second, with a three-cornered race; the third, with four starters, and the fifth, with three candidates having qualified. All others except the fourth, seventh, eighth, eleventh and twelfth have two candidates.

The board of education election finds races in two wards—the second and eleventh. Candidates have qualified from every ward but the fifth.

W. Zode Smith, general manager of water works, has qualified for reelection, and is not expected to have opposition.

In the aldermanic board, Aldermen R. A. Gordon and Jesse W. Armistead are the only members whose terms expire who have not offered for reelection.

Councilmen C. C. Aven, L. P. Baker and Ed H. Inman are not expected to seek new terms. Councilman W. C. Jenkins has cast his hat into the race for alderman and Councilman John M. House also will be a candidate for a place on the aldermanic board.

Through Saturday night the following members of the board of education had made no announcements that they would run for reelection: President John T. Hancock, of the eighth; Dr. E. Fred Morris, of the first; Emory Brooks, of the fifth; C. J. McLendon, of the tenth, and Mrs. Kate Green Hess, of the twelfth.

Registration.

Although the number of registered voters is not as heavy as during last year's primary, there is not expected to be any great difference by the time the books close. Approximately 20,000 had registered Saturday, about 7,000 short of the number of qualified voters last year, but a final rush is expected Monday.

Walter C. Taylor, city clerk and registrar, explained Saturday that to vote, everyone must register who has not done so since October 15 of last year. City registration is separate from county and state. No charge is made for registering.

SAVANNAH TERMINALS TO BE CONSTRUCTED

shipped to other foreign countries without the payment of custom duties.

"We have tried to give this project to our state," said Senator Morgan. "We have worked long and faithfully, for we realized what it would mean to Georgia, but politicians have blinded the eyes of the assembly. However much we would like to see this great terminal project controlled by the state, we cannot wait longer, for our growth depends on it, and we have been forced to place it in the hands of private interests.

"Had the state taken it over, as we entreated it to do, the costs for its use would have been less to the merchants and farmers of Georgia, for there would have been no profits to pay. A private corporation must have profit, and the concern which will take over this proposition will reap untold dividends from it. It will invest $5,000,000, but I doubt if it will ever be called on again to advance money. The profits will take care of future development."

Senator Morgan said the terminal area would be served with railroad facilities by the Savannah Terminal corporation, a joint corporation maintained by the railroads and steamship lines for common service in the city.

sides as the chamber of commerce has directed the attention of the business interests to the great growth of south Georgia while business organizations in that section have cordially invited the Atlanta men to come down and see for themselves the wonderful developments in agriculture and commerce.

Through an arrangement with the railroad lines the chamber of commerce has been able to get an attractive low rate for the trip which is set forth in the 1,000 letters sent out by the organization.

President Smith and Executive Secretary Benjamin S. Barker will direct the trip. Some of the most notable citizens of Atlanta will be in the party and will take part in the entertainment program arranged at various points on the tour.

"I earnestly urge that as many of our business men as possible make this trip," President Smith said. "We want our Atlanta people to take marked interest in the state's affairs and to get better acquainted with the needs, the ambitions and the progress of our sister cities."

Magee Declares His Conscience Perfectly Clear

BY CARL C. MAGEE.
Written for The United News.

East Las Vegas, N. M., August 22. Of course, I am heartbroken over the killing of John B. Lassetter, but my conscience is absolutely clear.

I am a member of the insane asylum board here and came here yesterday to attend its meeting. Judge Leahy, who is an extremely powerful man, physically, has been threatening me for months.

I was sitting on a divan in the lobby of my hotel about 8 o'clock Friday night. I was being interviewed by a lady reporter of The Optic here as to what had transpired at the board meeting. I saw Leahy come in the lobby and walk down the aisle toward me. I kept my eye on him until he passed, but did not speak to him or rise. After passing me, he whirled and hit me on the jaw, dropping me to the floor. I was dazed. Leahy kicked me several times, breaking two ribs.

The Colt pistol had dropped from my pocket onto the floor. I seized it with my left hand and fired at Leahy. As I shot, Lassetter jumped to grab Leahy and was hit. As Lassetter fell, Leahy rushed me viciously. I was still on the floor. I shot twice, breaking Leahy's left arm above the elbow. This stopped him.

I am writing this in bed where I am nursing broken ribs and a swollen jaw. I have instructed my attorneys to demand my arrest, a grand jury indictment and a jury trial at once. I want this thing cleared definitely, finally and legally. I am guilty of no fault. It was a terrible accident.

MURDER CHARGE AGAINST EDITOR

interviewing Magee before the shooting, testified as follows:

"Before I looked up, Magee was knocked toward me by Judge D. J. Leahy, who struck Magee on the right side."

Leahy, she said, "then struck Magee on the left side, knocking him off the divan onto the floor. Magee made no attempt to strike at Leahy or protect himself that I could see."

Magee Regrets Killing.

"I regret more than anything this terrible occurrence and am grief-stricken over it," Magee told newspapermen after the fight. He received several bruises about the face and body, and Leahy's upper left arm was shattered by the second bullet.

The fight and shooting closed another chapter in the high-tension career of Magee. In July, 1923, he was convicted of libel by a jury in Judge Leahy's court in connection with the publication of editorial attacks on Chief Justice J. W. Parker of the New Mexico supreme court. Sentenced to prison by Leahy, he was pardoned by James F. Hinkle, who was then governor, before being taken to the penitentiary.

A year later he was haled into court by Leahy for editorially criticizing the court, while other charges in connection with the libel case were pending. This time it was a contempt case. Leahy held him in contempt and sentenced him to three months' imprisonment. In pronouncing sentence Judge Leahy termed Magee a miscreant. He served one day and one night in jail and Hinkle pardoned him again. While imprisoned he is said to have smuggled "copy" to his newspaper, maintaining the attacks on Leahy.

Started Oil Probe.

Magee is credited with having aided in starting the investigation leading to the discovery of the "little black satchel" of Teapot Dome fame. Early in July, 1924, he was a witness before the senate oil committee and told the investigators of rumors he had heard about "$100,000 in a suit case running around in New Mexico." The committee later developed evidence that the $100,000 was from E. L. Doheny and was sent to Albert B. Fall, then secretary of interior, and negotiator of the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills naval oil leases to Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair.

Magee bought the Albuquerque Morning Journal from Fall in 1920, and in 1924 gave evidence to the oil committee regarding Fall's financial condition. He declared he had been approached with "Doheny money" when he had offered to sell The Journal.

Fought Jurist for Reelection.

The contempt case was the last flare-up of consequence between Magee and Leahy until last night, but last fall he waged a sizzling campaign against the jurist, who lost in his fight for reelection to the bench.

In the five years of activity in the political arena of New Mexico, Magee has been republican, democrat and independent. He deserted the republicans in 1920, declaring the organization to be corrupt. In 1921 he turned back to the republicans and ran against a close personal friend for office, but 1922 found him again on the democratic side. Last fall he was a candidate in the primaries for the democratic nomination for U. S. senator.

Airplane Has Engine Room.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)

An airplane which promises to revolutionize commercial aircraft is to be fully tested at Norwich by Mr. Frank Courtney, the racing pilot.

The feature of the design of this machine, which was built for the air ministry, is a central engine room.

As it is an experimental type, only two 450-horsepower Napier Lion engines have been fitted, but, pursuing the same lines of design, the experts declare that there is no reason why half-a-dozen or even more engines should not be fitted into a machine able to take them.

They see in it the forerunner of the type of airliner which will, when flying has become more fully developed, be plying regularly between London and New York. This experimental craft, which is built entirely of steel, and which is known as the Bodmin-Napier, has been under design and construction for between two and three years.

Instead of two engines being fitted one on each wing, they are grouped together in the engine room, and are geared up to drive a single propeller. This means that if one of the power units should break down when in the air flying could easily and safely be continued on the one remaining.

The craft, which in preliminary trials has been found entirely satisfactory, envisages the day when with six or eight engines in the central engine room it will be possible to hold one in reserve for use if any of the remainder should break down. There is no doubt that the airplane definitely marks a new era in a commercial aircraft design.

Indian Heiress Quits Husband; Annullment Will Be Sought

:: DECLARES "THEY COULDN'T GET ALONG" ::

Vinita, Okla., August 22.—Maude Lee Mudd Gordon has been found. She is with her mother and two half sisters, near Coffeyville, Kan., it was disclosed here today.

The Indian heiress left her husband, Earl Gordon, in Los Angeles, because they couldn't "get along," an announcement by William Simms, United States probate attorney and her guardian, stated. Annullment of the marriage will be sought.

Maude Lee, dissatisfied with her matrimonial venture with the former Miami, Okla., motor car salesman, left him in a Los Angeles theater and took a train for her home in Miami, later going to Coffeyville.

The girl, who is 17 years of age, ran away with Gordon to be married in Iowa several months ago. The honeymoon to California followed. It was feared at first that she had been kidnaped.

Simms gave his approval to the marriage, when it was learned that it was the girl's wish, but will take no part in the annulment proceedings.

DOROTHY ELLINGSON IS DECLARED GUILTY

San Francisco, August 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—Dorothy Ellingson, 17-year-old confessed matricide, was found guilty of manslaughter by a superior court jury tonight.

The young defendant took the verdict calmly. The jurors entered after more than ten hours deliberations. Manslaughter carries a penalty of from one to ten years, eligible for parole after one year.

WILKINS TO INVADE ANTARCTIC REGIONS

Oslo, Norway, August 22.—(AP)—Captain George Wilkins, British Polar explorer, has been here preparing for an expedition next year into the Antarctic, where he proposes to explore and survey the coast between Whale Bay and Graham's Land. Captain Wilkins spent four years in the Arctic with Stefansson and two years in the Antarctic with Shackleton.

While here he negotiated with the Norse Aero club for the purchase of Amundsen's airplane N-25 for $20,000, for use in exploration flights in the Antarctic. A Norwegian officer who will act as his pilot will fly the machine from Oslo to London, where it will be taken aboard a Norwegian whaler which Captain Wilkins has chartered.

The Aftenposten says Amundsen has been preparing a new airplane expedition for next summer from Spitzbergen over the pole and unknown Arctic regions to Alaska. Financial backing has been assured, the paper adds; and the expedition will include the American, Lincoln Ellsworth, who accompanied Amundsen in his spectacular, but unsuccessful flight this summer. The Dornier company will build Amundsen a plane larger than the N-25, equipped with many improvements, the necessity for which was shown on the last flight.

ENGLAND TO SCRAP 54 NAVY DESTROYERS

Portsmouth, England, August 22.—(AP)—In accordance with the decision for naval economies, it is understood that 54 British destroyers are shortly to be scrapped. It also is stated that the pay of seamen is to be reduced 15 per cent, which corresponds to the reduction in the cost of living since 1919, as based on official calculation. The officers' pay already has been reduced to this extent.

Florida's Tropical Beauty

GREAT OPEN PLAZAS mark the intersections of main boulevards and traffic arteries in Coral Gables. They bear seductive Spanish names like Granada and Ponce de Leon and Columbus and Segovia. And they do more than merely help to solve traffic problems, for their sweeping sun-baked walls of many-tinted coral rock, their dripping pools and wealth of vines and air of age-old leisure sound the keynote to the architectural and landscaping beauty of the finest suburb in the America Tropics.

This blending of beauty and service, this romanticizing of the practical, is the contribution of Coral Gables to community building. Unlike many communities that are merely allowed to grow, it is planned with vision and foresight.

No money is spared. In fact, $25,000,000 already have been spent on development and the ten-year program ahead calls for an additional expenditure of $100,000,000. And all that here, with every modern improvement, with great hotels, clubs, churches, schools, and with every recreational facility for golf, tennis, swimming, horseback riding and motoring, home-life may be more nearly perfect than anywhere else in the world.

Investors have made handsome profits, because Coral Gables properties are eagerly sought by home-makers, as a thousand beautiful homes attest. But even greater opportunities for profit-taking than ever before are now open to those who invest in the new Riviera section at pre-development prices. Politics of Today Lacking In Acrimony That Prevailed When Bryan Was Candidate

No Politician of Today Is Equivalent of Famous "Bloody Bridles Waite" of Colorado.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, August 22.—Of the recollections that Bryan's death evoked, the recalling of his earlier career and the contrasts and changes that have come in American politics, one aspect has been generally omitted, one that is consoling to observe.

We have no such acrimoniousness now as we had in the early days of Bryan. The present generation has seen nothing like the bitterness of the gold versus silver campaign of 1896, or other episodes not uncommon in the '90s. What politician today would be called the equivalent of "Bloody Bridles Waite," as Governor Waite of Colorado was called after he had said the American people must have the things they demanded, even if they had to "ride in blood up to their bridles?" La Follette was able to avoid that kind of phrase, and his opponents to forego that kind of epithet.

When Jacob S. Coxey found some things in politics not to his liking the form of protest that occurred to him was military. "Coxey's Army," which marched from northeastern Ohio to Washington, was a most colorful episode of 1894. That is recent enough for the leader, Jacob S. Coxey, to be still alive in the most peaceful pursuit of conducting a sand quarry at Massillon, Ohio. He turned up as late as the republican convention that nominated Coolidge at Cleveland last year, a most unobtrusive, shy, gentle, elderly man on the fringes of the crowd in the hotel lobby, decidedly not pressing himself on anybody; but, to those of us who had the interest to approach him, urging certain novel ideas about finance and the Federal Reserve System, which he hoped that someone more aggressive than himself would carry before the platform committee.

Like Crusades.

William Allen White wrote a description of that western mood of the '90s, which together with a similar article, "What's the Matter With Kansas?" made him famous:

"It was a fanaticism like the Crusades. Indeed, the delusion that was working on the people took the form of religious frenzy. Sacred hymns were torn from their pious tunes to give place to words which deified the cause and made gold—and all its symbols, capital, wealth, plutocracy—diabolical. At night, from ten thousand little white schoolhouse windows, lights twinkled back vain hope to the stars. For the thousands who assembled under the schoolhouse lamps believed that when their legislature met and their governor was elected, the millennium would come by proclamation. They sang their barbaric songs in unrhythmic jargon, with something of the same mad faith that inspired the martyrs going to the stake. Far into the night the voices rose—women's voices, children's voices, the voices of old men, of youths and of maidens, rose on the ebbing prairie breezes, as the crusaders of the revolution rode home, praising the people's will as though it were God's will, and cursing wealth for its inequity. It was a season of shibboleths and fetishes and slogans. Reason slept; and the passions—jealousy, covetousness, hatred—ran amuck; and whoever would check them was crucified in public contumely."

Those words of William Allen White adequately describe the western mood out of which Bryan sprang. It was that—to an audience surprised and almost crazed with delight to find its passions voiced so truly and so eloquently in the "Cross of Gold" speech—it was that which nominated Bryan.

Won Nomination.

Bryan, having won the 1896 nomination with the "Cross of Gold" speech, lost no time in throwing his immense energy into the campaign for the election. His opponent, McKinley, remaining quietly at his home in Canton, Ohio, was conducting the kind of campaign that has made the phrase "front porch" familiar in American politics. But Bryan, a few weeks later set ou for New York to make the formal beginning of his campaign in the heart of "the enemy's country"—this was his common phrase for the east.

Bryan's New York speech, his second important one of the campaign, reassured the east, and fooled it. In this speech Bryan practiced the same restraint that had been, in spite of the furore it caused, one of the characteristics of the "Cross of Gold" speech. That restraint—it was purely a matter of conscious art, for actually Bryan was passionate both in his earnestness about the principle and his personal ambition for office—that restraint was characteristic of Bryan's whole conduct of the subsequent campaign. In his New York speech he was so subdued in manner and in substance that one of the republican New York papers printed a cartoon entitled, "A False Alarm," in which Bryan was represented as a boy reading a long roll of manuscript, while Father Knickerbocker was returning to his house with a fire extinguisher under his arm and a complacent look on his face.

The New York "Nation," describing the New York speech, said that the large audience that came expecting a duplication of Bryan's Chicago "Cross of Gold" performance, found him "transformed into a Professor Dryasdust posing through two mortal hours," and as James Ford Rhodes records, "New York and other eastern financial centers breathed a sigh of relief."

The reason for the comparative quiet of Bryan's New York speech was that he read it from manuscript. That handicap to oratorical fireworks Bryan incurred deliberately. He has told the reason:

"The determination to read the speech was formed as soon as its preparation was commenced. This being the first speech of the campaign, it would necessarily be subjected to hostile criticism by the opposition press, and I was compelled to choose between extemporaneous speech, which would be less concise and comprehensive, and a speech which, because read from manuscript, would disappoint the audience. I knew, too, that in order to secure the publication of an accurate report of the speech in the daily papers, it would be necessary to furnish a copy in advance of delivery; and I know that if delivered from memory it would be taken down in shorthand and compared with the copy furnished to the press. After weighing the relative advantages of, and objections to, the two modes of delivery, I concluded that it was the part of wisdom to disappoint the few thousands who would be in the hall in order to reach the hundreds of thousands who would read it in print."

Caused Great Change.

This account by Bryan of his reasons for reading his New York speech explains a revolution that has taken place in political speech-making, a revolution that is one of the striking changes wrought during the past quarter-century. In order to provide newspapers all over the country with advance copies, it has become practically universal for public men to write out in advance such speeches as are important enough to be likely to be published at all. The difference between a speech written out coldly in a man's study and one fired with the spontaneous fusion of the speaker's spirit and the audience's—between these two there is a world of difference; and the exigencies of the press have taken from the present generation much of the dramatic emotion that an older day got from politics. More lately public speeches have been harnessed down yet more flatly by conditions that attend the coming of the radio.

Practiced Restraint.

Throughout the entire 1896 campaign Bryan, in proportion as his superb insight into popular psychology called for it, practiced restraint. It was not Bryan who was violent. It was his opponents.

A New York clergyman, the Rev. Thomas Dixon, spoke of Bryan as "a mouthing, slobbering demagogue, whose patriotism is all in his jawbone," at which characterization, according to The New York World's account, "the audience howled." (Later Mr. Dixon left the ministry and became widely known as an author of rather lurid novels and motion pictures, of which "The Clansman" is typical.) The Rev. C. H. Parkhurst, of New York, spoke of the silver movement as inimical to credit and an attempt, "deliberate and hot-blooded, to destroy what little of it remains. I dare, in God's pulpit, to brand such attempts as accursed and treasonable."

This sort of thing was not mere ordinary political fustian. It was the sincere expression of acute alarm. The New York Nation spoke with a detachment most uncommon in the east, when it said that "probably no man in civil life has succeeded in inspiring so much terror, without taking life, as Bryan."

The New York Sun, having the shrewdness to temper violence with wit, said: "He was born eloquent and attracted much attention by repeating 'Casabianca' when he was only 11 months old. He is not very much older now, but much more eloquent; and his eloquence is of the inspired sort, like that of a phonograph or telephone or speaking tube. Whenever he opens his lips words of fire fly out, Roman candles, cannon crackers, rockets, pin-wheels. A very beautiful show, but, as the Honorable Tobias Castor says: 'What it's all about, the Lord only knows.'" . . .

Roosevelt, then comparatively unknown, said of Bryan and some of his associates, that they "are, as regards the essential principles of government, in hearty sympathy with their remote skin-clad ancestors who lived in caves and fought one another with stone-headed axes and ate the mammoth woolly rhinoceros."

Of the almost universal violence of Bryan's opponents, one of the less intemperate examples was in Henry Watterson's Louisville Courier-Journal: "Mr. William J. Bryan has come to Kentucky, and Kentuckians have taken his measure. He is a boy orator. He is a dishonest dodger. He is a daring adventurer. He is a political faker. He is not of the material of which the people of the United States have ever made a president, nor is he even of the material of which any party has ever before made a candidate."

Among the epithets devised by other papers and antagonists, or devised by friends and used by enemies, in sarcasm, were: "Bryan the Brave," "the Great Commoner," "the Peerless One," "the Magnet of the Platte," "the Boy Orator of the Platte." About this last designation of Bryan, Senator Foraker had a brutal but witty comment on the Platte river: "Six inches deep and six miles wide at the mouth." Of this kind of epithet and epigram a merciless degree and quantity was heaped on Bryan.

It was from Bryan's enemies that the violence of the campaign came. It was the cultivated east, its foremost editors and some of its foremost clergymen who ranted. Bryan steadily practiced restraint, practiced it as a matter of art, and shrewdly turned his opponents' violence to his own purposes. In his speeches he used to repeat what his enemies said of him—repeat their words with a smile and manner that was subtly designed as half-way between Christ forgiving his enemies and John L. Sullivan showing himself a good sport.

No Such Epithets.

In no recent political campaign have we had any such epithets as these 1896 ones. No republicans yelled names like that at John W. Davis or James M. Cox, or even at Woodrow Wilson, though occasionally the phrases applied to Wilson were pretty violent. No democrat searched the coal-cellar of his vocabulary for any such words to hurl at Coolidge or Harding or Hughes or Taft or Roosevelt.

It seemed just a few weeks ago as if the nearest equivalent to this 1896 violence of speech was being brewed about Bryan again. Also again it was Bryan's opponents, rather than himself, who contributed the more extreme violence. The tenseness of feeling that was just getting under way at the Scopes trial was a reminder of how embittered feeling can become over questions and feelings deeply held. Looking not at American history alone, but at the farther reaches of history, it is evident that controversies in the field of religion can become even more violent than economic controversies. That is one reason a good many thoughtful people hope we can keep away from our present acute susceptibility to excitement about questions in the field of sectarianism and religion.

LOW-GRADE TOBACCO HOLDS PRICE DOWN

Macon, Ga., August 22.—A low grade of tobacco continued to be offered on most of the markets yesterday, in consequence the average price for the state was just under 17 cents. Highe rprices were paid for the better grades.

Bainbridge announced that 600,000 pounds of tobacco has been sold there this season at an average price of 13.9 cents a pound. That market will remain open until September 4.

The highest price paid at Thomasville was 40 cents. The market was strong there and the bidding spirited.

Besides the two regular sales at Vidalia an extra sale was put on to accommodate one grower who arrived late with 10,000 pounds.

The record for the day:

Market.	Lbs. Sold.	Cash Paid.	Ave. Price
Alma	86,560	$18,194.81	21.02
Bainbridge	59,146	9,284.92	15.7
Cairo	35,000	4,900.00	14.0
Camilla	75,000	12,000.00	16.0
Fitzgerald	79,828	15,566.46	19.5
Pelham	92,948	12,533.47	13.45
Quitman	56,607	9,001.31	16.07
Thomasville	72,820	12,525.04	17.2
Vidalia	60,000	10,500.00	17.5

WAYCROSS MARKET HAS LARGE SALE.

Waycross, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—A total of 75,152 pounds of tobacco was sold at the market here at the last sale of the week, bringing a total of $10,801, an average of 16 cents a pound.

HIGH AVERAGE PAID AT ALMA.

Alma, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) A total of $6,560 pounds of tobacco was sold on the Alma market at the last sale of the week, bringing an average of 21.02 cents a pound.

HEAVY SALES AT QUITMAN.

Quitman, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—A total of 56,007 pounds of tobacco was sold here yesterday on the floor of the Fenner warehouse, bringing a total of $9,001.31.

SALES INCREASE AT BAINBRIDGE.

Bainbridge, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—W. C. Murphy of the Vada road section topped the market here yesterday with a pile of tobacco, bought by R. J. Reynolds company for 40 cents a pound. He brought 622 pounds, which averaged 26.8 cents a pound. This was a record price per pound and average for this week.

Yesterday's sales totaled 32,355 pounds with an average of 14.7 cents. Farmers are realizing the importance of bringing their tobacco to market and sales have increased each day this week.

Pelham, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Total sales on Pelham's tobacco market today were 79,956 pounds for the sum of $11,528, an average of 14.42 cents a pound.

Pelham continues to print actual sales and price averages, including all grades for each day, believing the public will appreciate this more than indefinite and exaggerated figures.

This policy is already proving wise. Tobacco has been brought here from quite a distance, three truckloads today came a distance of 135 miles from western Florida. The highest price was 42 cents and the price range was good on better grades, although the average was considerably lowered by poor quality tobacco.

BLACKSHEAR MARKET CONTINUES HIGH.

Blackshear, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Tobacco on the Blackshear market continues to sell high. Today the weed took a decided upward trend and indications are that better prices are in sight for the rest of the season. Four lots of tobacco grown on the farm of J. M. Purdom, weighing 5,086 pounds, sold for an average of 33.27, bringing net after deducting all warehouse charges, $1,692.10. The lot grown by Charlie Day, weighing 1,130 pounds, averaged him 38 cents. J. M. Clark sold a lot of 1,298 pounds at an average of 37.40 cents. Good tobacco was in demand throughout the entire sales on all warehouse floors, and many excellent sales were recorded. The top price for the day was made by Charlie Day, who received 55 cents a pound for a basket of his fine wrappers. There was sold at all warehouses 312,697 pounds, at an average of 17.32 cents.

Anti-Smuggling Commissioners In Agreement

Washington, August 22.—Commissioners representing the United States and Canada have reached a final agreement on regulations which put teeth in the U. S.-Canada anti-smuggling treaty, the state department announces.

The regulations, which were not made public, will be submitted to the respective governments for approval.

The conference made remarkable speed in agreeing on the regulations, having held its first meeting Thursday. The treaty provides for mutual exchange of information about suspected smugglers, and gives Canada the right to transport liquor across American territory in Alaska to the Yukon territory.

At the first meeting Secretary of State Kellogg informed the conference that the Washington government desired provisions of extradition to be incorporated in the regulations.

Smith, judge of the Orange county court, was unanimously chosen by the Orange county bar association last night, as that organization's candidate to succeed Judge Charles O. Andrews of the seventeenth judicial circuit, who has announced his decision to resign effective November 1.

"There are sound reasons for the continued development of cooperative apartment houses."

Cooperative Apartments Develop As First-Class Home Investment

"They reduce rent, eliminate vacancies, and assure a certainty of tenure."

BY FRANK PARKER, Ph.D.
(Professor of Finance, Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania.)

Cooperative ownership of apartments is not a new idea. The movement was begun about 1880 by a group of persons who erected in New York city what was then known as a "building containing French flats." The venture was so successful that similar projects were started in the more fashionable residential areas of New York city, notably Fifth avenue and Madison avenue. Although the career of cooperative apartments suffered a temporary setback with the failure of an enormous enterprise known as the Navarro Apartments, occupying a large plot of ground facing Central park at Fifty-ninth street, the movement became popular again during the period of 1905-1910, when the demand for apartments in New York city exceeded the supply. Unfortunately, the promoters of several apartments had exaggerated the advantages accruing from cooperative ownership and when the actual performance did not meet the expectations of the owners, cooperative apartments received another setback.

As a result of the shortage in housing facilities following the world war, the attention of the public was again attracted to the cooperative apartment idea. Not only were new cooperative apartment houses erected, but older buildings were remodeled and sold to the tenants under cooperative ownership plans. Today the cooperative apartment house has become an institution in home construction throughout the United States.

Growth of the Idea.

The present growth in the development of apartment houses is due to the increased cost of construction together with the increased expenses and difficulties of maintaining individual homes. The low construction cost of the individual home prior to 1920 was attributable to plentiful supply of labor, cheap building materials and relatively cheap transportation therefor, but this low construction cost vanished with the era of prosperity in 1919-20, and thus far has shown no signs of returning. Moreover, the problems of servants, coal, heat, garbage and ash disposal and general repairs seem daily to grow more burdensome to many householders. As a consequence the present generation in seeking a means of escape from the financial and physical burdens entailed by the ownership of an individual home has tended to turn to cooperative apartments. Before cooperative apartment houses may be regarded as a competitor of the individual house, however, it is necessary for it to be so planned as to afford all of the advantages of the individual house and at the same time eliminate or minimize the disadvantages of the latter.

The advantages of an individual house which the builders of cooperative apartment houses must consider are artistic surroundings, privacy and adequate space, light and air. It is interesting to note that the developers of cooperative apartments whose efforts have been marked with signal success have studiously achieved the advantages of the individual house in the construction of their cooperative apartments. For example, one of the prominent builders of cooperative apartments in New York city by the employment of competent architects, by a utilization of only 40 per cent of the total lot area in building, by the construction of only two apartments to a floor together with push-button, automatic elevators and by the employment of first-class landscape gardeners, has attained individuality, space, light and air, privacy and cooperative apartment for his apartment house projects. If the cooperative apartment house can equal or exceed the individual house in physical comfort and convenience then its continued development must depend ultimately on the financial economy to be gained thereby.

Reduce Rent Costs.

Today there are several sound reasons for the continued development of cooperative apartment houses. First, as measured by the experience of the past decade, cooperative apartments effect a reduction in rent to the owners from 25 per cent to 50 per cent of what they would otherwise pay as tenants, this percentage tending to increase with an apartment conservatively financed on a semi-cooperative basis.

The factors responsible for this reduction in rent to the owners of cooperative apartments are:

(a) Elimination or reduction of losses from vacant apartments.

(b) Reduction of losses from uncollectable rents.

(c) Economies effected in repairs, maintenance and decorations, due on the one hand to mutual forbearance by the occupants of the apartment, and due, on the other hand, to the saving resulting from wholesale contracts and purchases on such items as coal, janitor service, garbage disposal, etc.

(d) Reduction in expenditures for repairs due to a comparatively infrequent shifting of tenants.

(e) Reduction in the expenses of management, advertising, brokerage fees, etc.

Second, cooperative apartments, especially of the fully cooperative type, assure a certainty of tenure which is desirable in periods of housing shortage and high rents. Third, a modern cooperative apartment built upon a convenient and accessible site, endowed with architectural individuality and set in an artistic environment with plenty of land about it, gives to the home-seeker the same varied choice of size, location, light and air, as are available in the selection of an individual home, while at the same time it secures these advantages at a lower cost.

Two General Plans.

There are two general plans according to which a cooperative apartment house may be financed. The older plan, known as the semi-cooperative plan, involves the capitalization of a corporation on a basis whereby 50 per cent to 80 per cent of the total cost of the property, including therein the cost of land and building, is financed by means of mortgages and the balance by the sale of stock to the cooperative owners. Money raised by means of mortgages is usually financed by a first mortgage to the extent of 50 per cent to 55 per cent of the total, and a second mortgage for the remainder, although it is not unusual to find a well-located cooperative apartment house, assured of an exceedingly stable rental income, financed by means of a first mortgage up to 60 per cent of the total fair market value of the property. About half of the apartments are then set aside for the occupancy of the owners of the stock representing the cash equity invested in the property.

An estimate of the current rental value of the remaining apartments is then made and such apartments are rented to tenants. The cooperative owners are obliged to meet any deficit between the return from the rented apartments and the actual expenses incident to the opration of the entire apartment house. The more modern plan, termed the fully cooperative plan, of financing a cooperative apartment house involves a first mortgage amounting to 50 per cent of the total cost of the property, including therein the cost of land and building, while the remaining 50 per cent is furnished by the subscription of stockholders to the cooperative corporation. Under this plan no apartments are rented to tenants per se, occupancy of the apartments being limited to the stockholding owners. All the yearly revenues necessary to the operation of the apartment are raised by the stockholding owners, thus eliminating entirely speculation on rental income which the semi-cooperative plan entails.

Progress in Five Years.

During the last five years remarkable progress has been made in the development of organizations, the special function of which is to organize and manage cooperative apartment houses. While such organizations perform a distinct service at reasonable cost, it by no means follows that a cooperative apartment house cannot be soundly financed and economically managed by a group of individuals acting in concert. Group action is just as certain as a special organization of making the cooperative apartment venture a success, provided it develops the project in the light of experience that has accumulated during the past two decades. This experience shows that the following factors are fundamentally important in the development and erection of a cooperative apartment house.

1. A fair purchase price for the land. One element in cooperative apartment house development that has invited some stinging criticism has been the obvious attempts on the part of real estate promoters to foster the cooperative apartment house project as a means of unloading a plot of land onto the prospective apartment owners at an excessive price. Contrariwise, a large measure of the success of the previously mentioned organization in New York city is to be ascribed to the fact that a tract of land half the size of Central park, upon which cooperative apartment houses have been erected, was bought as farm land on an acreage basis, with the result that in the total cost of an apartment house the items of land is of extremely reasonable proportions.

2. Superior location of site from the standpoint of: (a) transportation facilities; (b) availability of public utilities including electricity, gas, water, telephone, sewers, ash and garbage disposal, etc.; (c) taxes; (d) availability of business facilities as measured by the number, type and location of retail stores, doctors, dentists and other professional men; (e) availability of schools, and (f) social status of the surrounding community.

3. A solidly constructed building of modern design, erected with maximum economy consistent with quality. The uneconomic construction of cooperative houses by building contractors has been the subject of much unfavorable comment. If a group of persons are capable of full cooperation there is no reason why an apartment house cannot be erected economically. Wherever such a group contains an engineer the physical construction of the apartment house can be prosecuted successfully by dispensing with the general contractor and hiring a building superintendent on a salary basis, the subcontracts being let by a member of the cooperative group.

4. Conservative and sound financing. The two plans heretofore outlined indicate the skeleton financial plan according to which a cooperative apartment house can be finished; the details, of course, depending on prevailing local conditions. As a measure of precaution, the original contributions of the owners ought to be ample enough to provide a surplus fund over and above the amount needed to finance the cost of land and building to meet contingencies.

5. A sound legal plan thoroughly examined and approved by competent lawyers.

6. Adequate provision for careful management. The management of cooperatively-owned apartment houses may be performed directly by a committee of owners or indirectly through a paid superintendent, by a real estate firm or by a cooperative apartment organization whose specialty is to manage cooperative apartment houses. It must not be assumed that the management of apartment houses by a committee of owners will always be attended by constant squabbles and disagreements, for there are plenty of examples to demonstrate otherwise.

Savings In Dollars.

The final test of cooperative apartments is contained in the dollars and cents figures. As an example of what may be achieved, the following figures concerning a cooperative apartment house developed in one of the large metropolitan cities of the east, are submitted. This apartment house is financed on the semi-cooperative plan and contains 20 apartments, 10 of which are occupied by the cooperative owners and 10 of which are leased to tenants under standard leases. After making allowance for interest on the principal sum invested, the financial results show a saving in rental of approximately 50 per cent of the cooperative owners. The sums invested by the cooperative owners range from $3,750 for a five-room-and-bath apartment with moderate-sized bedrooms, to $6,250 for a six-room-and-two-bath apartment with spacious bedrooms. Monthly contributions to cover the operating deficit indicated by the table appended, including therein contributions made toward the reduction of the building and loan second mortgage range from $27.00 to $50.00 for apartments that would otherwise normally rent for $80.00 and $135.00, respectively.

But the saving in rental is not the only financial advantage accruing to the cooperative owners. After the project was established one of the original cooperative owners died and his widow decided to move out of the city. This particular owner had an original capital investment of $4,500, entitling him to the occupancy of an apartment, the normal annual rental value of which was $1,200. The widow is now receiving $1,200 a year gross rent on the investment of $4,500, or an average annual net rent, after deducting her contributions to the annual operating deficit and to the reduction of the building and loan second mortgage, of $780.00, or a return of 17.3 per cent on the original investment. And it must be remembered that the real return on the investment is higher than 17.3 per cent by the amount of the contribution for the reduction of the second mortgage, since this contribution represents saving.

The Day in Finance

BY R. L. BARNUM.

Wall Street Is Puzzled and Anxious as To What Stock Market Will Do This Fall—Easy Money Ceasing to Operate.

New York, August 22.—Within the last few weeks there have been plain indications that easy money as an influence helping stocks to advance on the exchange, is ceasing to operate. That is the real reason why Wall Street has been asking, with a good deal of anxiety, what the stock market will do this autumn. Wall Street has never seen a situation precisely like the present one.

When stocks started on their great, booming rise the day after election, last November, a number of explanations were heard. The principal one was that, with the removal of political uncertainty and the establishment of sound, conservative government at Washington, the nation was facing such an era of prosperity and industrial activity as it had never experienced before.

This came pretty near being the truth, for the volume of trade since last November has been maintained at levels which have scarcely if ever been equalled in the country's history. One of the best indications of this is the record-breaking loadings of freight cars in the first half of the year, proving that goods were being bought and sold in enormous quantities. Another indication was the record of bank clearings, the largest in our history.

But in their predictions of good times, most people overlooked an important factor. It was merely that, during the war and immediately afterwards, the manufacturing capacity of the country, at the steel mills, the textile mills, the coal and copper mines and in many other directions, had been greatly expanded. These facilities had been worked to the full extent during the war, when we were helping to feed and clothe Europe (lending Europe the money to pay us) and when we were maintaining our own great armies. But with the return of peace it developed that we could not use the full capacities of these productive plants, at prices which would enable the producers to earn a profit and pay the high wages prevailing.

Hence, soon after election it became evident that stocks of manufactured goods were piling up, unsold in the makers' hands. The break in the stock market last March, when most of the rise which had taken place since the preceding November was cancelled, was largely due to a realization of this situation.

But long-headed bankers and students of underlying factors still felt that the market would advance, despite what had happened to business, and events proved they were right. They based their forecast, not on the business outlook, but on the money outlook. They correctly foresaw a prolonged period when money rates would be unusually low.

There were various influences making for low money rates. One was the federal reserve system, which by concentrating the country's banking reserve in a few great central banks had lowered the reserve requirements from 25 per cent to 7, 10 and 13 per cent, depending on the size of the cities where the banks were located. During the war and in the great period of inflation following it the credit facilities of the federal reserve had been used to the utmost, permitting an enormous volume of business to be done, with prices of goods at record-breaking figures. With lower prices, an equally large volume of business could be done on the same reserve and at lower interest rates.

But the reserve was not the same. It had increased hundreds of millions of dollars, due to the steady stream of gold shipments received in this country from the outside world. In part these shipments were due to the fact that European credit was so poor in this country that our investors would not lend to foreign borrowers, hence those who bought our goods had to pay cash. In part, the gold influx was due to payment of interest and part of the principal on debts already contracted, as in the case of Great Britain, which began paying off her war debt to America.

Long-headed bankers who foresaw a great rise in the stock market last winter used to talk about "inflation," or the inevitable use of our great credit facilities in raising the price of stocks. But events proved that they meant just the opposite of the kind of inflation we had experienced in 1919 and 1920, when prices of goods were sent sky-high by the use of bank credit. They meant the direct application of money and credit to the stock market, the purchase of securities because dividends and coupon interest rates were low compared with interest rates in the open market. Stocks were a bargain because they could be bought on borrowed money and show a good margin of profit in the income they yielded.

Thus it happened that, at the very time that the volume of business done in the country was running close to the highest levels ever attained, a period of easy money developed. This was something that had never been experienced before. In all our past history, a long period of low rates on money for use in the stock market had only come from slack business. There was not enough credit in the country to provide full accommodations for business and at the same time permit a great and prolonged bull movement on the stock exchange at low rates of interest. Often, of course, there were great booms on the stock market while business itself was booming, but in nearly every instance the stock market boomed in spite of pretty stiff rates of interest. Rates gradually worked higher and higher, until at last they often caused a collapse of stock prices.

It was this flood-tide of money which, beginning last November, swept prices of stocks to the highest level on record. In the earlier stages of the movement it was possible for anybody to make money with his eyes shut. Practically all stocks were on the rise, and it was not necessary to pick and choose carefully. All were being lifted by cheap money.

Now, however, the market is no longer surging upward uniformly. Some stocks are advancing, where the record of earnings is favorable, but others are hanging back or actually declining. Anybody who makes money now must show skill in choosing his stocks.

In the minds of a great many good observers, this irregularity of the market is a sure sign that the influence of easy money as a stock market force is about exhausted. Prices may be maintained around their present levels by easy money, but there are not many who expect to see them advance further for that cause.

That is why Wall street is asking, "If prices are to go higher this autumn, what is the influence that will put them up?"

4 SLIGHTLY HURT WHEN CAR CAPSIZES AT TIFTON CORNER

Tifton, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Four men from Kentucky, en route to Florida, had a close call here Thursday night when the car in which they were riding turned turtle at a street intersection. The car was traveling at a rapid rate and the driver did not see the turn until too late.

The car turned completely upside down, with the four men under it. They were pulled out from under the car by passersby.

All were able to be out Friday morning, but were still suffering from minor injuries. The car was badly damaged.

New York, August 22.—(AP)—Stock prices bounded upward again today under the leadership of the southwestern railroad shares. With a plentiful supply of money available for stock market purposes, most lines of business reporting steady improvement and bear traders showing little disposition to renew their attacks on the general list, operators for the rise encountered little difficulty in bidding up their favorite stocks. Trading was in substantial volume for a half-holiday session, running well over a half a million shares.

Except for additional favorable July earnings reports, there was nothing to account for the steady accumulation of the southwestern carriers, most of which have been associated of late with favorable merger and dividend rumors. St. Louis-Southwestern common was the individual feature of that group, being bid up over 5 points to a record high at 62¼, and then easing about a point on realizing. The preferred touched a new peak at 75 7-8. Frisco common crossed 98 to the highest level reached since the reorganization of the property. Katy common, Wabash common and the preferred "B" and Seaboard Air Line common and preferred "B" and Seaboard Air Line common also attained new 1925 peak prices.

A good demand also developed for Rock Island common, Colorado and Southern, Kansas City southern, Denver and Rio Grande Western pfd., Texas Pacific and Western Pacific.

Strong buying support was again in evidence among the standard industrials. United States Steel common touched a new high on the movement at 124 7-8; American Can closed over 2 points higher at 245 1-4 after touching a new peak price at 248 and Baldwin showed a fractional gain at 115.

Among the score or so new 1925 highs established during the session were American Ice, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Loew's Inc., Postum Cereal, Howe Sound, General Electric and General Baking. General Railway Signal was run up nearly 20 points to 314 3-4.

Heaviness again cropped out in some of the motor and oil shares. Mack Trucks broke four points. Atlantic Refining 3 and Pierce-Arrow preferred 1 each.

Sharp rallies in the Scandinavian exchanges, based on reports that those countries were calling home the proceeds of dollar loans raised in this country, featured the firm foreign exchange market. Norwegian kroner rallied about 15 points to 18.95c and Danish kroner jumped about 45 points to 23.76c. Demand sterling ruled unchanged around $4.85 3-8 and French francs held steady just under 4.70c.

NEW YORK TRADERS WAIT ON REPORT.

New York, August 22.—The cotton market was quiet again today with traders evidently waiting for Monday's government report. December contracts were traded in at prices ranging from 23.62 to 23.70 and closed at 23.63, with the general market closing net unchanged to 2 points higher.

The opening was steady at an advance of 5 to 9 points and the active positions sold about 7 to 11 points net higher during the early trading, with October selling up to 23.46 and January to 23.21.

Buying was promoted by relatively steady Liverpool cables, more favorable advices from Manchester and continued apprehension of crop damage reports from the eastern belt.

In addition to covering, some trade buying was reported, but there was enough for sale to check the advance during the middle of the morning and prices eased later on private reports of showers in North Texas, and the lower temperatures in the belt. October sold off to 23.37 and January to 23.13 and the close was within a point or two of the lowest.

Some buying was promoted by the outlook for dry and warmer weather following the lower temperatures of yesterday and last night, but general business was restricted and the market acted as if accounts had been pretty well evened up in preparation for Monday's government crop report.

Another private report estimated a condition of 64 and an indicated yield of 14,450,000 bales, but this was nearly enough in line with previous estimates to have comparatively little effect on sentiment.

Manchester cables said that spinners in the Bolton district had voted to reject the recommendation of short-time in the Egyptian section. Trade advices from Liverpool said the market there had been advanced by covering and trade calling. The amount of cotton on ship board awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 30,000, compared with 19,000 last year.

MARKET IS INACTIVE AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, August 22.—The market for cotton was a very quiet affair in today's short session, and except for a wave of hedge selling right at the end, trading was sluggish and practically inactive. After an early gain of nine points largely due to better cables than due, and a fair amount of trade buying, the market eased off eight points on week-end evening up and some hedge selling. Just as the end there was a fresh wave of hedge selling which forced prices down to new lows and the close showed a net decline for the day of two to three points.

At the start Liverpool was about three penny points better than due and the local market opened six points higher which was a full response to the course of Liverpool. Prices advanced a few points additional right after the opening call and October traded at 22.88 and December at 23.08, or nine points above yesterday's close. These levels proved to be the highs of the day. The market gradually eased off largely due to moderate hedge selling until October traded at 22.80 and December at 23.00, or eight points down from the highs.

In the last few moments of trading there was active selling of hedges which forced prices down to new lows with October at 22.76 and December at 22.96, or 12 points down from the early highs. The close was practically at the lowest showing a net loss for the day.

There was little disposition to trade, owing to the fact that the government report based on reports up to and including August 16 will be issued at 10 o'clock Monday morning, giving the condition average, the indicated yield and the total ginnings to August 16.

Fall River reported sales of print cloths for the week totaled about 35,000 pieces. There were no exports today.

New York, August 22.—Not a sign of weakness appeared in the market today, as stock after stock came into favor and was put to new highs. Weekly mercantile reviews pointed out consistent improvement in business at a time when improvement is not the usual thing. Both rails and industrials joined in the advance. Steel was in particularly good demand just under 125 and looks like next week's leader. There was little week-end profit-taking and what there was was easily taken except in the truck stocks which were slightly heavy. There is no change indicated in the immediate future of the market despite the large gains in brokers' loans. Prices look higher next week.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, August 22.—The market opened with another display of strength. Trading was gradually diverted into the railroad group in which several issues moved up to new record records. Coppers also were strong particularly American Smelting. Persistent profit-taking was responsible for a few points reaction in Mack Truck which in turn affected other issues. While Motors which was fractionally lower. The persistent buying in steel was a source of encouragement to the move. American Ice was strong at higher prices responding to exceptionally favorable earnings for first seven months. The tone of the market was generally firm and the market had the character of a week-end affair.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO.

New York, August 22.—The stock market continued strong throughout the day, although the usual profit-taking toward the close reflected closing up of long accounts by professional traders who believe in going home with clean books over Sunday. Outside of this supply there was no pressure from any quarter and nearly all important issues ended with prices close to highest of the movement. Weekly surveys of mercantile organizations disclosed an increasingly healthful situation in the commercial fields. Most phases of the business are reported as favorable with seasonal expansion proceeding rapidly in jobbing lines. It is noteworthy that production in steel continues at a rate more than 25 per cent in excess of last year at this time with prices somewhat lower than those then prevailing. Banking support of the leading rails may be relied upon as a necessary expedient in promoting that market for the successful flotation of new stock issues in contemplation. We believe that conservative speculation had best be confined to the rails, the steels and the coppers at this stage of the forward movement.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, August 22.—Trading was quiet enough and orders well enough divided to suggest that the market had been pretty well evened up in preparation for Monday's government report. On the surface at least it would seem that the market had been adjusted to the crop report expectations of around 14,230,000 bales, as this is the average of the private reports. It is not unlikely, however, that the trade is really doubtful of an official indication quite as high as the private ones and is therefore convinced that if it is less, it will prove a considerable under-estimate of the actual crop. There was some buying this morning on the deterioration reports from the eastern belt and it is possible that dry, warm weather over the week-end would bring forth more complaints early next week. The detailed weather reports showed considerably lower temperatures, however, and many traders feel that hot weather, while probably to the detriment of plant development, will hold the boll weevil in check.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, August 22.—In advance of next Monday's government crop forecast and ginning report, the market ruled remarkably quiet today with prices holding around previous finals. There were no developments overnight to cause any change in sentiment or feeling and trading was largely of an evening-up character. The generally accepted view is that the government will predict a crop of over 14,000,000 and show ginnings of around 750,000. If the crop forecast is under 14,000,000 it is apt to be construed bullish, even though it is larger than two weeks ago. It is also believed the market will stand ginnings of 750,000 but not if close to a million. Official records show that rainfall during July and August is deficient in all states except Mississippi and Oklahoma and possibly Alabama. The past records show considerable loss in both condition and crop outlook under such abnormal weather conditions as recently prevailed.

Chicago, August 22.—WHEAT: Foreign wheat markets are inclined to sympathize with the small movement of cash wheat in North America. It will be noted in the market that the September and December deliveries are relatively stronger than May, this is a proper reflection of the inadequacy of the present movement from the producer and shows that prices are not being speculatively bolstered. There is nothing of a depressing nature to be seen at the moment, while on the other hand there are possibilities of a better foreign trade as well as a withholding of spring wheat movement. COARSE GRAINS: There is nothing suggestive of an immediate upturn in prices but we still believe that the present crop outlook has already been discounted.

New York, August 22.—(AP)—Trading in the bond market ended today with prices standing at the highest levels of the week, which has been marked by a progressive though gradual forward movement.

Railroad issues were the favorites in the day's dealings, many of them keeping pace with a brisk rally in the carrier stocks. The demand was especially good for such obligations as St. Louis, Southwestern Consolidated 4s, Florida, Western and Northern 7s, Delaware and Hudson Convertible 5s, Northern Pacific 4s, "Katy" adjustment 5s and Reading general 4 1-2s.

Steady accumulation of Mexican government bonds reflected Wall Street's growing belief that negotiations now under way will pave the way for a restoration of the debt agreement which has been in default for more than a year. Gains of one to two points were common in this group. French 6s again set a new high mark for the year but failed to maintain their gain until the close.

Strength of American Ice shares brought a quick response from the company's convertible 7 per cent bonds, which at one time rose more than two points to a new high record at 123. Independent strength also was shown by Brooklyn Union Gas 6s, Philadelphia Company 5 1-2s, Kelly Springfield Tire 8s and Dodge Brothers 6s.

eastern sections of the belt. The immediate course of the market will of course be controlled by the character of Monday's bureau report. The trade is expecting that the latter will show an indicated crop in excess of 14,000,000 bales, but experience teaches that the government reports cannot be gauged. Should the bureau figure fall below 14,000,000 bales an advance could probably be expected as the market is undoubtedly speculatively short. On the other hand we think any advance at this time would be unwise unless it has for its basis a serious decline in the present crop prospect.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, August 22.—For the first time in practically a week the Liverpool market closed higher than expected and consequently our market reflected the good tone of Liverpool by opening at a high advance over last night's close. Trade buying on limits again made its appearance and absorbed hedge sales, and it may be said that hedge sales were in slightly larger volume than the last few days, but this selling did not materially affect the market, for contracts were rather well taken. We understand the spot demand continues rather active and that the shippers in the south seem to anticipate a good business, and that in many cases, the mills are taking cotton as early as September delivery, which means that the mills have not bought any cotton of consequence, and that they need at least a small supply to carry them through their fall business. We still look forward to good buying from the trade on all declines, and it may be said that the market has a decidedly good undertone in face of the bearish sentiment that exists.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, August 22.—On the theory that still water runs deep the present price of cotton represents very sound values. That the crop movement has been increased and cotton is passing into channels of distribution at an ever-increasing rate is a fact. It is also a fact that the early movement is being absorbed without the slightest market impression, which is reflected in the extreme steadiness demonstrated for sometime. It would seem quite logical to anticipate the market feeling the weight of crop movement, when the season is opened more generally over the belt, but it is clear at the present time that there is no fright about values, also there is no apparent cause for a bull movement. With these conditions prevailing no special violent action appears probable from publication of the condition and ginning reports Monday. Because of trade demand now and the intention to buy on easiness and the disposition to market the crop as harvested we continue of the belief that a trading market is likely with purchases advisable on easiness and sales on strength.

PETAIN IS READY TO CRUSH RIFFS

Paris, August 22.—Complete victory over the Riffians before winter was predicted by Marshal Petain after his conference with Primo de Rivera at Algeciras. At the conference plans were laid for a crushing offensive which it is expected will end definitely the Riffian menace.

Primo de Rivera pledged 75,000 Spanish and native troops, while France will employ an equal number. Both French and Spanish leaders believe that once the offensive starts all the dissident movements will collapse, leaving Abd-el-Krim without an army and an easy prey.

Some of the Tsoul tribesmen who have surrendered, have declared that Abd-el-Krim is preparing a formidable movement as a last stand. He has obtained the promise of the Senhadjas and Branes tribes to support his regular forces. Now the rebel chieftain needs only time in which to gather his troops.

In the meantime, the French columns continue to clean up the newly acquired territory of the Tsouls. There is little fighting going on, and the nights are absolutely calm. The French are allowing their troops a much-needed opportunity to rest.

Abd-el-Krim has ordered his artillery to attack the Island of Albucemas, which is 300 yards off the coast, and which was considered the key to the defenses of Ajdir, Abd-el-Krim's headquarters. The island is now held by the Spanish, who replied to the rebel artillery fire with land artillery and with fire from their guns on the warships. The Spanish lost 46 men in the attack, and the island was badly damaged.

It has been announced that the American aviators are ready at Fez for the coming offensive, and that they will certainly form part of the advancing columns.

TWO SHANGHAI REDS KILLED IN RIOTING

Shanghai, August 22.—(AP)—Aroused to a pitch of ill-feeling against the bolsheviki, a crowd of strikers armed with knives and sticks tonight attacked the headquarters of the Shanghai Labor association in the Chinese section of the city. Several were wounded on both sides and it is reported that two reds were killed.

First Mayan Indian Brought

:: "TATA" TO PROVIDE INVALUABLE DATA ::

To New Orleans by Scientists

New Orleans, August 22.—(AP)—A lone Indian, wearing bull-hide sandals, a high straw sombrero, faded khaki trousers and a bright sash, but scorning a collar, entered New Orleans today from the United States immigration station at Algiers, just across the Mississippi river. He was given a reception in keeping with the importance attached to his visit by science.

Through this lone Indian Tulane university hopes to join the knowledge of today with the ancient lore of the Mayan race. The only tongues he speaks are the rough Spanish Beche-de-Mer, that has filtered in from the banana ports to the Indian tribes, and the tribal dialect of his native Mayan tribe, deep in the wilds of Chiapas, Mexico.

The 50-year-old Indian was brought to the United States by Franz Blom and Oliver LaFarge, of Tulane faculty, and tonight he is occupying a hotel suite with his hosts. They will not remain in the hotel long.

"We're going to find a quiet apartment somewhere and hole up there for a few weeks," said Franz Blom. "We've serious work to do with 'Tata.' It's the hardest thing in the world to win the confidence of a jungle Indian. We've won the confidence of 'Tata.' He knows we're his friends. What we want to get out of him is the full story of the Mayan tribal lore in his own native tongue, in which Oliver LaFarge is becoming swiftly proficient. Already, as our friendship has grown, Tata has begun to relax his native reticence and to tell us of some of the strange wild ceremonials with which the Mayans worship their ancient gods.

"This lone Indian, with his unusual native intelligence, though he can neither read nor write, really will be a peep-hole through which the eye of modern scientific investigation can see into what has been a wall of solid, shrouded darkness and mystery, barring the life of the ancient Mayans from the world.

"They're a wonderful race, the Mayans," said Oliver LaFarge. "They have a distinct Asiatic tinge in their psychology. All indications are that the American Indians had their origin in Asiatic tribes that came across the Behring straits at the close of the glacial epoch, and that they came down from the north to what is now Latin-America. There is a distinct resemblance between the language of the Ute Indians of North America and the Tongue of the Aztec Indians of Mexico.

"About the Mayans we have no definite data. Their language is a series of tribal dialects that bear no known resemblance to any other language I have encountered, except in rare, and I think, probably accidental incidences. It's an amusing point to find that in the Yokatan dialect the word for 'father' is 'pop.'

"The Mayans have always been, as nearly as we can find, a great group of small tribes. Their origin has been traced at least as far back as 500 B. C. There was a time when their population exceeded five million. It is probably about three million now."

Messrs. Blom and LaFarge, in their expedition, discovered data on 24 buried cities, the tomb of a prehistoric Mayan king and many monuments and inscriptions.

"I wouldn't say that our expedition has discovered anything astoundingly new or astoundingly great," said Mr. LaFarge, "but it is valuable in that it will fill in gaps."

Both scientists have high hopes of "Tata," as they call Lazaro Hernandez. They are hopeful that he will divulge much valuable information. He takes his important position lightly.

Asked his name in Spanish, he chuckled:

"El Jefe me Llama Tate, pere me nombre verdadament, es Lazaro Hernandez, es buena chispo." (The boss calls me Tata, but really my name is Lazaro Hernandez. It's a good joke.)

As he rode to his hotel, he saw a modern flapper. "Muchacha linda" (beautiful girl), he said.

He was told that such girls are called "chickens" in America.

"Las Gallinitas con pelo come hombres!" (Chickens with hair like men!)

Of New Orleans at first glance, he said, "Es un ciudad enorme pere es perdido; no hay cabellos ni ourros." (It is an enormous city, but it is lost. They have no horses or donkeys here.)

After a more extended survey of the city he had the same comment. Franz Blom said as his first word on coming out of the jungles and entering Guatemala City for the first time: "Mucha gente!" (Too many people.)

THREE BOYS LOSE LIVES WHEN BOAT SINKS IN RIVER

Knoxville, Tenn., August 22.—Three boys, Kenneth, Garland and Lane King, sons of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. C. King, of Claremore, Okla., were drowned in the Tennessee river, near Concord, Tenn., ten miles southwest of Knoxville. With their parents they had only arrived this morning for a visit to relatives at Concord.

The boys, with Alan Jones, 8, were playing around at the bank of the river and finally entered a boat and had rowed it out into the stream, where it sprang a leak and sank almost immediately. Alan Jones was saved by his brother, Calloway Jones, who swam across the river in time to rescue him before he sank the third time.

Bodies of the King children were recovered a few hours later.

MINISTER IS DROWNED IN ATTEMPTED RESCUE

Baltimore, August 22.—(AP)—Rev. Dayton Baird Miller, pastor of the Boundary Avenue Methodist church of this city, was drowned in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue from South river his 6-year-old nephew, Frederick Ridenour, of New York city. The child had fallen from a motor boat, from which he and the minister, together with Mrs. Miller and a 6-year-old daughter, had been fishing near Annapolis.

STECK STILL GAINING IN BALLOT RECOUNT

Washington, August 22.—(AP)—Unofficial information indicated further gains today for Daniel F. Steck, the democratic contestant, as the tabulation of the vote of Pottawattamie county progresed in the senate recount in the Iowa senatorial election. Latest figures now indicate a Steck gain there in excess of 200.

The official senate report made public today, for 63 counties, including Poweshiek and Ringgold, reduced Steck's net gain in the senate recount to 900. It gave Steck 251,771, and Brookhart 242,500 uncontested votes and showed that 1,397 Steck and 4,435 Brookhart ballots had been challenged. The total vote was 500,103.

Graft Charged Against Officers In Rum Raids

Cleveland, Ohio, August 22.—The revolt here against high-handed tactics in enforcement of the prohibition laws continued today with the arrest of Herman Geltman, a former justice of the peace for a Cleveland suburb.

Warrants are out for two other justices. Six constables of justice courts have been released on bond.

Geltman is charged with conspiracy and graft. He came in to prominence for having conducted the most active liquor courts in the county. He is reported to have made $100,000 in liquor raids and employed a large staff of constables to carry out the raids.

Federal authorities charge that the three justices, with their constables, conspired to violate the prohibition laws by selling confiscated liquor, taging fake raids and fixing cases, splitting the graft.

The arrests were made simultaneously with two suits filed here asking damages against state prohibition agents for staging alleged improper raids.

State Senator George H. Bender asked $50,000 against W. J. Patrick, state agent, who raided his home on alleged flimsy basis and found no liquor. The suit also names B. F. McDonald, state director, as co-defendant.

Bender, an ardent prohibitionist and author of many dry laws on the Ohio statute books, declared the raid on his home "was only a sample of what is going on in this state every day, and is an outright violation of the constitution."

Crisp Representatives To Be Feted by Kiwanis Club for Power Bill

Cordele, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Representative A. S. Bussey and Senator Tannie McKenzie are to be honor guests at a Kiwanis occasion here on their return from the sessions of the general assembly, due to their hard and successful efforts to put the Crisp county hydro-electric power measure through the assembly. Mr. Bussey is president and Senator McKenzie is vice president of the Cordele Kiwanis club.

Both these members of the general assembly gave untiring effort to the power bill and succeeded in getting it through, so that the people of this community may now look to the construction of their 15,000-horsepower plant on Flint river.

This legislation is considered the most important in the direction of industrial development ever taken here and nearly every citizen in the entire county favored the measure.

MAN WITHOUT MEMORY DETAINED AT CORDELE

Cordele, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Found by A. M. Adams, prominent farmer of Hatley, in a swamp near his plantation, three weeks ago, a young white man about 20 years of age is in Crisp county jail, unable to give his name, due apparently to lapse of memory. He has an abundance of black hair, good teeth and weight about 150 pounds. He is 5 feet 10 inches in height and is in fair physical condition save for the fact that he can give no account of his identity.

Sheriff C. O. Noble is seeking to locate relatives and has sent out description to several points.

HOTEL AT FORSYTH DESTROYED BY FIRE

Forsyth, Ga., August 22.—The Holland hotel, a large two-story brick hotel conducted by Mrs. T. F. Holland, was totally destroyed by fire originating at 8 o'clock tonight. It was the only hotel here. The hotel building was owned by Mrs. E. F. Bradford, of Mobile, formerly Miss Minnie Johnson, of this city, who is now visiting in Macon. Mrs. Holland, however, had operated the hotel for many years.

Some of the furnishings were saved, but many of the guests reported that they had lost their personal property.

The origin of the first has not been determined. The owner carried some insurance.

By grafting shoots of cinnamon or cloves upon a plant known as "holy basil," a shrub has been produced whose leaves render mosquitoes insensible within a few seconds after the insects touch them.

CLIMAX FORECAST IN DEVELOPMENTS IN COAL DEADLOCK

Phildelphia, August 22.—(AP)—Developments in the anthracite situation appeared to be steadily drawing toward a climax today.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, returning from a two days' absence, remained silent as to his whereabouts or activity. Reports from Harrisburg indicated, however, he had been in conference with union leaders there.

James A. Gorman, secretary of the anthracite board of conciliation, and also permanent secretary of the joint scale committee of anthracite operators and miners, arrived here shortly after Mr. Lewis. Mr. Gorman, who was author of the laconic official communiques issued during the scale negotiations at Atlantic City, would not discuss his mission here.

After a conference, neither Mr. Lewis nor Mr. Gorman would comment upon a rumor that Mr. Gorman was actually a courier between the operators' and miners' leaders. It was reported that Mr. Gorman was the link between the opposing sides in connection with arranging of certain details that might arise if a suspension were called September 1. These arrangements, it was learned definitely, did not involve peace.

Two Norfolk Bandits Crack Country Club Safe and Get $1,000

Norfolk, Va., August 22.—(AP)—masked bandits entered the Princess Anne Country club at Virginia Beach between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning, forced the safe and escaped with approximately $1,000 in currency.

The bandits, heavily armed, first appeared in the Chalfonte hotel at the resort shortly after 3 o'clock this morning, but were frightened away before opening the safe. They attempted to shoot William Noel, manager of the hotel, but he barricaded himself in a room.

It was the second time within two weeks that the resort had been the scene of a robbery. On the first occasion bandits held-up the Princess Anne hotel and escaped with several thousand dollars in jewelry and cash, after first staging a robbery at a business establishment in Norfolk.

Police said that descriptions of the bandits who perpetrated the two robberies tallied.

Presbyterian Church Making Steady Growth, Annual Report Shows

Philadelphia, August 22.—(AP)—Steady growth of the Presbyterian church was indicated in the annual national statistics made public by Dr. Lewis S. Mudge, stated clerk of the Presbyterian general assembly.

Communicant members total 1,873,859, the largest in the history of the denomination, represenring an increase for the year of 42,031.

The Sunday school membership of 1,596,259 represented a gain of 48,212.

Contributions reached a total of $57,714,231, or an average of approximately 59 cents a week for each communicant. The total was $626,067 more than the previous year.

Of the annual $15,000,000 budget authorized by the general assembly, to be raised among the churches for benevolences, the total receipts were $9,722,529, or $5,277,471 short of the goal.

The number of churches in the denomination was 9,646, which was 254 fewer than the previous year. There were 10,017 ministers, a gain for a year of 146.

ATLANTA MAN BUYS PROPERTY AT TIFTON

Tifton, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) T. H. Bonner, of Atlanta, purchased this week from Ralph Puckett, of this city, an entire city block of 12 lots in the northern part of town. He made the purchase as an investment.

Mr. Bonner is a traveling man covering several states and has investments in Florida, but says that the property here looks better to him than any he has seen elsewhere.

Tenth Policeman Slain in Battle With N.Y. Gunmen

New York, August 22.—(AP)—Patrolman David A. Sheehan was killed today in a fight with three robbers. He was the police department's 10th human sacrifice to gunmen since January 1, 1925, and closed a week of heavy casualties.

Three other policemen were wounded Thursday, one of them seriously. Today's fatality was the second of the month.

Patrolman Sheehan was shot in the head and instantly killed by one of three robbers he happened upon in the offices of the New York Vintage company, dealers in sacramental wines. When Sheehan entered, one bandit stood guard over six employees.

"Put him in with the others," commanded one of the robbers. The patrolman reached for his pistol, but was shot from behind before he could use it. The robbers escaped.

Grandfather Mountain Fire Loss Estimated $2,000,000 to $6,000,000

Boone, N. C., August 22.—(AP)—Damages resulting from the fire on Grandfather mountain were estimated today by The Watauga Democrat, local newspaper, at between $2,000,000 and $6,000,000.

The loss was sustained largely by the federal government, which owns a considerable part of the land swept by the flames.

Miss Florence Boyd, of Lenior, N. C., probably suffered the greatest individual loss, when 100,000 feet of hardwood lumber in the fire zone were consumed.

Grandfather mountain today continued to send up columns of smoke from the blackened area, but the flames had been extinguished, except in scattered places. State forest rangers, aided by mountaineers, continued their work, which was furthered by light rains yesterday.

The forest fire, which began Thursday from a burning sawmill, swept over the mountain from the upper timber line to the state highway between Blowing Rock and Linville.

SEABOARD ACQUIRES FLORIDA RAIL LINE

New York, August 22.—(AP)—The Seaboard Air Line Railway company today closed a contract with the American Agricultural Chemical company for acquisition of the Charlotte Harbor & Northern railroad under a three-year lease, with an option to purchase the property at the expiration of that time, subject to approval of the interstate commerce commission.

The Charlotte Harbor line, operating about 100 miles of track in Florida, has been used by the American Agricultural Chemical company to connect its phosphate mines in that state with its deep water terminal. It will be linked up with next construction by the Seaboard to form a short line from Jacksonville and other northern points in Florida to Fort Myers and contiguous territory.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

:: :: :: :: CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH :: :: :: ::

Atlanta Realty Men Disapprove Proposed Bill

Some time in the spring of this year an ordinance was introduced in the city council of Atlanta asking for a charter amendment for placing a license fee of $1,000 on anyone offering for sale real estate located in another state. This amendment is now before the Georgia legislature.

A number of inquiries have been received at the office of the Atlanta Real Estate board as to whether this organization is sponsoring and advocating the passage of this bill. The board states it does not approve of this amendment for the reasons that we welcome to Atlanta anyone who wishes to engage in a legitimate business in this city and are strongly opposed to any prohibitive license taxes, and for the further reason that we have no fear of any offering of real estate in competition with Atlanta real estate. The absolute soundness and safety of investments made in Atlanta real estate, the enormous profits that have been made on same, make any action to keep out competition entirely unnecessary.

There have been a large number of fly-by-night speculative land promotion schemes constantly coming into Atlanta, but the Georgia securities commission has full powers to take care of these.

The real estate board suggests that anyone contemplating investments outside of Atlanta consult with an Atlanta realtor before making any such investment.

Chicago Council Meets To Honor Victor F. Lawson

Chicago, August 22.—(AP)—For the first time, the city council today held a special meeting in honor of a man who never had held public office—Victor F. Lawson, editor and owner of the Chicago Daily News.

Mr. Lawson died Wednesday night. "It is the most unique thing in the history of this body to call a special meeting to adopt resolutions upon the death of a man who has never held public office, in other words, to pay honor to a private citizen," Mayor Dever said.

The publisher was termed "the commanding figure in American newspaperdom," in a resolution adopted paying tribute to his ideals on Americanism, government and in the interest of youth.

The mayor named his department heads and the full membership of the city council as the city representatives to attend, in a body, the funeral which will be held at 11 a. m. Monday in the New England Congregational church.

Iver N. Lawson, brother of Mr. Lawson, today expressed confidence that it was Mr. Lawson's wish "that the Chicago Daily News should continue along its present lines, thus representing his ideal of a popular, independent newspaper."

The message, expressing belief that there will be no radical change in the general policy of the newspaper, was sent to The News by his brother while en route here to attend the funeral. The brother and members of his family will arrive here tomorrow morning.

Delegations from the Union League club, board of trade, Hamilton club and many other private and civic organizations have been named to attend the funeral. Burial will be private.

H. F. WEST RETURNS FROM BUSINESS TOUR OF MID-WEST

H. F. West, well-known Atlanta realtor, has returned from a combination business and pleasure trip to Chicago, Milwaukee and the lake region of north Wisconsin. Mr. West reports a very fine trip, but says he is glad to get home, and back into the Atlanta real estate game.

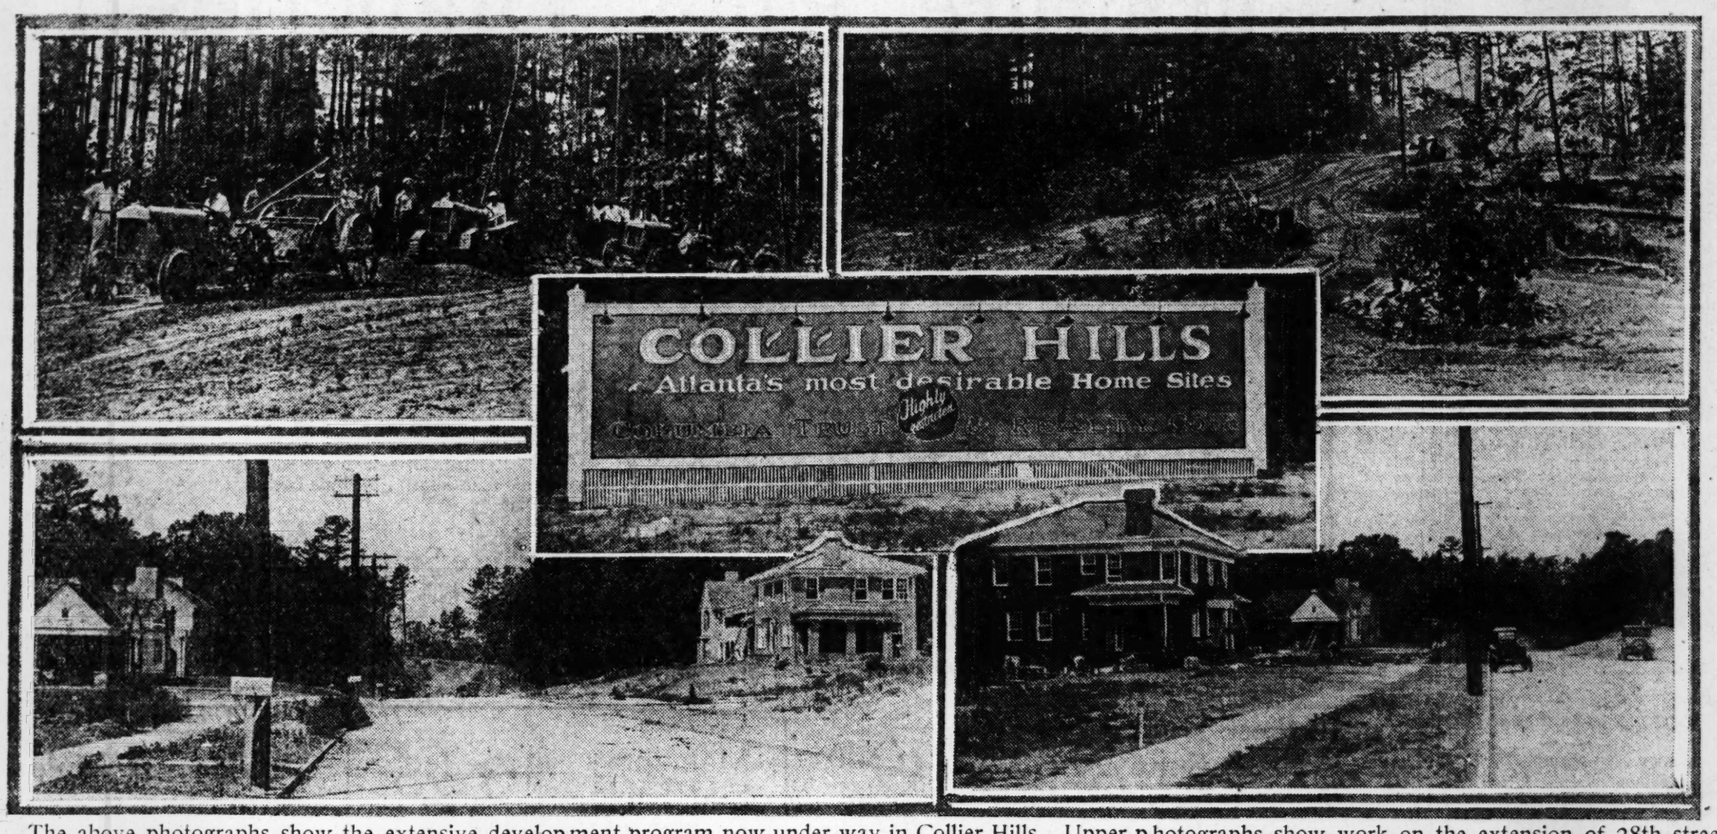

While in Chicago Mr. West called on his loan connections, renewing his contracts, which enables his firm to conatinue to handle real estate loans and notes on satisfactory terms.

Mr. West says everybody in the west knows and talks about Atlanta, her sound business conditions and her brilliant future.

NEGRO BOY ADMITS ASSAULT CHARGE

Petersburg, Va., August 22.—(AP)—James Holmes, 14-year-old negro boy, arrested earlier in the week and subsequently released in connection with an attempted assault upon a young white girl at Blackstone, has been rearrested and has confessed the deed, C. Freeman Eppes, commonwealth attorney for Nottoway county, announced today.

Extension Development Under Way In Collier Hills

The above photographs show the extensive development program now under way in Collier Hills. Upper photographs show work on the extension of 28th street through to Williams street; lower, beautiful and high-class homes under construction. Collier Hills is being developed by the Columbia Trust and Realty Co., formerly Calhoun Co.

Morningside Sales Reach High Point, Says Sheppard

"Sales in Morningside Estates during the past week reached a high total despite the torrid weather and the fact that this is the season of the year when business activity is supposed to reach its lowest ebb."

The above statement was made by W. R. Sheppard, general manager of the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin, owners and developers of Morningside, from which several million dollars' worth of home sites have been sold during its existence of less than two years. Several million dollars' worth of residential construction has been executed in Morningside, also, making the grand total of investments in that section something over $3,000,000, according to Mr. Sheppard.

With a handsome and highly artistic Spanish field office near the central part of the subdivision, in which a member of the sales force remains at all times to meet interested people and show them the development, the sales in Morningside of the regulation dwelling sites as well as the large sites for suburban estates, have been mounting with each month. "It is particularly gratifying to the members of the sales force, as well as to the company," continued Mr. Sheppard, "that we have been able to interest so many home seekers in Morningside. There is no difficulty attached to the sale of residential sites in this property, for once we are able to attract them to the development they are carried away with the beauty of the entire scene.

"Morningside estates, which were subdivided into sites varying from 250 feet front to 400 and with a corresponding depth, have proven highly attractive to the public," stated Mr. Sheppard, "and we are greatly pleased over the manner in which these dwelling sites have been taken. It will mean that within a comparative short time this recently opened part of Morningside will be completely covered with large country estates.

The estates in Morningside are being sold under restrictions peculiar to such a development, which means that only one master dwelling house can be erected on a lot—that houses must cost a minimum of $10,000 for actual construction, and that other precautions will be written into the deeds of conveyance that will protect each owner against the future introduction of anything into the development that would in any way disturb the harmony of the tract.

"Morningside," said Mr. Sheppard, "has won for itself a reputation second to none in this part of the country. The attractiveness and elegance of Morningside is immediately impressed upon everyone who visits the development.

Morningside lies in a beautiful portion of the northside metropolitan district of Atlanta, being served by Piedmont road, a 70-foot boulevard, running from the state capitol to a junction with Peachtree road, on the north. This highway, which has recently been improved and widened, traverses one of the most remarkably developed residential sections in the southern state. Millions of dollars' worth of home construction has been done in this part of Atlanta recently, and it continues to epand and to increase in population as new people come to the city seeking dwelling places.

TWO FRENCH OFFICERS ATTACKED BY SYRIANS

Paris, August 22.—(AP)—Although an official telegram from Beirut today says that "all is quiet in Syria," other dispatches report the wounding of a French general and his aide near Damascus and the destruction of a French airplane over the beleaguered citadel of Suediah, in the Jebel Druse district.

An official report says a French military airplane sent to carry supplies to the garrison at Suediah, capital of the Jebel Druse area, fell in flames over the citadel, the pilots being burned to death.

This is the first inkling received through official channels that Suediah is still besieged by the Jebel Druse tribesmen, who rebelled against the French in Syria on July 24.

The semi-official Havas Agency this evening reports that General Soule, while inspecting French outposts along the railroad from Damascus to Ezra, was attacked by a band of natives and slightly wounded. His aide, Captain De Goulle, also was wounded.

Another official dispatch received today from General Sarrail, high commissioner in Syria, announced that the Druse tribesmen have released 75 French prisoners.

ADAIR FIRM TO HANDLE BIG REALTY BOND ISSUE

Sarasota, Fla., August 22.—(Special.)—According to an announcement today, the Adair Realty & Trust company, nationally known Atlanta firm, will underwrite an issue of first mortgage real estate bonds on a new nine-story office building in this city which will become the home of the American National bank. The building will be erected at once at a cost well over $1,000,000, officials stated.

The building will have 44,000 square feet of floor space in 150 offices, and will be practically double the size of any existing building in the city. Of reinforced concrete, its exterior will be of gray brick, and the entrance on Main street will be finished in terra cotta.

BROOKFIELD SCHOOL VOTES BOND ISSUE

Tifton, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Brookfield school district in this county voted unanimously Wednesday to issue $10,000 in bonds with which to build a new brick schoolhouse for the district.

Sales Brisk in Sylvan Hills Despite Torrid Heat Wave

"Interest in Sylvan Hills, our attractive south-wide residential development has not flagged for a moment, despite the hot weather and the anxiety of the people over the continued drought," stated A. O. Taylor, sales director for Sylvan Hills, "and our sales are mounting each week at a most gratifying rate."

Mr. Taylor stated that sales made in Sylvan are in practically every instance to prospective home builders, and that almost immediately following a sale construction work begins on a modern type residence in that attractive subdivision.

Sylvan Hills is located within a convenient distance of the city's center in the most beautiful section of the south side metropolitan district. It is located on Sylvan road, which is reached via Dill and Stewart avenues. Smoothly paved highways lead into the tract and traverse it in each direction, serving the many homes already erected there since its opening about two years ago.

With all modern civic improvements, and with its convenient accessibility from all directions, Sylvan Hills lies in a position that makes it extremely convenient for those engaged in industrial pursuits. While it is sufficiently removed to be immune to any possible unpleasant features of industrial districts, Sylvan Hills is within close proximity to a rapidly expanding industrial district to make it practically ideal for those of the home-owning class in the industrial world.

"Our sales force has been extremely busy," said Mr. Taylor, "showing the Sylvan Hills home sites to those who are attracted to it and who have heard of its many advantages. It is also gratifying to the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin company to note that in almost every instance those who purchase lots in this attractive residential tract follow up the purchase with the erection of the home of their ideal. This is literally a subdivision of home owners, with perhaps as large a percentage of owners as will be found in the city. This feature of the situation gives Sylvan Hills an air of permanence and will serve to insure its consistent improvement as the years go by.

Sylvan Hills is situated upon a gently rolling tract, wooded profusely with handsome forest trees. The naturally placed trees that stand upon practically every Sylvan Hills home site, were supplemented in their beauty and artistic effect by the planting of flowering shrubs and the arrangement of the streets and building sites to the best advantage. The subdivision was developed under the direction of a competent landscape engineer, whose work has received much favorable comment.

Many Sales Made In Capitol View, Says W. D. Beattie

"With an unusually brisk market during the last few weeks and with many prospects evidencing interest in our subdivision, we have sold many lots in Capitol View, practically each of which means a new citizen for Atlanta."

This statement was made by Sales Manager Settle, who has been in charge of sales for W. D. Beattie, developer of Capitol View.

"Mr. Beattie," continued Mr. Settle, "is a pioneer among subdivision developers in Atlanta, and he is the originator of the specially-designed deferred payment plan that has placed hundreds of people in possession of their homes who might otherwise have been paying rent at the present time. He has been improving and expanding Capitol View for many years, and it is one of the largest and best-known of the close-in developments."

Capitol View is located on the south side, and its situation upon a gently rolling eminence, gives it a most beautiful view of Atlanta and the surrounding country. This altitude makes also for healthfulness and adds to the comfort of the residents.

The subdivision is easily accessible to the city's modern improvements and each house is equipped with all domestic conveniences.

The sales plan used by W. D. Beattie is what has been termed by him the "Mortgage Free Plan," which means that the purchaser is able to secure his home without a mortgage being placed against it. A nominal first payment is made and then the home is carried for the purchaser, who extends his payments over a period of one hundred months.

Believe Klan Will Wage Fight On Modernists

Columbus, Ohio, August 22.—(AP)—That the Ku Klux Klan is contemplating leading a movement for a schism in the Protestant churches of America along the lines of fundamentalists was construed here today to be the import of utterances made at Willard, Ohio, by C. W. Osborne, grand dragon of Ohio, at a district klan meeting.

According to Fred W. Gallant, Mr. Osborne's private secretary, Mr. Osborne told klan members that "the time has arrived when we must either depose from leadership in the Protestant group those men who are lacking in the fundamentals of the Christian religion, or more drastic measures will be taken."

It is understood that adoption of a plan of action along the line to be announced by Mr. Osborne will be one of the chief purposes of the annual meeting of grand dragons of the United States at Buckeye Lake beginning Tuesday.

AUTO BODY STARTS DRIVE TO OBTAIN EXCISE TAX REPEAL

Washington, August 22.—(AP)—A move looking to repeal at the next session of congress of the excise tax on automobiles and automobile parts has been started by the American Automobile association.

Declaring there are four times as many people paying this excise tax as there are paying income taxes, the association has addressed an appeal to motor vehicle owners to get behind its program and urge their representatives in congress to repeal the tax.

COOL SPELL FOLLOWS BLOW IN SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., August 22.—Savannah awoke to a cool and partially clear August morning following a short and sharp hurricane that broke over the city yesterday afternoon, doing considerable damage and giving everybody a scare for a while.

No great damage was done to any property, but signs of the visitation are noted in broken trees, fallen fences, shattered glass and stripped awnings. The steeple of the Independent Presbyterian church, which was damaged by the high winds, will be repaired as soon as possible.

The wind reached a velocity of 79 miles an hour.

Apartment House Rental Increase Now Predicted

Declaring the thousand or more apartments confrolled by the firm he represents to be something like 66 per cent rented, Allen Stewart, of the Turman-Brown company, gives an optimistic statement concerning the apartment houses situation in Atlanta. Mr. Stewart also expresses himself as confident of splendid business for the balance of the year.

"By placing service before everything else and by making it a point to give the highest type of service to all our patrons," said Mr. Stewart, "we have managed to maintain a high percentage to all our patrons," said Mr. Stewart, "we have managed to maintain a high percentage of occupancy in the apartments on our list. By this means we are enabled to please the tenants in our buildings as well as the landlords and owners.

"The fact that Atlanta has a full sufficiency of multiple unit dwellings, and that a large number of splendid apartments have been erected within the past five years, has caused competition to be very acute among the agencies controlling apartments, but it was not until recently that prices were slashed to any appreciable degree. We are announcing price reductions on practically all of our apartments, and our rental rates are right.

"The reductions we have made on our leading apartment houses, I believe will be welcomed by the public. Of course the cutting of prices will not fill the buildings that have vacancies, as there are just so many prospective patrons to be considered, but it will have the effect of causing people to remove into the better apartments in many instances.

"The encouraging feature of the Atlanta apartment house situation is that despite the fact that we have more apartments than are needed at once, there are many new families removing to the city each week, as city records and records of other establishments will show, and we may look for many people to drop out of the great Florida current of travel to make their homes here. These people will absorb the overplus of multiple dwellings within a comparative short time, and I believe the annual moving day, September 1, will find the situation in splendid shape."

Mr. Stewart is general manager and head of the renting department of the Turman-Brown company, one of the largest and most important real estate and renting agencies in the city, and he is in position to speak with authority with reference to the apartment building situation. He explained that the operation of apartment building is an expensive business, requiring great financial outlays for fuel, lights, water and for the high-class domestic service that is maintained in the better types of these modern structures.

Indicating the popularity of several of the leading multiple unit dwellings controlled by the Turman-Brown company, Mr. Stewart declared that in some of these structures there has never been a vacancy and in another no vacancies have occurred within the past eight years.

Hospital for Tubercular Children Aim of Templars

In order that ground might be broken at the earliest practicable date for the erection of a tuberculosis sanatorium at Alto, Ga., to be devoted exclusively to the care and ultimate cure of the thousands of potential and active cases known to exist among children, the drill corps of Coeur de Lion Commandery No. 4, Knights Templar, will undertake to assist other Masonic organizations throughout the state in assembling a fund for that purpose by staging a musical comedy and revue at the Atlanta auditorium on September 17, 18 and 19, according to announcement made Saturday by Captain Luther B. Stephens, general chairman.

As soon as the proposed sanatorium has been erected, it will be turned over to the state board of health to be operated as a non-sectarian public institution, it was stated. Captain Stephens is authority for the statement that there are almost 70,000 potentially tubercular children in the state, including at least 7,000 active cases, and of these the greater portion are without medical care or attention of any kind.

"For that reason," stated Captain Stephens, "it has been decided to assemble a fund for the erection of a sanatorium at Alto for the care and treatment of children exclusively, and in order that the fund may be raised, the drill corps of Coeur de Lion Commandery is undertaking the production of a musical comedy and revue, the proceeds of which will be added to the fund which is now in process of being raised by Masonic organizations throughout the state."

Among those taking part in the performance are Nora Allen, lyric soprano, and a former member of the Chicago Grand Opera company; Maude Waller, who has appeared upon many occasions in revues and musical comedies in Atlanta; John Clotworthy, William and Goidtsnoven, George Bush, Billy Stocks, E. A. Allen, W. R. Monk, Odin Thomas and Ed. H. Anchors.

Thelma Chalman, pretty Atlanta danseuse, who recently appeared at the Howard theater, and who was one of the bright lights during the season of light opera at the auditorium, has been engaged as dancing instructor of the chorus, and will also appear in one of the leading roles.

Beautiful Oriental scenic effects and costumes will be seen in "The Garden of the Mikado," which is the name of the play to be presented. Rehearsals are being directed by Signor Emilo Volpi, assisted by Odin Thomas. Dancing will be held at Taft hall after the performance, for which no extra charge will be made.

Extensive Improvements To Be Made in Collier Hills

Five hundred men and a number of scrapes, scarifiers, steam shovels and other implements for removing earth and beautifying subdivisions were put to work during the past week in Collier Hills, an attractive and popular residential development in the Atlanta metropolitan district. Announcement has been made by the Columbia Realty and Trust company that work will be pushed with all possible dispatch in order that many of the beautiful building sites in the proposed new unit of Collier Hills may be ready to meet the rapidly increasing demand for homes in that development.

According to an official of the Columbia Realty and Trust company, the plans of this concern contemplate high development for Collier Hills and, following the directions of well-known landscape architects and specialists in the improvement of residential tracts, many features will be introduced.

"We are planting beautiful flowering shrubs in every place in which they could be expected to increase the beauty of Collier Hills and to add to the general artistic effect of the subdivision," it was stated, "and in addition to the shrubs and flowers that will be planted everywhere possible, we are setting out beautiful quick-growing forest trees that add their quota to the beauty of the ensemble."

Collier Hills lies just without the northern limits of Atlanta and it is within convenient distance. Its accessibility to the center of the city and its location on Peachtree road, one of the south's most famous and beautiful thoroughfares, are among the chief features of value to the tract.

"We are looking forward to the complete development of Collier Hills with great expectation and pride," continued the official. "Our plans include, of course, the building of homes, and some handsome modern residences will be seen in Collier Hills. In fact a number of beautiful modern residences are now in course of construction, with many more projected. All houses must be built of brick, or other permanent materials, with fireproof roofing. Of course there are restrictions as to cost and types and other features that will insure the permanent beauty of Collier Hills and protect its home owners from future construction that would in any way disturb the harmony of the section. Only high type homes will be permitted and there will be a complete absence of freak structures or buildings that would in any way detract from the beautiful surroundings."

Statements were made by the company officials that the demand for home sites in Collier Hills increases as pavements are laid, walks put in place and other improvements installed. "Activity in Collier Hills proves its popularity among home seekers," concluded the realty man, "and our company is much gratified over the interest displayed by the public in this beautiful subdivision."

Divers Forced To Battle Many Man-Eating Sharks As They Search for Treasure

Man-Eaters Guard Sunken Steamer and Its Golden Treasure in Ocean Off Virginia Coast.

BY BRADLEY KELLY.
(Special to The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Aboard Salvage Steamer Spray, Off Norfolk, Va., August 22.—A series of battles with hungry sharks has featured the past week's operations of the divers who are attempting to salvage the $4,000,000 treasure of the sunken steamship Merida.

The divers, coming up from the 200-foot ocean depths, are compelled to make long stops on the upward climb in order to rid their bodies gradually of the effects of the terrific pressure which they have endured on the ocean floor. Three hours in all are required to make the 200-foot ascent; otherwise the men are certain to suffer terribly from the dreaded "bends" or caisson disease, as soon as they reach the surface.

It is during this slow upward climb that the sharks have been annoying them.

Diver Must Pause.

The diver must pause for a fixed period of from five to fifteen minutes at each 10-foot stage of his return to the surface. At 30 feet below the surface he halts on the ladder for a final 30 minutes of "decompression." The plundering sharks await him at this level and he must be constantly prepared with knife in hand to ward them off and perhaps to fight for his life.

The task of the men on the boat overhead is to draw the sharks away from the diver by the use of decoys. Great hooks are baited with choice morsels of pork, and these books are dropped overboard from both ends of the boat, being dangled temptingly in front of the shark's nose.

Several small sharks have been caught in this manner, but the climax of the fishing season was reached this week when Worthington Davis, the Harvard athlete who is in command of the expedition, found a 16-footer soundly hooked to his bait.

Seven men came to assist Davis, and after a fierce struggle they hauled the big fish up to the surface. Five men went over the side in the launch and fought the shark with pike poles and Colt automatics for a half-hour. More than a hundred shots were fired into him before he capitulated. Then he was hauled up on the afterdeck, only to come startlingly back to life again in a final struggle. He was conquered by five men with fire axes.

Shark steak, regarded as a special dainty by the sailors, will be served as a regular part of the bill of fare on the Spray for some time to come.

Progress of Hunt.

Meanwhile, the diving operations are progressing steadily. The expedition has had three or four days of good diving weather each week since its return to the wreck, and each day the divers have spent two or three hours below.

Examination of the sunken ship has shown that the entire superstructure is a mass of caved-in wreckage. The interior partitions of the upper decks have collapsed all through the ship, and the interior of the steel hull is filled with a tangled mass of piping, fittings and broken partitions and floors.

To reach the treasure it is necessary for the divers to clear a way cautiously through this jungle of blistered steel and iron, sometimes using dynamite, sometimes opening the road by means of hawsers attached to the Spray's winches overhead.

After nearly two months' work neither diver has yet succeeded in getting nearer than about 40 feet to the strong room, where thousands of pounds of gold and silver bullion await his arrival. But steady progress has been made and the successful recovery of the treasure is expected within another month.

Visitors From Sea.

The Merida quest is now so well known that every passing liner deflects her course in this direction, in order to give her passengers an opportunity to see the salvage crew at work. The big ships which travel north and south along this part of the Atlantic are crowded at this season with tourists, and the Merida treasure hunt is now one of the regular features on their sight-seeing program. Some of the boats pass within a few hundred yards of the Spray, dipping their flags in salute as they sweep by, and inquiring by wigwag signal or megaphone as to the latest news from the ocean depths.

During the past week we also had a visitor from the air. The giant dirigible Shenandoah came out for a visit, circling our anchorage a half dozen times before she turned back majestically on her return journey to the distant shore.

A new coast guard boat, seeking rum runners, studied us suspiciously for a long afternoon, and finally came over to inquire what we were doing. "What's your business here?" megaphoned the government official in command. Captain Moore of the Spray replied facetiously, "We came in here for shelter." This brought laughs and jeers from the crew of the Spray, who knew that any experienced sailor could read our whole story from the flags and pennants flying at our mast-head. The cutter made a complete circle about the Spray, studying our insignia. "You're a salvage boat?" finally inquired the marine police official. "Ay, ay, sir," replied Captain Moore. "Hunting for buried treasure, I understand?" "Ay, ay, sir," reaffirmed Captain Moore, and the police boat went away satisfied.

Diver Has a Valet.

Fifteen times in all, since the Merida was located, the divers, Frank Crilley and Fred Neilson, have donned their diving gear and gone over the side of the Spray to the wreck below. These deep-sea dives, which are record for depth at this distance from land, are so carefully prepared that they would compete with the staging of an elaborate opera with a famous prima donna in the stellar role.

Each diver has a permanent "valet" whose duty is to keep the diving gear in proper shape, making minute inspection of every inch of the seams in the suit and reinforcing weak spots with patches. This job is more important that that of master of the king's wardrobe, as the slightest weakness anywhere in the diving uniform would mean certain disaster.

Preparing to put on his diving dress, which weighs almost 200 pounds, the diver first adds heavy woolen clothing, extra shirts, trousers and socks, as he is to descend into frigid temperatures and it is important that he be kept warm and dry.

Then his valet assists him into his rubberized canvas suit. The heavy breastplate is slipped over his head and the suit clamped to it solidly, to make a water-tight joint. Overalls with large pockets for his working tools and his sheath-knife are pulled on and rubber bands snapped around his wrists to hold the sleeves water-tight.

The heavy iron shoes, each weighing 16 pounds, are strapped to his feet and he is helped over the rail onto the diving ladder. About his waist is strapped a wide leather belt studded with 94 pounds of lead weights held in place by shoulder braces. Next a small leather cap, like that worn by an aviator, is fitted on his head with the earphones attached and fastened under his chin. Finally comes the great copper helmet, with the telephone wires plugged in at the side.

The diver's sheath-knife, his first-aid in time of trouble and his chief weapon of defense against sharks or devil-fish, is on a string at his waist. The air hose, telephone cable and lifeline are now brought under his arms from their connections at the rear of the helmet and tied firmly on the front of the breast-plate, so that the entire weight of the diver is suspended from this point.

He is now fully dressed and valeted, ready for the plunge. A smart tap on the top of his helmet by the valet signifies that everything is in readiness.

In the meantime the air pump has been started and the pressure in the air tanks built up to 125 pounds to the inch—this being the pressure required for work at the depth of the Merida. The diver drops down the ladder until his head is level with the surface, when he reaches out and grasps his "descending line," a three-inch manila rope leading down to the ocean bed below. He slides out of sight down this line, increasing his air supply as the water pressure becomes greater. For every foot of depth the pressure increases by half a pound per square inch.

Mickel, Who Fled From Quitman Mill, Leaves for Prison

Quitman, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—M. M. Mickel, former office manager of a local textile company, who recently pleaded guilty to misappropriating funds of the company, left here today in custody of officers from Marietta, who will place Mickel on the Cobb county chaingang. He is expected to reach Marietta Sunday afternoon, where he will begin to serve a sentence of four years.

The story of Mickel's career is more like fiction than fact. With his beautiful young wife he came to Quitman six years ago, after he had been honorably discharged as an army officer. They lived modestly and quietly until last fall, when Mickel began spending money with a prodigal hand that attracted much attention. He entertained lavishly, bought high-powered cars and told his friends that he had come into a rich inheritance.

The facts come out when he fled from Quitman last April and it was discovered that many thousands of dollars had been stolen from the mill company. After crossing the continent in his flight, through Canada and down into Mexico, he surrendered in Los Angeles.

He pleaded guilty at a special term of superior court in Quitman several weeks ago.

Third Reduction In 'Gas' Price Put Into Effect

New York, August 22.—(AP)—The third reduction within a week in the price of export gasoline was announced by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey today, when a cut of one-half cent a gallon was put into effect. The reduction brings the price of cargo lots to 15½ cents a gallon and that of United States navy grade 14 cents. Export kerosene was lowered ½ cent a gallon.

Chicago, August 22.—(AP)—Motorists are wearing broad grins and their chariots are chugging merrily in four sections of the midwest today as wars between rival dealers have brought tobogganing gasoline prices.

In Decatur, Ill., national concerns attempting to drive out independents have trimmed prices from 23 to 15 and 17 cents a gallon.

In Wichita, Kan., approximately half of the stations are selling at 13.8 and 13.9 cents, plus state tax of 2 cents a gallon. The larger company's prices are 17.8, 18.8 and 20.8 plus tax.

Two rivals in Woonsocket, S. D., started it and neutrals were compelled to follow suit for awhile and then suspended to let them fight it out. After six days the Lakeside garage was down to 17 cents and the Texaco representatives to 18. The neutrals say they will resume when the "battlers" go broke or sign an armistice.

Independent dealers in Kansas City, Mo., have started making price cuts in efforts to cut down competition with resultant price range from 19.5 to 23.5. cents gallon.

12-Year-Old Girl Proves Heroine At Harlem Pool

Harlem, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Natalie B. Scruggs, 12-year-old daughter of J. C. Scruggs, who owns a swimming pool here, probably saved the life of Miss Mary Clary yesterday. While in bathing in the Scruggs pool Miss Clary, who cannot swim, while attempting to walk along the wall that separates the deep and shallow water, fell into the deep water. Miss Scruggs, who is an expert swimmer, but who was not in swimming at the time, but was sitting near the pool, realizing the danger of Miss Clary, plunged into the water and rescued her.

The girl, in telling her father of the incident later, did not appear to think that she had done anything unusual, and was only disturbed over the fact that her dress was drenched.

Sidney Apartments
420 N. Boulevard

IF THERE is a bargain in the city of Atlanta in apartment houses, this is it. Apt. 1 has been redecorated throughout, the walls papered, woodwork painted, floors sanded and varnished. In fact, everything has been done to make this an ideal home. This apartment consists of entrance hallway, nice linen closet near bath, additional closet space throughout the apartment, living room, breakfast room, kitchen with back entrance. Bathroom has been painted throughout. The owner has spared no expense in making this one of the best apartments in the city.

APT. 2 rents for $55.00 and is $10.00 cheaper than anything on Boulevard that will compare with this building.

APT. 3, consisting of living room, bedroom, breakfast room, kitchen, bath and entrance hallway, rents for $45.00 per month.

WE believe this apartment will be fully filled by next Monday, as we know these rates are right.

Marguerite Apartments
625 N. Boulevard

JUST a few doors from the Ponce de Leon shopping district. This building is situated on a high lot with plenty of air space on either side of the building. All apartments have been redecorated.

APT. 2 rents for $60.00, Apt. 3 for $45.00 and Apt. 5 for $50.00. These are exceptional values, as the owner of this building keeps it in unusually good repair and is one of the best bargains on Boulevard.

Isabelle Apartments
166 Angier Ave.

APT. 8 consists of large living room, sun parlor with Murphy bed, bedroom, breakfast room, kitchen, entrance hallway and bath. This apartment is in excellent shape at the present time, but we will redecorate it to suit the tenant. This is a front apartment, one-half block of street car, and is in the most beautiful part of Angier Avenue, and we believe for a five-room apartment the rate of $60.00 is right.

ALSO Apt. 10 has entrance hallway, bedroom, breakfast room, kitchen and bath. The usual large closet space. That is typical of the Isabelle.

WE would advise that you look over this building before you rent elsewhere.

Oakdale Road Home

THIS two-story brick house contains eight rooms, of which four are bedrooms; there are two lovely white tile baths; it has a tile roof, a finished basement and a garage with side drive. On the first floor there is a large living room, a dining room, sun parlor, breakfast room and kitchen; the four bedrooms and two baths are located on the second floor; all bedrooms have double ventilation and have large closets. The interior of this house is decorated in a very tasteful manner; it is a sample of the new style houses that are being turned out now, representing intelligent designing, construction and finish. Houses of this type supply the home demand; just as a fine grade of automobile, although "built to sell," appeals to buyers who want the best. This house is located on one of those extra large Druid Hills lots, all of which are equipped with every city convenience. We can offer this house at a business man's price; that is, it will appeal to a purchaser who does not care to throw away any money.

Cullop's Error Loses Ten-Inning Game, 6 to 5

Bagby, Relieving Warmoth, Stars for Losers; Burke and Morris Hit Home Runs

Chattanooga, Tenn., August 22.—(Special.)—Atlanta Crackers battled today against a four-run lead garnered off Cy Warmoth in the first inning, and against some of the greatest pitching of the year by Red Bates, and tied the score in the ninth, only to have a muff of a fly by Nick Cullop in the tenth inning to set the stage for Mike Burke to win a bitterly-fought ball game for Chattanooga, 6 to 5.

One was down in the tenth when Cullop got under Cy Anderson's fly to right center and muffed it. Elliott Bigelow was given an intentional pass. Stung by the indignity offered him, Mike Burke swung at one of McLaughlin's fast ones, hit a bit late and pile drove the ball just inside the right field foul line for what would have been a triple had it been necessary, and the game was over.

Jim Bagby faded from the picture in the ninth when Spiers was sent in to run for him but Jeems really deserved to be the hero of the day. He turned in a phenomenal exhibition as relief hurler, flukes scoring two in the first that Warmoth had put on with none down, and Burke's home run being the only run after that off his offerings, with only two measly singles in addition.

Jeems kept the Crackers in the running at the bat with four singles and his willow centered each of the Atlanta scoring rallies and almost punctuated another. Possibly the old timer was tired but there was a shout of protest from the stand when Niehoff took him out in the ninth inning. It may have been a good hunch for, with two out Niehoff barked a drive along the right field foul line which got past Bigelow and Spiers came tearing home with the knotting run.

Chance Squandered.

The game oozed excitement and battling, without the brimstone of the previous two days, both teams being intent on victory. The Crackers squandered a chance in the first on a pass to Zoeller and Cy Anderson's wide throw of Niehoff, but Good forced Frankie at third and Niehoff was out stealing third as Cullop fanned.

In the last half Morris pried with a drive to right center that hopped over Cullop's head and went to the fence for a home run. Warmoth passed Carroll and Cy Anderson hit a beauty double past third, Carroll taking third. Carroll scored on a wild pitch and when Warmoth passed Bigelow, Niehoff eased him out. Bagby passed Burke, filling the bases. Hinkle backed Cullop against the wall for his fly, Cy Anderson scoring, everybody moving up. On Barnes' high hopper over Bagby, Bigelow got a big lead and scored while Gazella was throwing Barnes out.

Bates had his one bad inning in the third. One out. Bagby hit. Zoeller skied. Then the dreaded Niehoff-Good-Cullop combination got in some work. Niehoff hit, sending Bagby to third. Good doubled to right, scoring Bagby, putting the manager on third, and Cullop's single sent Niehoff and Good across. Burke hit over the wall in the home third. In the fourth a pass to Brock and Bagby's second hit put Johnny on third, but two were out, and Carroll made a running catch off Zoeller in right-center. In the home fourth, Izzy beat a scratch and took third when Gazella pegged wild on Bates, but Bagby nailed Izzy at the plate on Morris' squeeze bunt.

Signals Mixed.

A mixup of signals kept Nick Cullop from making the most remarkable home run of his career in the fifth. Two were down when Nick dodged a fast one near his bean. The ball hit the bat and lined over first, hitting just inside the foul line and curving away from Bigelow. Cullop tore around, but got a bum hunch to slide into third while Morris was kicking Bigelow's relay, which would have given Nick plenty of time to score. Smith hoisted to end the inning.

Two were down in the Cracker sixth when Brock hit and Bagby's third single went through Carroll, Brock scoring. Bagby's fourth hit, which was a liner of which Izzy came near making a great catch, came with one out in the ninth. Izzy made a fast play on Cullop's looping liner over the bag and almost doubled Spiers off first. Niehoff's drive and Bigelow's error followed for the tieing run. Bates wound up strong in the tenth with three easy chances.

HELEN MEETS MISS M'KANE IN FINALS

Forest Hills, N. Y., August 22.—(AP) For the first time in 38 years of tournament history, Britain and America will have it out for the national women's tennis championship when 19-year-old Helen Wills, titleholder for the past two years, matches her drives against the court-craft of Kathleen McKane, of England, in the final match Monday.

Both of the international rivals were forced to three sets in today's semi-finals to reach the title round, but the young American champion rode to victory which was far easier by comparison. She put Miss Eleanor Goss, of New York, to rout after losing the opening set 3-6, 6-0, 6-2, while Miss McKane had the battle of her career to vanquish Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, seven times American champion, by scores of 4-6, 7-5, 8-6.

The title match will bring the sturdy young Californian and the slim British girl together for the sixth time in the last three years. In their five previous matches Miss Wills has triumphed three times, scoring her latest triumph last Saturday in a stirring three-set match in the Wightman cup series by scores of 6-1, 1-6, 9-7.

Four Californians will fight it out for the doubles championship. Miss Wills, who won the title last year with Mrs. George W. Wightman reached the finals today with a new partner, Mary B. Browne, by eliminating the last British team, composed of Mrs. Dorothea Lambert Chambers and Miss E. H. Harvey, by the decisive margin of 6-3, 6-2.

Their opponents in the title match will be the veteran combination of Mrs. May Sutton Bundy and Miss Elizabeth Ryan, who conquered Mrs. Marion Z. Jessup, of Wilmington, Del., and Miss Eleanor Goss in the other semi-final 6-4, 6-3.

JUDGE MUST BE A BASEBALL FAN

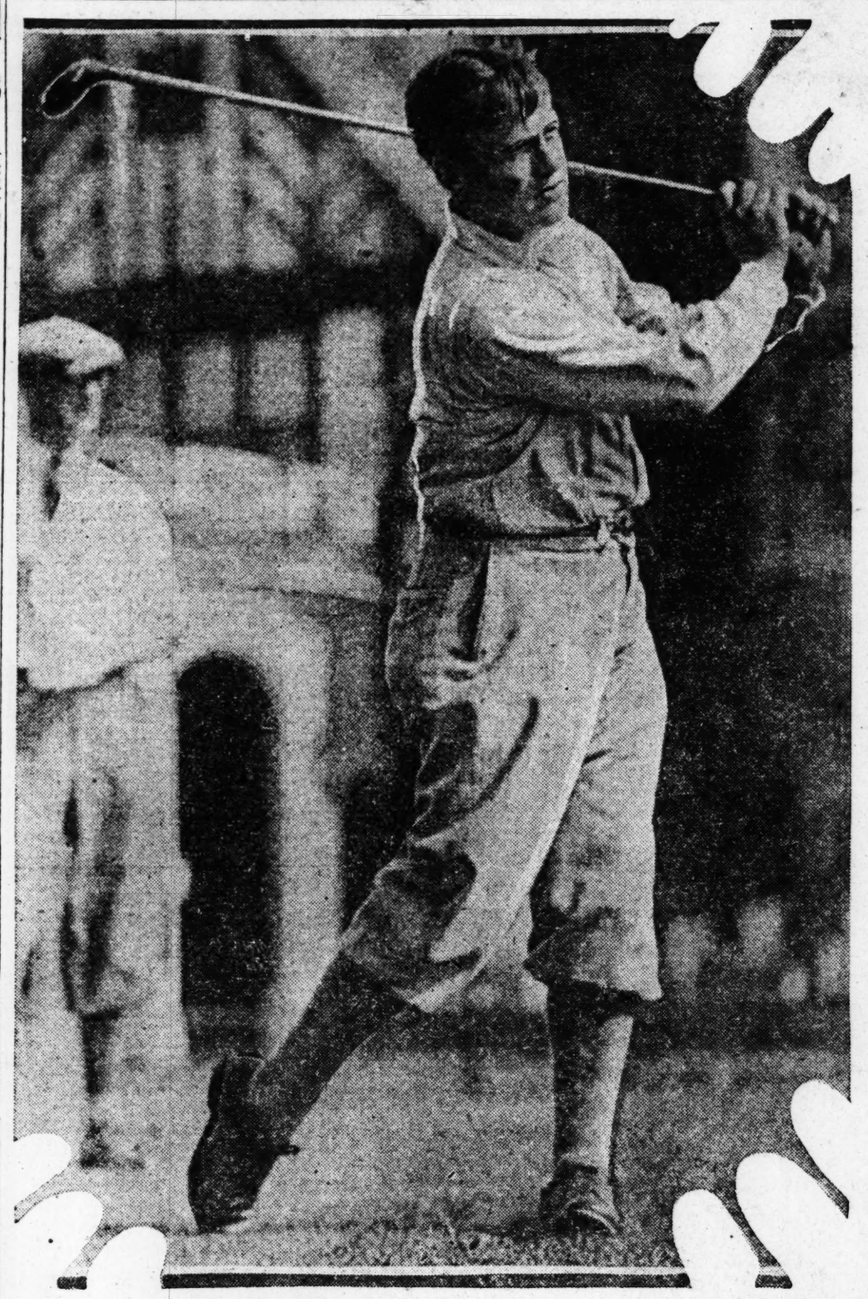

St. Paul, August 22.—(AP)—Ben Tincup and Thomas Estell, pitchers for the Louisville club of the American association, were arraigned today and pleaded guilty to charges of being drunk.

"Ten dollars or 10 days," said Judge J. W. Finehout. "I ought to give you both 30 days in the workhouse for the way you're been playing ball against St. Paul.

"However, if you think you can clean-up Minneapolis today, I'll suspend sentence."

Estell and Tincup agreed to do their best and they were released.

Out To Defend Amateur Title

ROBERT TYRE JONES, JR.

Atlanta's most brilliant golf star departed yesterday for Oakmont, with a brief stop at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Next Monday, August 31, he will seek to retain his present title of amateur golf champion of the United States.

Pirates Cop Double Bill To Forge Five Games Ahead

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, August 22.—To the tune of a throaty obbligato that sounded very much like the raspberry for the home boys, the Giants lost two games of ball to the Pirates today, 8 to 1 and 2 to 1.

This doesn't necessarily put the Giants out of the gay and prosperous fall exercises modestly known as the world series. But it certainly doesn't put them in, and, if the voice of the crowd was heard aright in its booing and beefing against the home professionals, the metropolitan populace will take the lickings of the Giants with courage if not with hilarity.

To dispose of the facts, which are always a handicap in the composition of a story, it is now stated that the Giants are five full games behind the Pirates, who lead the National legue, and can't overtake them in the present five-game series which ends Monday, even if they win the remaining three games. The Pirates are sure to be at least two games in front when the leave New York Monday evening to play in Boston against the Braves, who are the worst team in the league, but capricious and impudent, nevertheless, with a habit of abusing their betters and losing to teams of their own inferior class.

Perhaps the Pirates will pay off the tenderest grudge that ever troubled the bosom of Mr. H. Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburg firm, by winning all five games of the New York engagement. This would neatly counterbalance the five historic defeats inflicted on the Pirates of 1921, who came to New York late in August with a lead of seven games and developed a loose habit of losing from which they didn't recover that year.

Home Team Razzed.

Unlike other cities, New York imposes no obligation on the baseball customer to cheer the home team or keep a still tongue in the head of him. In this center of liberalism the customer has a right to cry "in my belief the home team is composed of a lot of bums who ought to be playing in Jersey City," or "I have come to the conclusion that the home team couldn't catch the measles in a pesthouse."

Scattered cries of disaffection somewhat like these have been audible at the Polo grounds all season. But today, when the Pirates, in a sudden convulsion of aggressiveness, began to assault the pitching of Virgil Barnes in the ninth inning of the first game the cash trade gave noisy comfort to the enemy and no noticeable cheer to the New York Giants, who are not a bad ball team and have won the last four pennants in their league. Nine Pirates went to bat. Five Pirates leaned their poundage against the balls that Barnes was throwing and five runners were washed across the plate on the feather of five waves of disloyal huzzahs and banzais and cries of "Jolly well done, sir!"

Perhaps it was because the amiable management of the Giants oversold the capacity of the baseball plant and when the holders of reserved seat tickets showed up late, pushed them in the face with cordial exclamations of "get out of here, you!" or perhaps that was only one of the reasons. Some of the customers may have been moved to disloyalty by the police who seemed to outnumber the civilians and also seemed to be under orders to defend the turnstiles against all comers, with or without tickets. At any rate, treason was rife at the Polo Grounds and the crowd had nothing but raspberries for the New York Giants of John J. McGraw.

Jeers Meant Dollars.

John J. McGraw's chagrin, if any, was not unmitigated, for he is a stockholder in the Giants and the very fact that there were 55,000 customers present to jeer or cheer was evidence that the baseball business is good. There are many baseball magnates who will agree to sit on home plate all day long if crowds of 55,000 will come to jeer at regular box office prices.

For the first time since the last world series, the grassy toupee of Coogan's bluff was rumpled and scuffed up by the tread of those fans who contribute no funds but sincere attention to the big games and the spy-glass trade was encamped again on the distant roofs of the apartment houses on the heights, indicating that the games in the ball yard were exercises of no ordinary significance.

The Pirates really won the first game in the fourth inning when they scored two runs, for that business gave them a lead of 3 to 1 which would have been sufficient. Kiki Cuyler, the Pirates outfielder, advanced to bat in the first inning as third hitter of the game with two men out, and performed the first really hostile act of the series, to-wit a home run. In the last half of the third, Frank Frisch, the Giants' captain and shortstop, tied the score with a homer of his own.

In the fourth inning, Barnhart, of the Pirates, drove a hit to center and tarried on first until Pi Traynor, the next man, sent another smack to the

CHICAGO RACE IS WON BY MAD PLAY

Chicago, August 22.—(AP)—Running a record-breaking race, Mad Play, the 4-year-old son of Fair Play-Mad Cap, owned by Harry F. Sinclair, of New York, captured the $20,000 Chicago special at Hawthorne today in a thrilling, whipping finish that left 20,000 spectators screaming with excitement.

The victor, recognized as one of the three or four foremost stake horses in America, ran one and three-sixteenths miles in 1:56 2-5, clipping 4-5 second off the track record established by Giblon in the first running of the special a year ago.

Kentucky Cardinal, owned by G. Frank Croissant, of Chicago, finished second, a length back. When it appeared to the crowd that Kentucky Cardinal, a 20 to 1 shot, was at last going to win a big race, Jockey L. Fator, astride Mad Play, vigorously applied the whip and the Rancocas star came through with a fresh burst of speed and won by a length.

Princess Doreen, the only filly in the race, heavily played, ran a brilliant race behind Mad Play to the stretch, but tired in the dash to the wire and finished third.

Mad Play was a 9-to-20 shot, and was heavily played. The price on Kentucky Cardinal to place was 5 to 1.

EDDIE COLLINS HURT IN GAME

Chicago, August 22.—(AP)—Manager Eddie Collins of the Chicago White Sox was carried from the field when his left leg was injured in going after a grund ball in the game with the Philadelphia Athletics. It happened in the first inning.

Examination of Collins' leg by a physician, disclosed that the veteran baseball player had not been seriously hurt. A muscle was strained.

JUDGE'S SKULL NOT FRACTURED

Detroit, August 22.—(AP)—Joe Judge, struck on the head by a ball pitched by Earl Whitehill in yesterday's Detroit-Washington game, was resting comfortably today at a hospital where it was said there was no fracture of the skull.

The Washington first baseman may have a slight brain concussion, the hospital report said.

A. A. C. AQUATIC TEAM WINS MEET

Pensacola, Fla., August 22.—(AP) Atlanta Athletic club scored 80 points today in the Southeastern Amateur union championship swimming meet to become sectional champions with a total of 94 points, compared with 68 points for the Pensacola team, runner-up. Birmingham's entry finished with 14 points for the two-day meet and Montgomery had four. Unattached swimmers scored ten points. Seven new S. A. A. U. records were broken.

Atlanta got seven first places in 11 events today. The Crackers also took six second places and in two events finished in one-two-three order. David Young, star of the Atlanta team, was high point man with 16 points to his credit.

These scores do not include points from the 440-yard senior relay race, feature event of the meet, which was held yesterday, and in which a protest filed by the local club was referred to National Secretary Rubien of the A. A. U. No decision has been made by Mr. Rubien, and points will not be counted until his opinion is made public.

New records were made in the 440-yard swim for men, the 50-yard dash for women, the 100-yard back stroke for men, the 100-yard dash for men, the 100-yard dash for women, the 100-yard breast stroke for men and the 220-yard swim for men.

The meet came to a close tonight with a banquet for swimmers and officials of the meet, at which medals were presented winners in various events.

LANDIS WORKS ON SCANDAL RUMOR

Chicago, August 22.—(AP)—Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis and John D. Martin, president of the Southern association, went into conference shortly after noon today to discuss rumors of scandal in connection with the Southern association pennant race.

Judge Landis today started reviewing evidence in the Southern association baseball scandal, but indicated that no decision would be reached before possibly two or three days.

Eichrodt was questioned by Landis under oath, but his testimony was not revealed.

The investigation grew out of reports, printed in The Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, that certain Nashville players had been asked to "lay down" to assist the New Orleans club in its pennant fight.

President Barnard, of the Cleveland Americans, said that Eichrodt would not be returned to the Nashville club under any circumstances. He said the player would appear in the Cleveland lineup as quickly as his injured shoulder would permit.

Barnard expressed confidence that Eichrodt was in no way involved in The Banner's charges.

President Martin tonight gave out a brief statement:

"Commissioner Landis and myself have examined Fred Eichrodt, under oath, as to his knowledge of published charges that he or other Nashville players were to be turned over to the New Orleans club by way of their major league contracts. The investigation is still being continued and will be pursued to a finish."

MIKE, JIMMY WIN BATTLES

New York, August 22.—(AP)—Two light heavyweights tonight regained prestige, lost by defeat here several weeks ago, when Mike McTigue, former champion, and Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo, N. Y., scored impressive victories. The erstwhile title holder won a judges' decision over the rugged New Orleans fighter, Young Marullo, in a 12-round bout, while Slattery gained an easy verdict against Maxey Rosenbloom, of New York, after six lightning fast rounds.

McTigue, making his first appearance in the ring since he lost his crown to Paul Berlenbach, outboxed and outpunched his southern foe in 11 of the 12 rounds. Only in the fourth session did Marullo succeed in avoiding McTigue's clever left sufficiently to score solidly on the former champion. This was the only round awarded the New Orleans entry by newspapermen at the ringside. The weights were announced as McTigue, 169, and Marullo, 167.

Slattery, who suffered a knockout at the hands of Dave Shade, California welterweight, in his last appearance here, was too fast and clever for Maxey Rosenbloom.

Jack Demave, New York, scored a technical knockout over Bob Lawson, Alabama negro heavyweight, in less than one round. The referee stopped the contest after Lawson had hit the canvas for the fourth time.

CLEVELAND BANS RUNNING RACES

Cleveland, Ohio, August 21.—There will be no running races in Cleveland for the remainder of this year. Following the action yesterday on the Ohio State Jockey club in canceling its fall meeting at Maple Heights track, John A. King, general manager of the Brooklyn half-mile track, today announced that the running meeting scheduled at that track September 21 to October 10 has been canceled.

BENNY SAYS HE IS THROUGH

New York, August 22.—(AP)—Benny Leonard, retired lightweight champion, will not reenter the ring again, he declared today in denying reports credited to his manager, Billy Gibson, that he intended to try a comeback and fight Jimmy Goodrich, newly recognized champion, for the title.

Four Players and Cash Consideration Involved; To Join Yanks in Fall

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN.

Frankie Zoeller, pestiferous little "half-pint" outfielder who has been worth his weight in gold to the Cracker cause during the past two campaigns, will be a teammate of Babe Ruth next season. That is, in case Ruth sticks on Miller Huggins' team and accepts the proposed reduction in the Bambino's remuneration.

The transaction, as announced by President Dan Michalove last night, involves a cash consideration not to be sneezed at and four players, any or all of whom will have a tough job replacing the midget in the esteem of the fans or in his value to the ball club.

He will report to the Yanks following the series with Fort Worth, if you will pardon our optimism.

FRANKIE ZOELLER.

Zoeller was obtained from Little Rock by the Cracker management during the winter trading season of 1923-24. The trade sent Joe Guyon to the Travelers and brought the criticism of many fans down upon the heads of the management. But Zoeller soon won a place in the sun and the young midget will be missed in the outer garden.

"Raised" by Elberfeld.

Frankie was literally raised by "Kid" Elberfeld, noted figure in managerial ranks of the Southern association. As a kid he would hang around the ball park, acting as mascot for the team and chasing truant baseballs that hopped over the fence.

The "Kid" first tried to break Frankie in as an infielder, but with little success. He was playing before a home audience and the fans were not very lenient with his miscues and were glad when he was traded to Atlanta, though he had been transformed into an outfielder.

When the Crackers visit Little Rock these days, the Arkansas fans cast a longing eye in the direction of left field, when the Travelers are batting.

He had a good year with Atlanta last season, but this year has developed into a regular little wonder. His throwing arm is deadly and powerful, he is a ball hawk of the first water, and, on account of his diminutive frame, makes an ideal lead-off man at bat. He has a knack of getting on first base when others fail. Once on, he usually gets around.

Popular With Fans.

Zoeller was one of the first players in the country to score more than 100 runs this season, his mark being 110 runs including Thursday's game. Up to that time his record was as follows: 127 games, at bat 500 times, 110 runs and 162 hits for a total of 216 bases. Twenty-four of his safeties were doubles, six were triples and six home runs. He sacrificed 11 times and stole 14 bases for a percentage of .324.

The opinion of a majority of fans is that he is the best outfielder in the league. He is still young, only 23 years old, weighs 160 pounds soaking wet, is five feet and seven inches tall, bats left handed, throws right handed and eats with either hand.

Frankie was born in St. Louis, Mo. He is unmarried.

SMITH WINS WESTERN TITLE

Youngstown, Ohio, August 22.—(AP) McDonald Smith of New York today wrested the western open golf championship from Bill Mehlhorn, of Chicago, by shooting 281 for 72 holes, but the ousted champion won his share of glory by equaling the Youngstown Country club course record of 66 in the last round to tie with four others for second place at 287.

Smith, who won the title in 1911 at Idle Wild club, Chicago, with 299, scored below par on every round of the 6,577-yard links. He ended the brilliant grind with a 69 after tallying 70-71-71 for the first three. His total has been equalled only once, Jock Hutchison getting that figure in winning two years ago at Memphis.

Mehlhorn, in shooting his 66, scored eight birdies and barely missed a six-foot putt on the 140-yard for a birdie 2, and a new course record. His score was the third of the day under 70, for in addition to Smith's 69, Eddie Held, of St. Louis, who was second among the amateurs, made 63 in the morning round. Densmore Shute, of Huntington, W. Va., state champion, was the only amateur to get among the first ten, scoring 290 in spite of a mediocre 77 this forenoon. Held was tied for eleventh place with 292.

Won at Chicago.

Last year at Calumet club, Chicago, Mehlhorn won the title handily with 293. This year there were 14 scores of 293 or better. So fast was the play that 33 of the 63 who played today scored under 300 for the four rounds. Smith's score was seven strokes better than four strokes to the hole for the whole tournament. In addition to equalling the western open record Smith bettered the national open record of 286, set by Chick Evans at Minneapolis in 1916. While none of the other stars could come closer than six strokes to Smith's score, five tied at that figure, 287. Emmett French, home professional, playing with Mehlhorn, shot a pair of 72s today and entered this tie with Walter Hagen, formerly British open titleholder; Leo Diegel, Canadian open champion, and John Farrell, who had a 68 on Friday.

In seventh place was William Klein, of New York, with 288 or an even four strokes to the hole. Ray Dell, of Cincinnati, got eighth place with 289, while Craig Wood, of Louisville, tied for tenth with Densmore Shute at 290.

Al Watrous, of Grand Rapids, who had held the lead at the end of the first two rounds with 140 slipped this morning, taking 42 on the out nine of the first round and he fell again on the final lap, taking 41 to tally 292. In addition to Held, this score was shared by Francis Gallett, of Milwaukee.

Larry Nabholtz, of Cleveland, who got the lead on the first round with a 67 and was still close to the top last night with 143, had a disastrous 80 this forenoon and while he was only above par in the final circuit, he totaled 296.

Champ Prominent.

The new champion has been a prominent golfer for many years. More than a dozen years ago he was in a triple tie with his brother, Alex, and John McDermott at the Philadelphia Cricket club for the national open championship, only to lose in the playoff. He won the western in 1911, while he was a professional at Del Monte, Cal. He finished just behind Jim Barnes in the recent British open after having had a lead of eight strokes at the beginning of the fourth round. His score in the present meet was without fluke and almost without flaw.

Mehlhorn's record card with par:

Par, out	444 443 355-36
Mehlhorn, out	333 334 354-32
Par, in	444 453 543-36—72
Mehlhorn, in	434 543 443-34—66

SIXTY GOLFERS ENTER MEET

Asheville, N. C., August 22.—(AP)—More than 60 golfers have entered for the summer tournament of Asheville Country club, qualifying rounds of which will be played Tuesday, August 25, and fully 100 more are expected to register before medal play starts. Twelve flights will be qualified and trophies presented to winner, runner-up and consolation winner of each flight.

Players enrolled include practically all of last years first flight and a number of younger stars in addition.

First flighters of 1924 who have entered include Harry Ehle, Miami; Henry Westall, Asheville; Clarence Camp, Ocala; Fred Eansor, Jacksonville; Wilbur Baird, Asheville; Jack Heath, Charlotte; Eugene Mills, Raleigh; Paul Haddock, Charlotte; Lyman Beecher, Hillsboro, Ohio; C. A. Roberts, Miami; Frank Ford, Charleston and Dr. McAfee, Macon.

Interest in the lower flights is expected to be keen with the return of many players of former years, most of whom report lower handicaps. The course at Asheville Country club is rendered extremely fast with the dry weather and scoring has been comparatively low in preliminary rounds of the past few days. The amateur record of 66, established by Francis Ouimet was approached within a stroke by Harry Ehle, of Miami, and Wilbur Baird, of Asheville, recently. Hard fairways permitting long drivers to place their teeshots within pitching distance of all but the longer holes. Green are in good condition and the addition of several new traps and hazards adds to the problems of the course.

SANDE RIDES HASTE TO WIN

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., August 22. (AP)—Haste, owned by J. E. Widener, Sande up, triumphed in the $10,000 Grand Union hotel stakes for 2-year-olds at six furlongs at the Spa today. Canter finished second in front of Sarmaticus. The time was 1:12 1-5.

The merchants and citizens handicap, $5,000 added, for 3-year-olds and upwards, went to Spot Cash, 12-to-1 shot, owned by A. C. Bostwick. Big Blaze came in second and Cherry Pie third. Spot Cash negotiated the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:58.

WOMAN HANGS UP TRACK MEET

Toronto, August 22.—(AP)—Fanny Rosenfeldt, Toronto's leading woman athlete, set a new world's record for women for 220 yards at a track and field meet held today, under the auspices of the Toronto Ladies Athletic club. She ran the distance in 26 seconds, clipping two-fifths of a second off the existing mark.

Prep Football Prospects Indicate Close Race

Local Schools Present Interesting Menus; Smithies Must Step To Keep Title

BY BEN COTHRAN.

In a few more days first call for candidates will have been made and prep football aspirants in Atlanta will be preparing for one of the best seasons of its history. September 1 has been set by most of the coaches as the date for the first practice. The season this year will be featured by the appearances of stars from the junior high schools who will bolster the nucleus of the teams, most of the old men having graduated, leaving vacancies that will be hard to fill.

Tech High will be strengthened by new material for the team and for the coaching staff. Joe Bennett, former Smithie star and all-southern tackle and captain while at the University of Georgia, has been signed as line coach to help Assistant Coach T. L. Alexander this year. New material for the team will be received in the form of six stars from O'Keefe and seven varsity players from Bass.

From the present outlook only five letter men will be returned to the team from last year's squad. Parshall, alternate captain-elect, is counted on to fill one of the halfback positions. Last year with "Stumpy" Thomason, all-prep half, Parshall was the cause of many of the team's scores and should develop into a great player this year. Mike Sewell, a sub from last year's squad, will also be trying for a halfback position, having made a good showing in the games he appeared in last year. Rasnake will be a candidate for either fullback or half.

Coaches Alexander and Bennett will have a hard job in building up a line for the squad this year. The only two men returned are Captain Payne, all-prep guard, and George Obear, 200-pound tackle from last year's squad. Jack Davis, who came to Tech High last year from Commerce, showed up well in spring training and should make a good pick for one of the flank positions. Vess and Suddeth, two Junior High players, will fight it out for the other end.

Junior High Helps.

The Junior High players are counted on to fill the places of such men as Lautzenhiser, Holland, all-prep flank man and captain of the team, who was lost through graduation; McConnell, who has gone to the Army to prepare for West Point; McClure, another tackle, who was lost to the school by graduation; Cedartown Rusk, who has left a big hole to be filled at center.

Michelemara, guard, who comes from Bass Junior High, is looked upon by Coach Alexander as a running mate for "Swinkey" Payne.

Of the famous "Five Horsemen," who carried the Smithie eleven to a southern championship last year, Parshall is left. Rosenblatt, brainy little quarterback, will try for a place on Vandy's feshman team this fall. Bob Mayhew and Bob Randolph, two of the best fullbacks ever developed at Tech High, will be missing. And in all probability Stumpy Thomason will not be at Tech High this year.

First practice will be held on September 1 at the new Henry W. Grady field. The whole field has been plowed, rolled and grass planted. All the games at home will be played on this field.

This year's schedule is like that of last year—stiff. The Smithies will journey as far west as Pine Bluff, Ark., as far north as Raleigh, N. C., and as far south as Miami, Fla.

The schedule for 1925 follows:

October 3—Central High at Chattanooga, Tenn.
October 9—Columbus High at Atlanta, Ga.
October 17—Raleigh High at Raleigh, N. C.
October 23—Monroe A. & M. in Atlanta, Ga.
October 30—G. M. A. in Atlanta.
November 7—Savannah High at Savannah, Ga.
November 14—Riverside in Atlanta.
November 20—Greenville (S. C.) High in Atlanta.
November 26—Pine Bluff High at Pine Bluff, Ark.
December 1—Boys' High in Atlanta, Ga.
December 5—Miami High at Miami, Florida.

Hurricane Seeks Coach.

Boys' High has a large number of veterans returning this year. The school is as yet without a coach, but it is understood that Shorty Doyal, former Tech star, has been offered the position and will most likely accept it. If he does, a team will be developed that will give the Smithies a hard fight, for Doyal was once an assistant coach at Tech High, going to the junior high schools year before last, where he turned out good teams.

Nearly all of Boys' High line will be back this year, while the biggest loss will be in the backfield. Captain "Red" McCleskey, who wrought havoc with the Tech High offense last year, will be back at his flank position. Bill Dulaney and Sam Fincher, look best for tackle positions. At present only one guard will be returned, Joe Madden, a star from last year. Junior high men will be counted on to fill the other positions.

In the backfield Pete Ford, half, will fight it out with Corker and Little Six Miller, both halves from last year's squad. Breezy Winn, Purple mound ace, also an expert at picking holes in the opposing line, is counted upon to fill the hole left by "Ikey" Boland at full. At quarter back, another big gap, the position filled by Malon Courts last year, looks as though "Hot Shot" Watkins, a scrub of last year, will be the best bet.

Captain McCleskey has asked that all candidates for the team report at the Henry Grady field Monday morning at 10 o'clock for conference.

The Boys' High 1925 schedule follows:

October 2—Gordon Institute at Barnesville.
October 9—Lanier High at Macon.
October 23.—G. M. A. in Atlanta.
October 30—Marist in Atlanta.
November 6—LaGrange High at LaGrange.
November 13—Anniston Academy at Anniston.
November 20—Columbus High at Columbus.
November 26—Duval High at Jacksonville, Fla.
December 1—Tech High in Atlanta.

Phillips Is Optimistic.

Coach Pup Phillips is looking forward to one of the best seasons that U. S. B. has had in many years. A new assistant, Coach R. C. Roberts, Ohio state star, has been signed to help out this year. Practically the whole line of last year will return headed by Captain Frank Spear, who will fill a guard position. Dickie Butler, flashy quarterback of last year's team, who was responsible for more than one of university's victories, will be back at this position.

With this pair heading the list Coach Phillips has Murray center or guard; Ralph Coursey, guard; Russell Timmons, tackle, and Beckey Speaks, tackle, returning from last year's squad to help build up a team that will most likely put in a strong bid for the G. I. A. A. title.

Two new men will make bids for positions on the team this year. Kytle, of Tallapoosa, Ala., has registered at U. S. B. and will make a strong bid for fullback. Perkerson, a star last year at LaGrange, will also try for the team. With two candidates coming up from junior high the candidate list will be about complete. Carpenter O'Keefe star of 1924 and Mitchell, another junior high star are both entering the Fourteenth street institution.

Coach Phillips sees in the new G. I. A. A. ruling his only chance to get a game with Tech High this season. The new rule calls for the selection of the two best teams in the state to play for the title instead of one team being picked on past performances. Phillips believes that he will produce a team good enough to be picked as one of the teams to play for the title and believes that Tech High will be the other.

Only one open date appears on the Bluebird schedule, which follows:

October 3—Oglethorpe Freshmen in Atlanta.
October 8—Open date.
October 17—Savannah High in Atlanta.
October 23—Gordon Institute in Barnesville.
October 30.—Locust Grove in Atlanta.
November 7—Riverside in Atlanta.
November 13—Columbus High in Columbus.
November 20—Newnan High in Atlanta.
November 28—Monroe A. & M. in Atlanta.

Morrow Absent.

Coach Morrow, football mentor at G. M. A. has not yet returned to Atlanta and no definite plans about football have been made. Mayo, Oliver and Pike, three big stars of last year's eleven will be trying for honors on freshman teams at college this season, leaving Rainey, and George Ragsdale, tackle; Lewis, Matthews and Dishman as the nucleus of a new team for this fall.

Marist and Decatur High have not made any plans so far, but with the opening date of school approaching they will get into action and prep football will be on its way toward another great season.

NEW ILLINI LINE IS NEEDED

Urbana, Ill., August 22.—(Special.)—Coach Robert C. Zuppke faces the difficult task of building almost an entirely new line for the 1925 University of Illinois football team. Rokusek, end; Hall, tackle; Slimmer and Miller, guards, and Roberts, center, have graduated, leaving only green line material.

McIlwain, smashing halfback, and Grange's great aid in interference, is gone; so Zuppke must perfect a new offense and interference if Grange is to keep step with his past record.

Kassel, sophomore end who proved adept at grabbing forward passes; Muhl, Rokusek's understudy and a fast man under punts; Chuck Brown, tackle, and Shively, reserve guard, are the only letter men available for the line.

Captain Harold Grange, All-American halfback, is ready to play his last year. Grange is already in good shape and down to playing weight. Harry Hall and Gallivan, quarterbacks, will be back. Hall, Zuppke's field general for the past two years, is a valuable defensive and all-around player. Gallivan has had one year's experience and can be used at halfback as well as quarter.

Britton, fullback, punter and placekicker, was used at guard during spring practice. Green, who played well against Ohio State in Grange's position, and Leonard, who was held back by bad arches, are the other letter men available for the backfield. Green follows interference well, while Leonard is a good punter and pass receiver.

The Illini must look to last year's subs and freshman varsity men. The 1924 reserves include Shields and Carr, ends, who played in two minor games; Wickhorst and Bodman, tackles; Cooledge, a member of the 1922 squad, who has been ineligible, guard, and Fisher, center. The subbacks include Dancey, a clever open-field runner who was out with injuries last fall, and Jenks, centerfielder on the baseball team, may attempt to make a comeback. He was a star of the 1921 freshman team, and was going strong in 1922 when injured. Wilson, who played in several games at tackle, was used at fullback this spring.

HART TURNS TO FOOTBALL

Hartwell, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—With the hot summer days swiftly flying by and the dawn of another football season just over the horizon, Hartwell and Hart county fans mechanically turned eyes toward Hartwell High for the championship grid team of this section of the state.

Although seven letter men of the 1924 aggregation are lost to this year's team, prospects now are brighter than they have been at any other pre-season interval. Between 20 and 30 candidates are expected out for the initial practice on September 2. Besides a number on the squad of last year there are some from other schools to come here for their training.

Preparing for Fall Trade

The figure at the top needs no introduction to a southern football crowd. It is none other than William A. Alexander, head coach at Georgia Tech. He is patiently waiting for gridiron practice to start in September. In the middle is seen a view of the new stadium which will accommodate over 30,000 spectators. At the bottom, Coach Alexander was caught discussing the situation with Coach Robert Alva Clay, his right-hand man.

Capstone Supports Look For Alabama to Repeat

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., August 22.—(Special.)—There is a fond hope among University of Alabama supporters that the Capstone grid eleven of this season will parade before grid fans the greatest backfield aggregation in the south. And when one looks over the glittering array of experienced men that Wallace Wade's eleven will start the season with, it seems probable.

Look over the list of experienced letter men: Pooley Hubert, Johnny Mack Brown, Dave Rosenfeld, Grant Gillis, Emile Barnes, Hershal Caldwell and Jimmy Johnson. And then of the reserves—Hussey, Wall and others—and the fresh stars of last year—"Red" Brown, Dick Hamner and several others. The others in both cases are not regarded by the writer as more than long shots for regular berths.

When the curtain rang down last Thanksgiving and Alabama was crowned Southern conference champions, Coach Wade stated that Caldwell would be given a chance to play fullback for the Tidesmen this season. Caldwell played one game in this position last year and the 165-pounder ripped wide gaps through the line of Georgia in that game. Unless Wade has changed his mind, Caldwell will be given his chance to cavort from that position this year.

Versatile Backs.

It will be a versatile backfield, this one of Alabama this year, if it is taken from the seven experienced men. There is none among the lot, unless it be Johnson, who cannot punt and pass. Gillis, for two years, has been the punter and passer of the team, but constant practice has made the other gridders proficient in this art. The most likely reserves and frosh of last year to break in are also proficient in this art.

It is expected that the backfield will be built around Hubert, the all-southern halfback, who will play his last season for Alabama this year. Hubert is a fullback, in a certain sense, but has directed the play of the Crimsons for two seasons. He is heavy, and fairly fast, and has wonderful football sense. His judgment in directing plays last year is said to be one of the main factors of Alabam's success. As a plunger, he has few equals in the south and he is now able to pass and punt fairly well.

The two jack rabbits of the squad—Brown and Rosenfeld—made their reputations last year and should have equally good seasons this year. Brown, who gained 80 yards against Georgia Tech in three plays, and who ran 98 yards against Kentucky for a touchdown, as well as numerous other long runs against other teams, is expected to be one of the south's greatest backs this year. Rosenfeld first came into prominence by a 40-yard break to touchdown against Sewanee and kept adding long runs to his record until the season was over. Both are dangerous men in an open field and both will net many touchdowns to Alabama this season.

Old Blood Favored.

Barnes and Gillis, both with two years' experience behind them, will be hard to keep off the team. Gillis' punting and passing and open field running has aided Alabama a great deal in the past and Barnes' great defensive work has helped. Johnson was used mainly as a reserve last year, but sprang into notice by wonderful play against 'Ole Miss in Montgomery. One of the best bets for a place this year.

There are others who may hold prominent positions when the season starts but at present the old blood has the call over the new. It is hard to see how any of the reserves or any members who were "rats" last year will break into the squad, but one can never tell about such things. It looks rosy, this prospect for a strong backfield, but September is three weeks away and the first game does not take place until late in September.

DETROIT FANS HURL BOTTLES

Detroit, August 22.—(AP)—A decision by Umpire Nallin, in calling Wingo out at second in the fifth inning of today's Washington-Detroit game was greeted by a shower of pop bottles from the bleachers. Nobody was injured in the barrage, although play was halted for a few minutes until the bottles had been gathered up.

Mercer Bears Preparing For Invasion of Bulldogs

Macon, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—With slightly more than four weeks to elapse before the dedication of the new Macon municipal stadium with the football game between Mercer university and the University of Georgia, football fans all over the state are turning their attention to the prospects of both teams for the coming year.

From some, one hears that "Mercer's football prospects are high;" from others, "Mercer's athletic outlook is in a state of uncertainty."

Advance reports from Georgia indicate that last year's Bulldog team has suffered heavily from the loss of eleven players. Evidently much perturbation is prevalent in the Georgia camp.

Will Mercer, fired by zeal and enthusiasm over the dedication of the handsome new Macon stadium, overcome the Bulldogs? That is the question that many football fans are asking. Many are of the opinion that the Baptist Bears will receive inspiration from the deduction and emerge victoriously from the Georgia fracas.

Others, more pessimistic, point to the number of players that the Macon team has lost.

Fourteen letter men will be missing when the Bears report for practice on September 7 at Colaparchee Park, Macon. Eleven men from the University of Georgia will not be in the lines of the Red and Black team when the new Macon stadium is opened.

Both Lose Heavily.

From the Mercer team we find missing "Crook" Smith, "Red" Simmons, Dewey Jowers, 'Shorty' Poore, "Kid" Cecil. Sid Ellison, Dave Rice, "Son" Sammons, "Scotty" Young, "Red" Adqams, "Red" Lawrence, Virgil Johnson, Holmes Coffee and Ed Smith.

The eleven Georgia players who will not be in the line-up against Mercer are John Fletcher, Jim Taylor, Ike Joselove, Charlie Wheirs, Jimmie Howard, Armond Mapp, "Teanny" Randall, Roosevelt and Milton Day, J. D. Thomason and Ed Bass.

Returning to Mercer for the grid season are the following letter men from last year: Dick Carson, Bela Lancaster, Eli McDonald, Slew Dunn, Denver Fleming, Kay Tipton, John Parks, Jack Bate, Jimmie Glover and Gerald Teasley. Around these players the Bear machine of 1925-'26 will be built.

Georgia will have 13 letter men to return, whereas Mercer's last year's wearers of the "M" number 10. The Bulldog players returning to face Mercer and other foes of the Red and Black are: "Jelly" Rogers, Cecil Moore, Howell Follis, "Buster" Kilpatrick, "Big Six" Luckey, Kels Boland, "Smack" Thompson, Jack Curran, Jake Butler, Tom Nelson, Walter Forbes, Ike Sherlock and George Morton.

TECH TICKETS IN DEMAND

The annual season seat sale for all Georgia Tech football games at Grant field, Atlanta, seven in all, will begin September 1, according to an announcement by the officials of the athletic association.

Never before has Tech scheduled such a home program and three of the games are certain to draw the largest crowds of the southern season. The home schedule of the Golden Tornado is such that all real football fans and especially the alumni of the colleges on Tech's schedule, who desire to obtain good seats for the games between Tech and their teams, will find it wise to purchase season tickets.

All orders for season tickets will be filled first. Orders for individual games will be taken care of afterwards. Because of the certain demands for the tickets to the Georgia, Auburn and Notre Dame games in Atlanta, to say nothing of the clash with Alabama, the 1924 conference champions, Oglethorpe, V. M. I. and Florida, good seats will be hard to secure unless purchased as season tickets.

Inasmuch as the season demand will be filled from the central sections of the east and west stands, the majority of the good seats will be taken in this rush, leaving only end seats for the applications for individual games. Tech wishes this to be well understood in order to prevent misunderstanding later in the season.

Those desiring season tickets should mail their application to the Georgia Tech Athletic association, Atlanta, Ga. The price of the ticket for the seven games is $15.50 plus 25 cents for registering and mailing any one order.

U. of Virginia Points to Athens

University, Va., August 22.—(Special.)—In two more weeks football practice at the University of Virginia will begin. Four weeks after the men report for training on September 7 the Virginia team will open the season by meeting Hampden-Sidney team presented. His team was new, and seven of eleven men were playing their first varsity game. Strong opposition is again expected from the charges of Coach Bernier, and every day of the four weeks will be needed by the Virginians to get ready for this initial scrap.

But a much harder test, perhaps the most trying of the season, is to come a week later when the Old Dominion representatives travel to Athens, Ga., to meet the University of Georgia. Advance dope credits the Bulldog squad with having the best possibilities in the whole southern conference.

JOE DUNDEE MEETS MITCHELL

Baltimore, August 22.—(AP)—Joe Dundee, Baltimore boxer, has been matched with Pinkey Mitchell, junior welterweight champion, in a 10-round decision bout at Philadelphia on September 21.

Thirteen Jacket Players Of 1924 Return; Frosh Graduates To Bolster Squad

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

The man who took over the coaching burden at Georgia Tech when John Heiseman returned to Pennsylvania, and who has been turning out good football teams annually ever since, looks like a good bet to do it again this year. Meaning, of course, W. A. Alexander, a graduate of Tech, a football player there, and a gentleman of considerable astuteness on a gridiron.

Alexander entered Tech in 1906 as a sub-freshman and required six years to finish the course. He fooled around with football considerably during that period, so when John Heiseman needed an assistant in 1912 his eye and choice fell on Alexander. When Heiseman left at the end of the 1919 season to go to Pennsylvania Alexander, who had spent two years in the army during the war, was made head coach.

Mr. Alexander is not a purveyor of bear stories, an addiction of a vast majority of football coaches. He had no trouble in recalling for our education that several football players who worked for Tech's glory last year will be among those present when the first practice is held September 7, and he also was able to see some promise in a few of the youngsters who will have their first varsity experience this fall.

Of the old guard these will be back: Pool, center; Carpenter and Forrest, guards; Tharpe, tackle; Marshall, Irwin and Merkle, ends; Wilton, quarterback; Wyckoff, Barron, Williams, Connelly and Sam Murray, backfield men.

Looking for Reserves.

"All we need to think about," Alex remarked offhand, "is about six more backs, three ends, six tackles and three centers."

Well, we thought off-hand, that was a pretty large order, but Alexander launched into a list of those upon whom his eye already has fallen and he told of the following new candidates: Thrash, center; Martin, guard; Hood, Hearne, Gaston and Elliott, linemen and probably tackles; Crowley, end; Wright, Brewer, Lillard, Sprick and Reed, backs.

While he is thinking about ways of rounding up enough suitable football candidates to fill out a full squad, ready to take the field in emergencies, Mr. Alexander will be using his spare time to figure out methods of hurdling the obstacles presented in a schedule which starts off with Oglethorpe and then takes on in succession V. M. I., Penn State at New York, Florida, Alabama, Notre Dame, Vanderbilt at Nashville, Georgia and Auburn. If he can figure out a method of winning all these football games, which does not seem to be possible, he not only will have earned the title of a good football coach, but as something of a sensation in the miracle business also.

Oglethorpe, itself, long regarded as just a practice football game, probably will battle Tech to a standstill this fall. Only three weeks of preparation are given Alexander and his crew to get ready for that game on September 26 and they are going to be faced by a veteran team capable of mighty good football. In fact it would not be surprising if Tech failed to win the game.

No Easy Games.

After the Oglethorpe contest the schedule continues right through a list of tough ones. There isn't an easy game on the list, unless one could call the hard-fighting V. M. I. team a soft mark. And one cannot in truth.

No small amount of difficulty is being experienced at Grant field in getting the turf in condition for the season's schedule. Early in the summer while the magnificent new stands were being built the gridiron was graded and generally churned up so that a new stand of grass could be grown. Grass roots—not seeds—were planted, and everyone sat back and waited for the grass to grow. And then it didn't rain. Everyone knows it didn't rain. It just naturally dried up many of Coach Alexander's grasses. He and Alva ("Kid") Clay, his versatile assistant, almost wept enough to water the grass, but it did little good. The grass is coming up, slowly, and large through persuasion of a hose. If only a lot of rain would come.

The new stands at Grant field are wonderful and right on top of the east one there is going to be a brand new press box, built to specifications which will include the needs of a newspaperman. It will have a roof to shed the rain and it will have glass windows to keep it off your shirt. There will be room in it for almost a hundred persons if Alexander's recommendations are followed.

McGugin Out to Develop New Mates for Gil Reese

BY HOMER GEORGE.

Nashville, Tenn., August 22.—(Special.)—Here is the low down on football prospects at Vanderbilt as such prospects look three weeks ahead of time. These prospects were figured by Coaches McGugin and Josh Cody and represent the real conditions as they exist at present. Maybe things will change a bit between now and the opening game September 26. But this gives all a chance to figure what the coaches will have to do this fall to build a winning team and the material with which they will work.

First we will look at the awful gap left by losses through graduation. Lynn Bomar and Hek Wakefield, All-American and All-Southern ends, two of the most brilliant players in Vanderbilt history, are gone forever. Their places will be difficult to fill. Possibly Wakefield was the best end in America during most of last season. And Bomar? His place will be mighty difficult to fill because he was so useful in so many capacities. However, the best possible will be done.

Then the line losses were further augmented by the departure of Kelly and Lawrence, the two mighty guards; and Walker and Rives, the pair of star tackles. These four made about the most powerful quartet in the south last year and at Minesota were declared better than the powerful men in the Gopher line. Their loss is really a calamity. Add to them the loss of Tom Ryan, the great fullback and punter, and something of the fearfulness of the stroke is better evident.

McGugin At Helm.

With the losses set down let's turn to the coaching staff. Here will be found that brilliant leader, Dan McGugin, whose record is surpassingly fine. He will be head coach as usual. With him will be Josh Cody, as his righ-hand man doing much of the line work, and John Weibel, the tiny guard from the wonder Notre Dame team of last season, to help. Lewis Hardage will doubtless be back to look after the backfield. Possibly another assistant coach will help in the work. But this quartette has brains and skill and the results should be pleasing.

From last year's fine squad twelve letter men are sure to return and there is a slight possibility of two others getting back. If this possibility developes a great load will be taken off the minds of the coaches for the possibility is none other than that Bob Rives and Dick Walker, the two tackles, may come back to the fold. Each has another year and though they said farewell to Vandy this spring they may change their minds. Nothing definite has been heard from either, but an occasional whisper has intimated that they may answer the call.

The twelve men who are coming back are Jess Keene, center; Kenneth Bryan, guard; Bob Ledyard, tackle; Fred McKibbon, end; Zack Coles, end; Gil Reese, captain and halfback; Bill Hendrix, halfback; Red Sanders, halfback; Wilson Orr, halfback; George Waller and Nig Waller, quarters; Neil Gargile, end. These are all men who have played one year except Gil Reese, Kenneth Bryan and George Waller. Gil has one year more, while Bryan and Waller have played two years.

Reserve Strength Strong.

With these as a nucleus and the men from the scrubs and last year's freshman class the coaches hope to build a fine team. From the scrubs there will be Fonde, who played on the Pennsylvania freshman team two years ago; Bob Martin, a Georgia Tech freshman of two years ago, and who subbed for Doug Wycoff at that time; Graham Ryan, a brother of Tom Ryan; James Lancaster and Wilson, the latter playing on the Florida freshmen two years ago. Then there is Red Bailey, a big, strapping fellow who ought to make a wonder end, and Jack Yearwood, a former quarter. Also Bob Alexander, a center.

From the freshman class of last year it is expected that several will graduate onto the varsity. Of these Vernon Sharp, a center of fine ability, will be a power. Faircloth and Cecil, two guards, have shown a lot of ability. Both are powerfully built and know their jobs. Lusky and James have shown wonderful promise at tackle. Lusky is possibly the most promising lineman shown in several years and is sure to make a real battle for a regular job at tackle. Everyone is mighty sweet on him. For ends there are Creson, Booth and Davis, a trio which has shown enough to arouse enthusiasm. Spears and Owens are two quarters of great ability. It is expected that Spears will be the most brilliant player of the year. Bill Paul is a fullback prospect of ability. Draper, Norred and Baldridge are fine halfback prospects.

Altogether the coaching staff feels that if no bad luck hits the team a terrific blow they will be able to turn out a squad which will be a credit to Vanderbilt and carry on her past glorious record. Maybe some others will turn up to help. Certainly every man will be given a great chance.

LAGRANGE HI SEEKS TO REPEAT

LaGrange, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—LaGrange High school is making plans to put out a football team that will surpass that of last season, when the locals were undefeated by seven of the leading high schools of the state. When the call for candidates is answered, five regulars from the 1924 squad will be missing. They are Bryant, center; Fisher, halfback; Mann, end; Estes, quarterback, and Powell, guard. The letter men returning are Bolden, fullback; Albright, halfback; Haynes, end; Cassidy and Gibson, tackles; Ferguson and Priester, guard; Joe Benton and Gip Carr, two Carrollton A. & M. stars last season, and other new material will add strength to LaGrange High's championship aspirations.

The schedule has not yet been completed. Four open dates remain, and according to Coach Gressette, arrangements may be made to play any prep or high school in the state.

BROWN COACHES AUBURN RATS

Auburn, Ala., August 22.—(Special.)—A most attractive program yet to be arranged for a freshman athletic team is included in the football schedule for the Auburn Tiger freshmen for the campaign this fall. Those freshmen entering the Orange and Blue ranks on the Auburn plains will have ample opportunity to participate in a real campaign.

Should the usual 100 to 125 candidates report, a team is expected that will make a creditable showing against the stalwart array of opposition on the 1925 calendar.

The freshie squad this season will be under the tutorship of Coach R. C. ("Red") Brown, whose experience as a player and a coach adds to the freshman prospects as the season looms near. Coach Brown left Auburn recently for a course in football under the renowned Coach Knute Rockne, premier mentor of Notre Dame.

BEZDEK GETS NEW ASSISTANTS

State College, Pa., August 22.—(Special.)—Penn State's football coaching staff will be augmented this fall by the addition of two assistant coaches. They are Jules Prevost and Fred Flock, both members of the 1924 eleven, who are not eligible this season, although still undergraduates Both boys have asked Coach Hugo Bezdek to make use of them in coaching roles so that they may gain experience to aid them following graduation.

Good Takes Southern Hitting Lead From Gulley

Crackers Hold Team Hitting Honors; Speaker, Hornsby Being Pushed in Majors

The battle for leadership among the batters in the Southern association between Good and Gulley still continues. It is Good's turn this week to head the procession. He does it despite the fact that he lost four points, for the simple reason that the Little Rock slugger lost more, Gulley having fallen back nine points.

Among the incidents of the week was the recession of Camp of Nashville, who since he got into the game, had it his own way at the top. Camp has become an ordinary mortal and is now back of Gulley.

Most of the leading batters did not fare badly in their several encounters with the slab artists. The majority gained. Among those who advanced were Tolson and Strohm, of Nashville; C. Anderson, of Chattanooga, and Jeanes, of Birmingham.

After having tied Cullop, of Atlanta, in home runs a couple of times, Riley, of Mobile, cut the ties this week and became the undisputed leader in four-base clouts, with 27. To attain to this distinction the Mobile first-sacker made three circuit drives, while Cullop got one, making his mark 26.

Gulley did nothing in the home run line, but Tolson pounded out two which put him in a tie with the Little Rock hitter.

Murphy Gains.

There was considerable activity on the base paths. Stewart, of Birmingham, added three pilfered sacks to his total and this seemed to egg Murphy, of Atlanta, on as the latter made it five for a total of 32.

Atlanta went to the front in team hitting by adding one point, while Nashville lost one. The only others to gain were New Orleans and Mobile.

Kelly, of New Orleans, ran up his victories to 15 during the week, which keeps him in first place among the pitchers. McLaughlin, of Atlanta, and Wiltse, of Mobile, figure next.

Cuyler Rises.

Although the Pittsburg Pirates, as a team, did not gain in batting during the week in the National league race, Hazen Cuyler was a shining exception among the Pirates. The speedy outfielder eased himself up to seventh place among the leaders by gaining five points. Carey also gained a little, but as he only figured in two games his mark was not as impressive as that of his teammate.

With Carey out of the lineup temporarily Cuyler had a chance to also catch up in stolen bases, but although he added two he is still three shy of Max's total.

Hornsby, of St. Louis, is in no immediate danger of being displaced at the top of the batting, but he was shaded 12 points, which again brings him considerably under the .400 mark. Bottomley, his teammate, is getting closer to him, even though the first sacker lost four points himself.

Harper, of Philadelphia, came from down the line and pushed himself into third place in the rating. Blades, of St. Louis, is nearest to him and Fournier, of Brooklyn, is only one point back.

Although New York stood still in team hitting, the Giants' leading sluggers did not help to keep them there, as both Terry and Frisch dropped back. Frisch suffered the most.

Hitters Retarded.

Apparently there is something in the report that the ball in the National league has been slowed up. This applies to all except Hornsby, who celebrated the occasion by adding two home runs to his total, which gives him 33. Incidentally, Rogers went over the century mark in runs, he, Wheat and Cuyler being the only three who can count their tallies in three figures.

There was little doing among the other long-distance hitters. Harper tacked on one and so did Meusel and Kelly, of the Giants.

Pittsburg sticks to the lead in team hitting, but the Phillies gained two points, which makes the margin between the two less robust. St. Louis went below the .300 mark.

There is only one point separating Chicago from New York in fielding.

Sherdel, of St. Louis, continues to lead the pitchers, with Yde, of Pittsburg, and Vance, of Brooklyn, close up. Huntzinger, of New York, has the leading percentage, but he has figured in only comparatively few innings.

Tris Is Pushed.

Although the Athletics went back in team hitting during the past week, Simmons, of the Mackmen, cut a wide swath among the leading batters in the American league.

By gaining 9 points the flashy outfielder nudged up to Tris Speaker, of Cleveland, who held on to practically the same precentage as he had last week. The Cleveland veteran is still an easy leader, but there is tight fit below him. Heilmann, of Detroit, is only 4 points removed from Simmons and Ty Cobb is leaning right up against his teammate. Cobb, however, has been out of the game of late and has figured only as a pinch hitter.

There has been a recession all down the line, practically all the leading sluggers having found the pitchers better than formerly, or else there are not so many "feet" on the ball. The runs, as well as the hits, have been scarce, which accounts for the fact that Mostil, of Chicago, and Simmons are the only ones over the 100 mark in tallies. Mostil added one stolen base to his record and six runs to his record of round trips.

Simmons was practically the only one among the leaders to show any activity in long distance clouts. He made himself more prominent among the home run performers by circling the bases once, a feat which gives him 21 four-base clouts. The ailing Williams, of St. Louis, added one, but Meusel, of the Yankees, was unable to get the ball outside.

That some of the leaders might have something to worry about in all around hitting were Barrett, of Chicago, in the game regularly, is apparent, as the White Sox utility man has gone up to the even .400 mark.

There is only one point separating Philadelphia and Washington in team hitting. The Mackmen lost one point and the Senators stood still. Chicago and St. Louis were the only other teams to add to their totals.

Washington displaced New York at the top in fielding. Detroit is third, having gained a point.

It is still Gray and Coveleskie at the top among the pitchers.

BOSTON WHIPS BROWNS.

St. Louis, August 22.—Eight runs for Boston in the first inning were too much for the St. Louis Browns today after a winning streak of four games. The score was 10 to 4. McManus poled a homer in the fourth, scoring behind Lamotte and Jacobson. Winfield pitched the full route, allowing 7 hits, while five Brownie hurlers worked.

PHILADELPHIA WINS, 6-1.

Chicago, August 22.—The Philadelphia Athletics kept pace with Washington today by defeating Chicago, 6 to 1, in the second game of the series. The visitors landed on Thurston in the first inning for five runs and caused his retirement. Edwards, relieving him, pitched a good game, allowing the visitors only three hits. Slim Harriss held Chicago to four hits, which were bunched in two innings.

Manager Collins stepped on a ground ball hit toward second base by Poole in the first inning and wrenched a muscle in his left leg. He was carried off the field, but it was announced after the game that his injury was not serious.

SENATORS SCORE 20 RUNS.

Detroit, August 22.—Washington went wild here today, to beat Detroit 20 to 5. The Senators hammered three pitchers for 19 hits and were given 10 free tickets to first base. Pitchers on both teams were wild, the veteran Walter Johnson of Washington, allowing seven bases on balls.

A decision by Umpire Nallin calling Wingo out at second in the fifth brought a storm of pop bottles onto the diamond. A ground keeper's crew was called to clear off the field while the teams went to the dugouts to catch their breath. Johnson, Goslin and Joe Harris knocked home runs.

Sportively Speaking—

By H. C. HAMILTON

Yanking the Sergeant.
Bert Knows Baseball.
Backing the Team.

ATLANTA fans might be asking about this business of pulling Jim Bagby out of ball games if they were in a mood to criticise. Of course they are not exactly in that mood because they only have to consider the record of the Crackers for the last month to realize that Bert Niehoff knows more baseball than the average fan.

Bagby's friends, however, wanted to know Saturday night why it was that when Bagby, traveling along at a good gait during his last appearance on the home lot, suddenly was derricked. They also asked if it is not true that Bagby had to relieve McLaughlin in the only game lost in the last appearance at New Orleans, and, taking up the burden while in arrears, pitched his head off, but could not win merely by holding the Pelicans scoreless. Saturday he was shot in to relieve Cy Warmoth and, after he had collected the Lookouts to eat out of his hand for all but one inning, had hit safely four times in succession, he was lifted to allow a runner to hit the paths for him, and then the ball game was lost.

WE HAVE a great desire to pat Jim Bagby on the back and call him all right, but that wouldn't do much good. He doesn't need any sympathy, for he is willing to do anything for the good of the Crackers, and Bert Niehoff, being one of those gentlemen who are forced to do their guessing on short notice, undoubtedly was trying to win the ball game. He didn't, and we hate it half to death, but if he had we would have been the first to remark that Bert sure knows his stuff. That is baseball.

ATLANTA is becoming intensely interested in the chances of the Crackers to win the Southern league championship. Things are being done to let the Crackers know about it, and, as I write I have before me a letter from L. J. Daniel, of Daniel Bros. company, in which the Daniel Bros. store offers to present each member of the baseball club with a new hat if the pennant is brought to this city this year. In full his letter says:

"Of course all Atlantans want the Crackers to win the pennant. The whole of Atlanta would welcome a repetition of those stirring scenes of 1913, when the Crackers copped the flag.

"But Atlanta plays on the road until September 9. We can't get a chance to root for our team until they come home. We think they ought to know that the home fans are pulling for them, and in order to encourage them in their game, we make the following offer: If Atlanta wins the pennant in the race of 1925 we will present to every member of the Cracker team a new fall John B. Stetson hat with our compliments.

"Let's revive the old spirit! Let the team know that we are pulling for, and counting on them, and when they come home next month let's back them up 100 per cent.

"We would thank you to advise the team of our offer."

MR. DANIEL, we shall be most glad to advise the team, and express the hope that a hat is so essential to the mental and physical well-being of the Crackers that they will win every remaining game on the schedule.

Robison, Atlanta Jinx Finishing Eighteenth Season

Little Rock, Ark., August 23.—(AP)—After southpawing his way through 18 seasons of major and minor league baseball, "Rube" Robinson, veteran slabman for the Little Rock Travelers, still is a winning pitcher.

The Reuben recently celebrated his 36th birthday by letting the Memphis Chicks down with five hits while his team mates batted out a 5-to-1 victory.

One of, if not the oldest pitcher in point of service in the Southern association, Robinson is the mainstay of the Little Rock hurling staff. He has hurled for the Travelers through nine campaigns and has been a winning pitcher in six of them in spite of the fact that many of these years the Travelers ended up in the second division.

Robinson has an average of .571 for the present season and a lifetime average in the major and minor leagues of .601. His records of 12 wins and 9 defeats for the present year is impressive when placed against the record of the Little Rock club, which has won 55 and lost 63 games this year for an average of .460.

Dangerous Batter.

Like many other pitchers who throw from the wrong side Robinson bats right handed and is considered a dangerous batter—a good man to come up with the bases loaded and runs needed badly.

"Rube" is a native son of Arkansas. He was born in Floyd, White county, on August 16, 1889, and was 36 years old last Sunday. He began his career as a pitcher in 1908 with the Newport club of the old Northwest Arkansas league. In that year he won 9 games and lost three for an average of .750. He has played ball every year from 1908 to 1925 and has won 266 games and lost 176 for a lifetime average of .601.

Robinson's ability as a hurler finally attracted the attention of the baseball magnates and he went to Fort Worth in the Texas league in 1911. With the Panthers he had a most successful season, winning 28 games and losing 7 for an average of .800. The next year he held a berth in the majors.

Pittsburg obtained the big left hander in 1912 and found him to be almost as effective against the big league clubs as he had been in the Texas league. Robinson pitched two years for the Pirates and held an average better than .600 for each of these years. "Rube" spent two years with the St. Louis Cardinals before leaving the big show for the bushes. He could have remained longer but voluntarily withdrew.

Saved Travelers.

"Rube" was introduced to Little Rock fans as a Traveler in 1916 and won the hearts of "dyed in the wool" boosters of that club by winning 11 out of 12 games—incidentally bringing the Travelers from the cellar to the first division. He went to the New York Yankees in 1917 and won a number of games toward the close of the season. His two-hit game against the Boston Red Sox, an aggregation of sluggers, won him fame in Gotham but the Rube wanted to return to the Travelers.

He has been with Little Rock since that time with the exception of a short time in 1923 when he aided Larry Gilbert's Pelicans in winning a flag. In the Dixie series the Reuben won a game from the Fort Worth Panthers, his old club.

Cracker Jinx.

There are many types of jinxes in baseball such as the cast-off pitcher jinx, the one club jinx, et cetera. "Rube" has always been known as a jinx to the Atlanta Crackers. The big southpaw has turned the Crackers back on almost every occasion that he has faced them and this season has been no exception. In the five times he has faced the Crackers this season

RUBE ROBINSON.

"Rube" has won four games and lost the other by a narrow margin. Another point in his favor is that Atlanta has been in and out of first place for the entire season while Little Rock has been a constant contender for the cellar position.

On Little Rock scoreboards giving the games by innings the name of Robinson never appears. The batteries are always "Rube" and Blank. It is hardly necessary to mention the esteem in which the big pitcher is held by the aggregation of small boys who aspire to become hurlers of the future. "Rube" is the idol of the Little Rock sand lot aggregation.

The big southpaw spends his winters in Arkansas, having a home in Searcey. He is married and has a son nine years old. Mrs. Robinson and the boy always come to Little Rock when the school term is over and remain until the fall term begins. The boy in one respect is similar to all other small boys in Little Rock in that he thinks his father is "wonderful."

There is one thing about the veteran pitcher that few baseball fans have ever learned. There is no such person as "Rube" Robinson, his name is John Henry Robertson.

"My name was announced as Robinson when the batterics were announced," the big pitcher explains. "I didn't care to correct it and my name has remained to the baseball world as Robinson."

The pitching record of the "Rube" is as follows:

Year.	Team.	W.	L.	Pct.
1908	Newport, N. E. Arkansas..	9	3	.750

WHITTAKER GIVES TRAVELERS GAME.

Little Rock, Ark., August 22.—After Whittaker had been sent to the relief of Scott in the ninth with the bases full and New Orleans one run ahead, he walked two Little Rock batters forcing in the run that gave Little Rock the final game of the year between the two clubs, 6 to 5. An error paved the way for the routing of Scott in the ninth, while an error behind Caldwell allowed New Orleans to score three runs in the eighth.

Little Rock rallied in its half of the eighth by scoring three runs and tying the count, but New Orleans went ahead again by scoring one run in its half of the ninth, only to lose in the next half inning.

CHANNEL GOAL OF 5 SWIMMERS

Cape Gris Nez, France, August 22.—(AP)—George Pouilley, former French national swimming champion, and Ishak Helmy, giant Egyptian, have been compelled to postpone their attempt to swim the English channel, which was to have begun tonight, on account of high winds and heavy seas.

Miss Gertrude Ederle, of America; Miss Lillian Harrison, of Argentina, and Mlle. Sion, of France, all of whom have failed gallantly in previous attempts to swim the channel, will make another attempt together on August 31, or September 1, weather conditions permitting, it was definitely decided today.

Each will have her own conveying tug and each wants it understood that under no consideration is the swim to be construed as a race between North and South America and France. They say each merely wants to take advantage of the tide conditions which are at their best at the end of August or the beginning of September.

Both Miss Harrison and Mlle. Sion realize and freely express the opinion that Miss Ederle is a much faster swimmer than either of them and that she will leave them far behind in the first few miles.

'MA' STRIBLING HURT IN WRECK

Tucson, Ariz., August 22.—(AP)—Mrs. W. L. "Ma" Stribling, mother of Young Stribling, Georgia boxer, who is engaged in a barnstorming tour of the west, was injured early today when her automobile overturned. She was cut badly about the head and received treatment at a hospital here.

"Red" Fitzsimmons, Stribling's training partner, the only other occupant of the machine, sustained minor cuts and bruises.

Young Stribling continued on his journey to El Paso, where he is to fight Monday night. His father and other members of the party remained with Mrs. Stribling.

Crackers Improve Brand Of Road Games; Hitting Of Team Recorded at .311

Finishing a four-game series in Chattanooga today, the Crackers have an off day tomorrow before tackling the Vols in their own back yard Tuesday for a three days' encounter. The Vols are resting this morning in third place, only four games behind our pennant hopes, and one can see that this will be an important series. After finishing with Nashville, the Crackers journey to Little Rock for games Friday and Saturday, and have next Sunday and Monday off.

The outlook at this juncture is considerably better than it was last Sunday when the Crackers were a game and a half behind those pesky Pelicans. This morning finds the Crackers only two points behind New Orleans, after having held the leadership for one day during the week. The Pels still have several more games to play than the Crackers.

Out of the six games played last week the Niehoffian crew lost two, with McLaughlin, who week before last was credited with three victories in four days, charged with both of the Cracker losses. Considering Atlanta's former performances on the road, last week's play shows a great improvement.

Hitting Race Close.

Wilbur Good, Cracker rightfielder, and Tom Gulley, who plays the same position for the Travelers, are still playing tag with each other for the leadership of the league in batting honors, with neither being able to break away from the other. During Uncle Wilbur's 28 appearances at the plate last week, he secured hits for an average of .321. Three of these were two-baggers and two more were triples.

Nick Cullop bagged a homer during the week, but also got nine hits out of 23 times at bat giving an average of .391 and the lead over the whole Cracker outfit. Good led the team in the number of runs scored, his total being nine. Cullop and Mike Gazella coming next with each scoring six.

As a whole the team has been at bat 219 times, scored 42 runs, and secured 68 hits to give them a team batting average of .311 to continue their splendid stick work which has been a feature of the Crackers' play this season.

Cavet led the pitchers with two games won out of two starts. Warmoth and Dell are the other pitchers credited with victories. Bagby, who hasn't credit for a game won, gave up the least number of hits, including 15 innings and being touched for only nine hits.

The Crackers have kept up their flashy fielding, making five double kills and committing only eight miscues, for of them being made by Gazella. The team has made 166 putouts and 64 assists.

CASE OF BOB SMITH, ATLANTA BOY, TERMED MIRACLE

Oakmont Course Most Difficult in Country

Scene of Bobby Jones' Efforts To Retain Title Is Described in Detail

Pittsburg, August 22.—(AP)—Conceded by leading golfers of the world to be the most difficult course in the United States, the links of the Oakmont Country Club, covering 170 acres of rolling land just northwest of Pittsburg, are in splendid condition for the National Amateur Championship tournament, beginning August 31, and ending September 5. The Oakmont course has been the scene of many national tournaments, and some of the well-known golfers who have made the round of 18 holes, are unanimous in the opinion that the links, with many natural hazards, bunkers, ditches, sand pits and traps, provide a gruelling test.

When the United States Golf Association decided to send the amateur tournament to Oakmont club officials put a large force of men to work on the fairways and the greens. Yardage on some holes was increased 15 to 25 and new traps were constructed on the fairways, especially where the ground was level. The putting greens are in wonderful condition, but like the well trapped and bunkered fairways, these velvety carpets of grass are, for the most part, built on rolling ground and they present a major drawback to the golfer who has trouble with pitch shots or who is unfamiliar with the roll of the land.

Course In Detail.

No. 1 (482 yards, par 5)—Wide fairway, with a decided down hill shot and a good run to the green. Traps flank the fairway, which is bounded on the right by a fence. The green on slightly rolling ground, is protected by traps and pits on both sides, with rough in the rear.

No. 2 (363 yards, par 4)—The fairway leads slightly uphill, bearing to the left eliminating any run. A big trap, about 150 yards from the tee, takes care of a topped drive. Traps and a ditch run along the left side of the fairway, which is not of sufficient width to permit of a hooked shot. The green is well trapped, and is most difficult, with an uphill roll.

No. 3 (428 yards, par 4)—The drive and mashie shots, if kept within the narrow fairway, which is comparatively level, bring the player well to the green, which is trapped on right and left. There is a bunker to carry on the tee shot about 175 yards from the driving post. The green is on a slight elevation, and an overplayed pitch finds the ball in the rough.

No. 4 (541 yards, par 5)—This hole, with a wide fairway, slightly downhill, is of the dog-leg variety. Traps flank the fairway, with two to carry on the second shot if a player shoots straight for the level green, which is guarded by traps on right, left and rear. Sand pits take care of a second shot of the left for those who try to avoid the bunker.

Line of Traps.

No. 5 (385 yards, par 4)—A long line of traps on the right, with pits to the left of the wide, smooth fairway take care of a hooked drive. A natural ditch runs in front of the sloping green, with traps on both sides of the putting ground.

No. 6 (172 yards, par 3)—This hole is of the "make or break" variety, and many a golfer has given up at this point on the Oakmont course. The drive, an iron shot downhill, must clear a valley of extreme rough, landing on the island green in one. The green slopes from the rough ground in the back toward a gully with traps on all sides.

No. 7 (395 yards, par 4)—The wide fairway is level, with a bunker 175 yards off the tee. Bunkers dot the right with traps on the left to catch pulled shots. The green, excepting the front, is guarded by traps.

No. 8 (258 yards, par 3)—The driving tee, on a slight elevation, heads the level fairway. One hundred and eighty-five yards from the tee a trap, starting in the center of the fairway, runs along the left to the green. It is one of the biggest traps on the course, requiring 450 tons of sand. A trap in the center of the fairway guards the green approach and catches pushed tee shots. There is a natural ditch along the right of the fairway. The green is well trapped on both sides.

No. 9 (477 yards, par 5)—The fairway leads uphill about half way to the green, with traps on both right and left for a tee shot off line. Traps must be carried with the second shot. The green, in front of the club house, is most difficult. The putting ground, with traps to the right, gives the golfers a chance to demonstrate his skill on rolling terrain.

Slightly Do n Hill.

No. 10 (461 yards, par 5)—The tee shot is slightly downhill, with a wide fairway and traps on both sides. There is a natural ditch to carry on the second shot. Right and left traps guard the flat green.

No. 11 (395 yards, par 4)—Two uphill shots are required on the 11th. A ditch runs along the fairway for some distaance, and, about half way from the tee, it cuts across to the left, running almost 10 yards toward the green. Pits guard the green approach with traps on the right and to the rear.

No. 12 (601 yards, par 5)—This hole requires two full shots and a pitch on the downhill fairway. A trap 190 yards from the tee catches short drives. Traps likewise guard the right and left with one running into the fairway from the left for short second shots. Traps flank the green.

No. 13 (164 yards, par 3)—This is another island green, requiring one shot from the tee. The green slopes toward a series of traps on the left.

Fairway Slopes.

No. 14 (349 yards, par 4)—The fairway slopes gently from right to left, with traps on both sides. Pits are found in front of the green to catch bad second shots. The green is perfectly level, with traps on the sides.

No. 15 (420 yards, par 4)—The fairway slopes from left to right. A bunker, 170 yards from the tee, must be carried on the drive. Two hundred yards out a trap runs into the fairway to catch pushed tee shots. Traps also dot the right and the left, with one to the right of the green for a pushed second shot.

No. 16 (226 yards, par 3)—The 16th requires a full tee shot, downhill, with rough and boundary fence to the right. The green, on a slight elevation, has a roll to one side, with trees in the rear and a pit to the left. The fairway on this hole is most difficult, the ground taking a decided roll all the way.

No. 17 (300 yards, par 4)—The fairway, uphill, is guarded by a center bunker half way home. The green is trapped on right and left, and is located on the brink of the hill.

No. 18 (442 yards, par 5)—The wide level fairway is broken by bunkers and a pit half way in. A large bunker cuts into the course from left to right, with decidedly rough ground on the right. The home green, located on rolling land, is guarded by traps in front and on both sides.

Par for the 6,860 yard course is 74.

BLACK CRACKERS MEET ANNISTON

The Atlanta Black Crackers will play a three-game series against the strong Anniston, Ala., team here Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The Anniston club is one of the strongest colored teams in the south, having been defeated only three times this season.

All games will be played on the Morris Brown campus and will be called at 3:30 o'clock.

CARLISLE WINS GRIFFIN MEET

Griffin, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Ernest Carlisle, Jr., recently won the third handicap golf tournament for members of the Griffin Country club, which has been playing over the local course for eight weeks, with each player participating in a match a week until elimination. Carlisle defeated Will Lewis Flemister, four up and two to go. All the players defeated in the first two rounds played a consolation flight, which was won by Robert Walker when he defeated Miss Jessie Pearl Rice, two up and one to go. Unusual interest was manifested in the tournament.

BEST BALL GOLF TOURNEY HELD

C. J. Holditch and R. T. Barnett came out with the best ball in the tournament at Druid Hills. They were shooting against par and won three upon the round. Holditch and Barnett won over about 20 other players.

REDS HALVE TWIN BILL.

Boston, August 22.—Benton held the Cincinnati Reds to five hits in the first game of today's doubleheader, the Braves winning, 4 to 2, but J. May for Cincinnati, held the Braves to a like number of hits in the second game, returning the Reds to an 8-to-2 victory.

WOMEN MUST VOICE OWN APPROVAL OF CAR

Some unusual circumstances among car buyers are reported by Willys-Overland dealers throughout the country that reveal new buying tendencies and new factors having entered into the purchase of a motor car.

Never before in the history of the automobile industry have women played the part in the purchase of the family car that is noticeable at the present time, according to dealer reports. There once was a time when the head of the family decided he needed a car, investigated all available makes within his financial limit and then purchased the machine without so much as quizzing the other members of the family as to whether they were in favor of the purchase or not.

Not so in these days, dealers declare, for the wife is responsible for the actual purchase of the family car in more than 70 per cent of sales made to family men. "It is a distinct departure from the old type of buying, but nevertheless true," reports a Willys-Overland dealer, "that when a family prospect enters our store he either brings friend wife along with him, or else makes an appointment with the salesman for a demonstration where his spouse can be present."

Several things have been responsible for this change in the purchase of a car. In the first place friend wife has, through the social and political regeneration of the past few years, placed herself on an even plane with her husband in the matter of occupation and activities. Friend husband is no longer the only individual in the family who plays golf, who drives his own car, and who enjoys the outdoors, but the lady of the house now seeks the same recreational advantages as does the male head of the house. Necessarily, the motor car plays an essential part in the modern woman's activities. She must have her car to attend her friend's bridge party, she must drive out to the country club for her bi-weekly foursome, and she must have her own car for her shopping tours. In short, milady's private car must be constantly at her disposal, and where one machine only is available, milady must needs play an important part in its selection.

Willys-Overland has been quick to realize this trend of woman's diction in the matter of selecting the family means of transportation, and new models have been designed particularly to give milady just the right type of motor car. The modern woman's judgment in style, lines, coloring and general ensemble beauty has done much to determine the model lines and equipment of Overland and Willys-Knight's cars, and the beauty, comfort and ease of handling of Willys-Overland's products have done much to influence a vast number of women in their possibilities as milady's own personal car. Besides playing an all important part in the selection of the family car, Willys-Overland dealers indicate that more and more women are today buying their own personal car that is used exclusive of the motor which friend husband employs on his trip to the office.

Franklin Business in July Ahead of Same Month Last Year

Franklin shipments in July, 1925, were 25 per cent ahead of the same month one year ago. The Franklin company now has sufficient orders in hand to make September shipments exceed by 25 per cent the average September output over a five-year period.

GARAGE ASSOCIATION MEMBERS GET EMBLEM

The Atlanta Garage association, composed of fifty leading representative garages and repair stations in Atlanta, expects to receive this week the new official emblems designed and approved by the association several weeks ago. The design consists of an automobile wheel, with the name of the Atlanta Garage association in the outer circle, the rims and lettering being upon a white and gold background. Two of these emblems posted in every member's place of business will identify before the public those who are members of the association, and will serve to emphasize in a practical way the cooperative advertising campaign in the Atlanta newspapers, which the association has recently outlined to begin the early part of October or November. This cooperative advertising campaign will consist of a series of editorials, run by the association, to acquaint the public with superior character of the service rendered by the association and its members. While the association is nearly a year old, it had delayed beginning this campaign until the educational campaign carried on by the association within its ranks to bring about increased business efficiency, could be brought to a successful conclusion. The association, at this time, feels that it can indorse and guarantee the quality of work turned out by those who participate in the cooperative advertising campaign and display the emblem of the association.

Heads Local Moon Branch

CARL E. SNIFF.

Mr. Sniff, who has been named to head the local branch for the Moon Motor Car company, has been connected with this organization for several years, in both the engineering and sales departments. He is well equipped for his new appointment and has the necessary experience gained from actual operation as a dealer and wide travel as a factory representative.

NEW COMFORT FOR CADILLAC RIDERS

How Cadillac succeeded in its new car, recently announced in producing what the company declares is the finest car it ever built, and at a price lower than that of any of its predecessors, is a subject which is creating considerable discussion in motor car plants in Detroit—the home of the automobile industry.

Cadillac executives themselves say the achievement is a combination of still higher manufacturing skill, engineering resourcefulness and design, and the installation and use of some $2,500,000 in new and improved machinery, tools, jigs and dies.

Cadillac has long been recognized in the industry as possessing a combination of experienced engineering and manufacturing executives, model plant facilities and thousands of craftsmen thoroughly acquainted, through years of experience, with eight-cylinder construction and construction principles, down to their smallest detail. Lynn McNaughton, vice president and general sales manager, points out that to this strong combination has been coupled the company's unsurpassed purchasing power.

"Developments that make the car even better are found throughout body and chassis," says Mr. McNaughton. "These include considerably greater simplicity in construction, which has lowered costs and assisted in raising the car's performance ability. They also include changes which practically eliminate crankcase dilution and condensation—meeting what has consistently been a problem with all internal combustion engines. Building the car lower to the ground and the use of new type springs have insured greater riding comfort.

"From the owner's point of view, we also believe the car will appeal as a beautiful, individual and aristrocratic appearing car. It is endowed with the finest, simplest, most efficient and most accessible chassis Cadillac ever produced. Improved in every particular, it retains the acknowledged Cadillac characteristic of highest excellence in design, mechanical construction and fine workmanship."

EXUM LEAPS AGAIN FROM BALLOON TODAY

Admirers of parachute leaps from a balloon will have an opportunity to witness some action this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Lakewood park when Jesse Exum will leap from his big balloon in an old-fashioned ascension and parahute drop, according to B. M. Striplin, secretary of the Southeastern fair, which is sponsoring the feat.

There will be no admission fee charged and plenty of auto parking space is promised.

Last Sunday afternoon Exum left the ground under his balloon from the midway and cut loose at a height of more than 3,000 feet. The landing was in an open field more than a half mile from the park, but Exum's daredevile stunts inside the park when the balloon ascended were the cause of much comment.

CANDIDATES INVITED TO POLITICAL RALLY

All candidates in the September primary have been invited to speak at a meeting Friday night at Bessie Branham park, Kirkwood, according to announcement by Councilman W. E. Saunders, who is in charge of arrangements.

HUNDRED THOUSAND ESSEXES PRODUCED

Essex has passed the 100,000 mark for 1925—the first six-cylinder car to attain the six-figure milestone in production. This official word came this week from the Hudson Motor Car company which manufacturers the Essex, with the additional information that this is 15 per cent more Essex cars than were built in the entire year 1924.

With production on a volume basis it seems likely that the entire year of 1925 will see twice as many Essex cars built as in 1924—this despite the fact that 1924 established itself as a remarkably successful Essex year.

"This unusual measure of success," said C. H. Becker, vice president of the J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.-Grant company, Hudson-Essex distributor, "is all the more remarkable because no new model was introduced, and because more than 95 per cent of Essex business has been centered in the coach model—a type of car which Essex created and named. Essex business has been consistently good, with neither spurts nor let-downs. It has sold not on particular features but simply on the fundamental basic value offered for the money.

"It is evident that the underlying Essex idea and appeal have met with a striking public approval. Value for the money is the policy which has won this, and is continuing to win it on an ever-increasing scale. Essex value gets right down to the most fundamental facts in motoring—reliability, comfort, economy and satisfaction at an unmatched price.

"The rapidly growing list of Essex owners in America will be gratified to know that their choice of motor car is receiving unusual degree of indorsement in all foreign as well as domestic fields. In Great Britain, the continent and in all colonial fields Essex sales have kept pace with those in the United States. In our neighboring Dominion of Canada, the Essex success has been almost twice as great as in the United States.

"A prime factor in Essex success has been the knowledge on the part of the public that it is manufactured by Hudson—a permanent, well-known and entirely independent concern, controlled and owned by men who make the management of its affairs their personal business."

OLD-TIME FIDDLE AND BANJO MUSIC ENLIVENS CAPITOL

Real old-time fiddle and banjo music echoed through the corridors of the state capitol Saturday night as "Uncle Dave" Strother, messenger of the senate, and his son, Joe Strother, whanged out a tune or two upon their instruments.

"Uncle Dave's" violin has been his constant companion all during the session, and frequently after adjournment at night he has drawn a small crowd of spectators into some corner of the capitol by the lure of "Arkansas Traveler" or "Old Black Joe."

PIERCE-ARROW SALES SHOW GREAT GAINS

Passenger car shipments from the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company's factory at Buffalo during June and July, 1925, in comparison with those made during the same months last year, represent the greatest increase in passenger car business in the history of the company, according to President Myron E. Forbes.

The increase in passenger car business for June, 1925, represented a gain of 622 per cent over June, 1924, while Pierce-Arrow business for July, 1925, showed a rise of 420 per cent over the same month of last year.

"One reason for the phenomenal increase in passenger car business is the new series 80 custom-built coach announced recently. Orders for the coach are taxing the capacity of our factory and it has proven one of the most popular models ever marketed by this company," said Mr. Forbes.

"Orders for trucks and busses produced by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company continue strong. Our truck business is especially healthy and everything points to a splendid business throughout the remainder of the year. As an indication of the steady flow of Pierce-Arrow bus business, our bus orders to date exceed those for the entire period of 1924."

EGYPTIAN LACQUER CO. OPEN WAREHOUSE HERE

Announcement was made recently by the Egyptian Laquer company of the opening of a warehouse in Atlanta, located at 57 East Third street, to serve and distribute this popular automobile finish in the southeastern territory, and according to W. E. Hutchison, manager for the local branch, they are prepared to give their customers in this territory the quickest possible service on these finishes.

"Egyptian lacquer has made phenominal gains in popularity since its introduction to the public slightly over a year ago and if the present stride is maintained for another few months will be out in front among the different Laquer companies.

"What is laquer?" said Mr. Hutchison. "For those who are familiar with the uses of this finish this question will need no answer. For the uninitiated, however, a brief explanation will not be amiss. Thousands of years ago, laquer was used by the Egyptians, Chinese, Japanese and Hindus as a protective and decorative finish, and much of the work done by those ancients is still intact and may be seen on a trip to the larger museums."

"Laquers made by the orientals were composed chiefly of vegetable gums. Today we have more modern and better laquer, made from nitro cotton desolved in solvents to which are added certain high grade gums that have undergone scientific treatment to best adapt them for this product. By a process of entailing the addition of pigments, a lacquer is produced. This process, with high quality raw materials, gives not only a quick drying solution but one which dries evenly and smoothly, leaving a durable yet flexible, waterproof, celluloid-like film that will protect all surfaces to which it is applied and the fact that the automobile manufacturers almost 100 per cent are today using lacquer on their cars proves its stability."

HUPMOBILE EIGHT

PRINCE OF WALES GETS HUP STRAIGHT EIGHT

The Prince of Wales, who has been termed the world's foremost salesman, sold himself on the advantages of the Hupmobile eight during his stay in Potchef Stroon, South Africa. The royal visitor and visiting press correspondents gathered about the car and his royal highness plied the chauffeur with questions regarding its motor and other phases of its construction. In so doing, the prince displayed an intimate knowledge of automobile engineering and of the latest and best engineering practices.

Having asked that the hood be lifted the prince had the local Hupp dealer explain the engine to him thoroughly. He especially commented upon what he called the amazing quietness of the motor and the ease and surprising power it displayed in action.

The royal examination of the Hupmobile eight took place after a parade in which his royal highness had ridden in the Hupmobile eight through the streets of Potchef Stroon.

This parade was very largely a Hupmobile procession, for following the Hupmobile eight sedan came six new Hupmobile fours. The Hupmobile eight made a fitting leader for this procession. It carried the royal standard and bore the Prince of Wales' plumes in real ostrich feathers on the front, with dainty streamers flowing from windshield to radiator.

PRICES ARE REDUCED BY DODGE BROTHERS, INC.

Announcement of a reduction in the prices of Dodge Brothers motor vehicles, both passenger and commercial, effective Monday, August 17, has been received by F. E. Maffett, Inc., local dealer.

New list prices, f. o. b. Detroit, are as follows:

Standard Types.

Touring	$ 875
A-Sedan	1,195
B-Sedan	1,045
Coupe	960
Coach	1,035
Screen Commercial	885
Panel Commercial	960

Special Types.

Touring	$ 975
A-Sedan	1,280
B-Sedan	1,145
Coupe	1,060

The price of the roadster, $855, and that of the chassis, $730, remain unchanged.

"These new prices came at a time when Dodge Brothers product has reached the highest peak of mechanical perfection in its history," declares Mr. Maffett. "In an attempt to supply public demand, factory production has been stepped up since the first of this year from 990 cars a day to the present rate of over 1,100 and now Dodge Brothers are pushing as rapidly as possible an eight million dollar expansion program to give them buildings and machinery for a production of 1,500 cars a day.

"This price cut is just the application of Dodge Brothers policy of faithfully returning to the buyer the saving made possible by increased production. Since the first of this year production has been steadily increased month after month. The first six months of 1925 were the largest in the factory's history—more than 11 per cent greater than the first six months of 1924. The problem for Dodge Brothers executives has been, not to find a market for their product, but to increase production to supply a ready market.

"The constantly increasing, yet never satisfied, demand for Dodge Brothers motor cars is convincing evidence that a motor-wise public is more and more appreciative of the greater value made possible by Dodge Brothers sound policy of constantly improving a basic design instead of bringing out a new model every year."

SUCCESS RESULT OF ADVERTISING, STATES WRIGLEY

Wrigley, the chewing gum man, has explained how he built up a business of millions of packages a day.

He has done it by sticking to his one line and advertising it. He spends over a million dollars a year in buying newspaper space to tell the world about 5 cent chewing gum. He has educated people to chew gum and to chew Wrigley's. He did not stop shouting as soon as he attracted attention.

He says you must keep it up or the buyers will forget you. Whether yours is a 5 cent or a $50,000 business, keep telling about it.

REO FINDS CYLINDERS BETTER WHEN GROUND

Throughout its history, the Reo Motor Car company has been respected in the automobile industry for its manufacturing and production methods. In all departments its practices are of the highest order, those of the machine shop especially having come in for a large amount of discussion and praise.

One of its outstanding practices has been to finish all cylinders by grinding rather than by reaming. Grinding, in the estimation of Reo engineers and executives, gives the best surface obtainable to the walls of the cylinders.

Misalignment of cyliuders is unheard of in a finished Reo block, for the grinding wheel reveals the fact that the casting is faulty as soon as the operation is begun, and the block is immediately rejected. A reamer, on the other hand, will adjust itself to the cylinder, failing to act as a check on the position in the block.

A reamer is also inclined to "ride" hard spots in a casting, forming corresponding depressions in the wall opposite the hard spots. Since gray iron castings are not uniform in hardness this is a serious fault in a finish operation.

The grinding wheel, however, cuts evenly around the walls of the cylinder, leaving a surface unfirmly smooth and cylindrical.

Then, too, the reamer leaves a burr on the surface plainly seen under a microscope. This burr aids in giving a close piston fit when the engine is new; but after a few thousands of miles the burrs are worn down, leaving too much clearance between pistons and cylinder walls. Oil pumping, vibration and piston slaps result.

It is probable that, in the final analysis, grinding will be found a slightly more expensive process than reaming; but when the life of a motor car is figured upward from 50,000 miles, it would seem that any small added cost which will lead to satisfactory performance during the last of this mileage, is warranted.

Funds of Club Doubled For Community Chest

The Community Chest's avenue of service is attracting the attention of other lines of good work.

The women of East Fourth street some time ago organized a civic club that proved helpful in expanding and beautifying their street. When vacation time came other calls were answered and the club did not reassemble.

The money in the treasury was turned over to a faithful member, who put it in a savings bank where money multiplies while we sleep. After a time the savings were counted by Mrs. G. S. Brown, whose kind heart was moved to double the amount and present it to the community chest, whose federated activities would reach out to all classes and do good in ways unthought of by the donors.

This fine example is worthy of emulation. The most lasting good is often the good we do unconsciously.

Chile Missionary Writes of Interest In Vacation School

Last week an article appeared on this page telling of the origin of the daily vacation Bible school idea which was begun in New York city in 1898 under the direction of Dr. Howard Lee Jones and Mrs. Walter Aylett Hawes of the Epiphany Baptist church. It is a long cry from our metropolis to a missionary station in Concepcion, Chile, where the Rev. and Mrs. Cecil Moore are in charge, as missionaries of the foreign mission board of the southern Baptist convention, but it is here that Mrs. Moore has, during the vacation periods, conducted a notable vacation Bible school. Mrs. Moore writes to the mission board:

"The school is something new in Chile, but we are glad to report that it was a big success, and we are happy over the results. We enrolled 103 children, having an average attendance of 70.

The school was divided into two departments, the primaries and juniors, but all followed a course of Bible studies covering the life of Jesus. For hand work the small children made scrap books illustrating the Bible lessons, and did card sewing. The larger girls sewed, making underclothing for themselves and the boys made doll beds and other wooden toys. One of the little girls told a story of the life of Jesus in her own words at the commencement exercises and told it so well that she held the interest of the large audience up to the close. The school has proved an enterg wedge to scores of homes and many parents are attending our services for the first time."

It can be truly said of the vacation Bible school movement that it vitally concerns missionary education at home and abroad. No such opportunity has ever been offered for the teaching of missions. Unless all signs fail, there will be within the next few years a vacation Bible school in every Christian community of our land.

Briefly Told

The organized missions in Latin American and African fields, under control of the woman's department of the board of missions, M. E. church, south, now have 14 boarding schools, 3 days schools, 3 social centers with a total of 5,435 persons enrolled. They are carried on by 66 missionaries, 7 missionary teachers, 24 American contract teachers, 27 Bible women and 118 native teachers.

Former Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, in addressing a Bible class, made this statement: "A truly Christian character is revealed in a balanced life. It is faith without credulity, conviction without bigotry, charity without condescension, courage without pugnacity, self-respect without vanity, humility without obsequiousness, love of humanity without sentimentality and meekness with power. That is our ideal."

Miss Leverett, missionary to Chang Chow, China, will begin her year's furlough by visiting her relatives in Monroe, Ga., this month. Miss Leverett is a native Georgian, but has been in foreign service under the woman's department of the board of missions of the M. E. church, south, since 1896.

Mrs. Wallace Rogers, Methodist editor of the Federated Church Page, is at Lake Junaluska, N. C., in attendance on the Epworth league conference. While there Mrs. Rogers is also assisting in the publication of a daily Epworth league paper in addition to her other duties connected with the conference.

Mrs. M. E. Tilly, Miss Florrie Harwell and Mrs. Buford Boykin are three of the officers of the North Georgia Women's Missionary society who have attended special conferences at Junaluska this summer. Mrs. Tilly and Miss Harwell were at the school of missions and Mrs. Boykin, who is conference superintendent of social service in north Georgia, attended the conference in social service.

Dr. G. Stanley Jones, missionary from the M. E. church to India, has returned to his work after a furlough spent in the United States. Dr. Jones is such a powerful speaker and in such constant demand that his furlough, intended for rest, was a series of appearances on public programs.

In a speech from the platform of the new auditorium in Washington, D. C., a little while ago, Dr Jones gave the following instance showing the progress the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ has made in India. He said: "Nine years ago Dr. John R. Mott was speaking in Victoria hall in Madras. In the midst of his address he used the name of Christ. The audience hissed him. Nine years later, we were in that same hall for six nights with one topic: Jesus Christ and Him crucified. The crowd increased until on the last night people were standing in windows, doors and everywhere. That last night I did something I had neevr dared to do before. I asked men to give themselves to Jesus Christ, publicly. If one had come I should have been grateful. If five had come, I should have been overwhelmed, but between 100 and 150 came from among the leading men and took their stands frankly and openly as followers of Jesus Christ in the very hall where, nine years before, the name of Christ had been hissed."

Instances like this remind us of the statement Christ made and give us new faith in believe the statement: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

—Mrs. WALLACE ROGERS.

Miss Laura Lee Patrick, corresponding secretary-treasurer of Georgia Baptist W. M. U., has returned to her office in the Palmer building after having spent her vacation at the Bible conference, Northfield, Mass.

Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader and college correspondent of state W. M. U., and Mrs. Ben Thompson were prominent speakers on the program August 19 at the annual W. M. U. meeting of the Stone Mountain Baptist association. Mrs. E. W. Walton is the efficient superintendent.

Miss Sarah Funderburke, missionary of the foreign board of the Southern Baptist convention, who has served seven years in the Hong Moone, China, mission is at home on her first furlough. Miss Funderburke will be the guest of Mrs. E. G. Walton, of Stone Mountain, during the coming week and will be glad to be of service to a nearby group of missionary-minded women.

It is not too early to announce that Mrs. James D. Rhodes, mission study chairman for the W. M. U. Atlanta association, is planning a mission study institute to be held in Atlanta during several mornings about the middle of September. The home mission textbook "Of One Blood" will be taught.

Some member of the W. M. S. of the Druid Hills Baptist church should write an interesting story of a meeting which took place on the attractive garden lawn of Mrs. E. L. Harling Monday, August 17, when 65 mission study certificates with hundreds of seals were delivered to members of the woman's auxiliary "Verbum sap."

Circle No. 14, of Second Baptist W. M. U. held an open-air mission study class last Thursday at Grant park. This is an annual occurrence and Miss Cora Anne Brown is the popular teacher.

Delegate To League Meeting Reports New Service Rules

It is always a pleasure to attend a meeting of the Young People's Service league and to find them steadily advancing in their conceptions and plans for Christian service.

Of especial interest were the reports brought to the All Saints Young People's league Sunday night, August 15, from the conference of Young People's Service leagues recently held at Sewanee. The following report was given by Miss Willie Linthicum, 314 East Fifth street, who had gone as the delegate from All Saints Church Young People's Service league.

"At the summer training school for workers in Sewanee, Tenn., we learned many new ideas to improve and better our leagues.

"First and foremost the rules of the Service league were changed. The five old rules were: Prayer, worship, service, fellowship, gifts. The new rules adopted are: Worship, fellowship, service and study. It is seen that these new rules leave out prayer and gifts, both of which are to come under the rule of worship. In the rules just adopted there is one absolutely new rule, namely that of study which during the ensuing year is to be the keynote of the Young People's Service league of the Episcopal church.

"At the conference it was suggested that every league adopt a life recruiting flag. This is to be similar to the flags used during war times. Instead of receiving a white star in the flag for enlisting to 90 "over there," one receives a star for enlisting in the army of God, that is devoting one's entire life to the church such as becoming a minister or missionary. This is a splendid idea and should immediately be adopted by all leagues.

"Efficient committees are necessary to a successful league. Briefly I will discuss the committees that every league should have and tell their aim and duty. The committee on prayer should see that the grace is said every Sunday night before the leaguers sit down to enjoy their supper and social hour, and it should also encourage family prayer.

"The publicity committee should keep the church informed of the good work the Young People's league is doing. The aim of the membership committee should be to get all persons between the age of 15 and 25, who are connected with the church as active league members. The social committee should work up the spirit of fellowship and should send cards to members of the league who are off at school in order to keep up with them, so that when they return home they will not feel like strangers, lose interest and say they have outgrown the league. These cards should be sent five or six times a year, for instance at Christmas, Easter, Valentine, Thanksgiving, Hallowe'en, etc. Cards should be sent to missionaries who toil in far off places. Every league should have besides these specific committees a censor, who looks after the behavior during the devotional meeting and a critic, who tells haw each meeting might be improved.

"For a league to be a success its leaders must have organizing ability. They must know how to make others help. So often the leaders say: 'Oh, well, you can't depend on so and so, I'll just do it myself.' This will destroy the entire spirit of the league. The leaders must be credulous, put every one to work and make each leaguer feel duty bound to take part in everything.

"Every league should have a motto and live up to it. Below are a few splendid mottoes:

"We are going to take the "die" out of diocese.

"The resources of God are promised only to those who undertake the work of God.

"Success comes in cans, failure comes in can'ts.

"You can come in a stranger but you can't go out one.

"Christ served. Do we?"

"We expect Christ. What does He expect

"Lifters—not leaners.

"In closing I would like to enumerate the things the church expects of the young people. These things are: Cooperation, loyalty, service, leadership, ideals. I hope that every one of our leagues will furnish the church with all she expects and not disappoint her in the least."

MEMORIAL COIN GIFT FOR CHILDREN.

The Episcopal Church Appleton Home for Orphans in Macon received a delightful surprise last week in a gift from Mrs. Robert C. Alston of a Stone Mountain memorial coin for each child. This was peculiarly appropriate, as the home was given by Mr. Appleton, of New York, to Bishop Beckwith soon after the war between the states for the children of Confederate soldiers. Mrs. Alston is one of the most earnest workers for the home and is chairman for the woman's auxiliary of All Saints' Episcopal church.

ATLANTA DELEGATE REPORTED PICKED ASSEMBLY QUEEN

Miss Margaret Matthews, of 828 East North avenue, has been named queen of the Southern Epworth League assembly now in session at Lake Junaluska, according to reports received in Atlanta Saturday by her friends.

The report states that the official announcement will be made tonight and at this time she will be crowned by Dr. Parker, general secretary of the league work for the M. E. Church, South.

Miss Matthews was representing the Druid Hills Methodist church at the assembly at which delegates from 12 southern states were present, representing the leagues of the various Methodist churches.

PEACOCK HAS DULL TIME ON COMMITTEE

The house committee on uniform state laws, of which Representative Peacock, of Laurens, was chairman, was probably the only committee of either house which had not a single bill brought before it during the session. A notice—whether bona fide or not—was read near the close of the session announcing a meeting of the committee on the possibility that the committee "might have a bill to consider."

Mrs. Smith To Assist at Concert Featuring Prominent Artist

Photograph by Stephenson Studio.

Mrs. William Randolph Smith, prominent and charming Atlantan, who is a member of the committee on arrangements for the brilliant concert to be given by Hugh Hodgson, notable artist and composer, in September at "Wingfield," the home of former Governor John M. Slaton and Mrs. Slaton on Peachtree road.

The moonlight recital of Chopin music to be given by Hugh Hodgson at Wingfield, the home of former Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton, on Peachtree road, where nature has provided one of the most picturesque settings, upon a green terrace, surrounded by giant trees and exquisite flowers, will not be only the outstanding musical event of the season, but one of the most artistic arrangement of entertainments ever given in Atlanta.

There, where nature has proved its generosity in creating beauty of scenery, one of the greatest artists of all history will be interpreted in his fanciful music. The great Polonaises will be heard, into which went the patriotism, wrath and heroism of the young artist Chopin, when he was left to join the revolutionists in Poland, the land of his birth. The audience will be given the privilege of hearing the great C minor etude, which is sometimes called the "Revolutionary," and is said to have caused much pain to the composer in its composition.

Finished Artist.

Hugh Hodgson, one of Atlanta's most finished musical artists, who will render the program of Chopin's music on this delightful occasion has selected the composer's most famous works, and no one is more talented and more capable of interpreting the works of the noted artist, than he. Chopin's famous Nocturnes, Mazurkas and waltzes will also be heard at this time.

The success of the recital is assured by the remarkable response of the music loving people of this city, who have already promised their patronage. The musicale will be given Tuesday evening, September 1, at 8:30 o'clock, a date which has been selected, when a beautiful full moon will shed its light upon the scene of music and loveliness.

Mrs. T. Guy Woolford is general chairman of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Hamilton Douglas with the following as members of the advisory committee: Mrs. William Randolph Smith, C. B. Bidwell, Colonel William Lawson Peel, Mrs. John M. Cooper, Harvey Phillips, Mrs. James R. Little, Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson.

Club Sponsors Entertainment.

The Atlanta Woman's club will sponsor the entertainment and judging from the enthusiasm manifested in this organization and by all music lovers of Atlanta, together with the selection of the musical artist, the program and place, this will prove one of the most artistic triumphs of the season.

Chopin was the child of strong, common sense parents, who when his love for music revealed itself at an early age they engaged the very best instructors, and it is said that at the age of 12 years, Chopin knew so much that he was left to himself with the good results that are shown. He was born in Poland, but received his musical education in France. Earnest Newnan in his writings, likens young Chopin to Wagner in temperament and says that Chopin's exaltation of spirits, alternating with irritability and intense depression, were duplicated in Wagner. "There have been few men," says Newnan, "in whom the torch of life has burned so fiercely." He played frequently in public during 1832-1833 with Hiller, Liszt, Herz and this parterre of pianists often indulged in friendly contests and Chopin is said to have always come off winner when Polish music was essayed. A writer has said, "Chopin wrote many perfect lines. He is above all, the faultless lyrist, the Swinburne, the master of fiery rhythms, the chanter of songs before sunrise, of the burden of the flesh, the sting of desire and large-moulded lays of passionate freedom."

The list of patrons and patronesses includes prominent Atlantans who are interested in the moonlight recital to be staged by Mr. Hodgson in the natural stadium at Wingfield.

Urge State Women To Take Interest In Federation Page

Whenever words of encouragement come to the editor of the Federated Church Woman's page, those connected with this comparatively new enterprise are heartened to press forward in their work. The Rev. W. H. Faust, pastor of the Gordon Street Baptist church, has taken the initiative among the pastors of Georgia churches in commending the page. The page belongs to the church women of Georgia and it would rejoice our hearts to hear of church activities the state over. Atlanta and the vicinity occupy the most of the page to date, but we are building for indications of interest from Savannah, Augusta, Macon, Columbus, Rome, Cartersville, Griffin, Valdosta, Thomasville, West Point, LaGrange, Athens, Madison, Monroe, Fort Valley, Americus and hundreds of other cities, towns and villages of our beloved and well-favored state. Clubwomen and women of civic and patriotic organizations are using our splendid daily papers to make widely known their worthy projects and accomplishments. Why may not church women be "as wise in their generation" and make the best possible use of printers' ink to spread abroad the gospel message and its divine missionary program.

Miss Louise Ballard Leaves for Service In Chinese School

MISS LOUISE BALLARD.

Miss Louise Ballard sailed from Vancouver August 20 on the Empress of Russia for Shanghai, China, where she will teach English literature in Matyiere School for Girls, an institution owned by the women of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and do research work for Northwestern university.

Miss Ballard is the younger daughter of Dr. and Mrs. L. J. Ballard. She was born in Columbus, Ga., and has lived in Montezuma, Dublin, Albany and Brunswick, where her father was pastor, but has been an Atlantan since thte fall of 1920, when her father was appointed business manager of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, official organ of Georgia Methodism.

Having been graduated from Andrew college, Cuthbert, in 1922; she entered Wesleyan college and received her B. A. in June, 1924, later taking her B. A. at Emory university. She has done work at Northwestern university looking toward a Ph. D. in history and religion. With this educational backing and her bright mind and attractive personality, she will undoubtedly do valuable work in her new field.

Interested in missions and church work from early childhood, she has served effectively wherever her father has gone to serve a church.

Miss Ballard is a member of the Druid Hills Methodist church, Atlanta, and goes as its personal representative, her support having been assumed by members of that church and missionary society.

Industrial School Laundry Building Erection Is Started

Through kindness and liberality of the many friends of the Mary P. Willingham Industrial School for Girls at Blue Ridge, Ga., it is a great pleasure to the board of trustees to announce that work on the new laundry has actually begun. Guests last week at the Blue Ridge assembly were interested in seeing not only the pile of bricks on hand at the back of the main building near the spot staked off, but were present also at the exercises when the first shovel of dirt was raised in the wne foundation.

W. W. Gaines, one of the trustees and their legal adviser writes interestingly in the Christian Index of August 13 of the occasion:

"On Wednesday morning, August 5, dirt was broken for the erection of the new laundry building of the M. P. W. school. The building will be of brick and will be a great improvement on anything the school has ever had in the way of a laundry building. It is a thing very badly needed. Dr. F. C. McConnell made the address of the occasion and Dr. G. W. Garner made the prayer. Mrs. W. J. Neel cast the first shovel full of dirt, followed in turn by each of the other trustees present, as well as by President and Mrs. A. B. Greene.

"The visitors who stayed at the Mary P. Willingham school during the assembly were greatly impressed by the need of new furniture and furnishings for rooms in the buildings, particularly those used as sleeping and study rooms for the students. A movement was started by those present to meet these furniture and furnishings needs. All the rooms also need painting and tinting. It will cost $50 per room in order that students may have comfortable accommodations and attractive surroundings."

"About 25 of the 50 rooms have been provided for by friends who were present, but we feel sure that other friends of the institution, either individually or as a S. S. or society would like to get in on this attractive proposition. If so, write as soon as possible to Mrs. Paul Jones Canton or Mrs. Ben Thompson, Madison, Ga.

"An unusually important trustee meeting was held at the M. P. W. school on August 4, at which time a complete, well-chosen faculty for the ensuing year was announced by President Greene. Registrations and letters asking for information indicate a large attendance of the opening of the school September 2. The work of President and Mrs. Green was highly commended by the trustees. Trustees present were Mrs. W. J. Neel, Rev. G. W. Garner, Miss Julia Allen, W. W. Gaines, James Merritt, Mrs. Roy Cole, Mrs. Paul Jones, Dr. J. M. Daves, Dr. I. A. White, Mrs. T. H. Crawford, John B. Payne, Mrs. George Brooke, Mrs. Ben Thompson, Rev. G. G. Ward, Mrs. E. H. Blount and Mrs. J. W. Wills.—J. P. W."

Episcopal Church Periodical Club Asks for Support

News has come from New York that the Church Periodical club, a unique cooperating agency of the Episcopal church, has prepared an appeal to the general convention of the church at New Orleans for books, magazines, pamphlets, even newspapers, old and new, and on every subject, to carry on the work which it voluntarily assumed 37 years ago.

This organization's task is to keep the mission workers of the church, especially in out-of-the-way places of the world, supplied with reading matter. A globe-trotting lady, entering the hut of a missionary in one of these waste places some years ago, found him perched on a ladder, his head bent back, scanning the columns of an old newspaper which had been pasted over an old stove pipe hole. It was the only thing he had to read. That was the inspiration of the Church Periodical club.

In the intervening years its work has extended to every part of the world. It supplies not only Bibles, prayer books and hymnals, but scientific works, fiction, magazines, newspapers, picture cards and calendars, games, sheet music and phonograph records all free. It maintains a score of "traveling libraries" and is practically the sole support of half a dozen well equipped permanent libraries in various parts of the world.

Children fo the missionaries are not neglected, for to them are sent the latest children's works and games.

During the past year 31,761 current periodicals from 13,900 friends of the club were sent to the workers all over the world; 2,188 Bibles were distributed, 8,886 prayer books, 63,399 books of theological or secular character were supplied to institutions or individuals, and 521,188 old magazines and papers, 212,029 Christmas and Easter cards, 33,052 pictures and games and 9,254 pieces of music and records were put into the hands of workers all over the globe who otherwise would have had little, if any, of these diverting agencies of civilization to beguile their leisure hours.

Lake Junaluska Scene Of Missionary Activity

During the summer months it is natural for lovers of nature to turn their thoughts to the mountains and for all Methodists to think lovingly of "the summer capital of Methodism," beautiful Lake Junaluska. The beauty of this lake, nestled among the mountains, holds one entranced as one first catches a glimpse of its sparkling water, blue in the morning's glorious sunshine. As the days pass by this vision abides, giving inspiration and rest as one enters upon the strenuous work of "school."

A panoramic view of the lake reveals two outstanding structures, situated at the extremities of the lake—the mission building, in which the school of missions and other assemblies are held from time to time, and the religious education building, where some phase of Sunday school work is carried on throughout the entire season. This year, for the first time, the board of missions and the general Sunday school board have worked together, thereby enlarging the scope of these two schools held simultaneously. A bus running from one building to the other make it possible for this cooperation work to be carried on effectively.

The beautiful mission building was built with centenary money. Upon entering the lobby of this building one was impressed that the missionary conference was in session. On every side flags of many lands were waving.

The curriculum of the school of missions was comprehensive and the personnel of the faculty bespoke success at the begining of the school. Our current mission study books, the missionary and social teachings of the Bible, a study of the world's greatest religions today, the church at work, and a study of organization and methods for advancing the work of the Woman's Missionary society—all these constitute the course of study.

The platform programs held each night in the large auditorium by the side of the lake were most elucidating and inspiring. Our missionaries brought us wonderful messages direct from the field. Sometimes our hearts were made to rejoice and sometimes they almost broke with sorrow. One of the most inspiring programs was conducted by a large band of young people who have volunteered for definite Christian service.

Another source of help was the association with people of kindred spirit. Many were the quiet talks held by the lakeside and away from interruption about the work which lies near to our hearts. Many were the splendid ideas exchanged for enlarging and strengthening the work committed to our hands.

Truly this school and Junaluska are a blessing to the lives of all privileged to attend. A feast for the eyes, a rest for the body, a tonic for the mind, an inspiration for the soul—this is Junaluska and the spirit of the school of Missions.

FLORRIE HARWELL.

Morris Denies Rumor.

Dr. Fred Morris, member of the board of education from the tenth ward, has requested The Constitution to state that rumors to the effect that he is in favor of converting the Walker Street school into a school for negroes are entirely erroneous. He stated that when this question was brought up he was the first member of the board to oppose the plan, and that he will continue to do so.

If she sends it to the washwoman there are hours of worry about the insanitary condition the clothes must encounter.

If she has it done at home there are the hours of work and worry with the washwoman.

There's just one way to take the clock off your washtub. Send all your clothes to the laundry.

The laundry offers your clothes the experience of many years of washing. The best and easiest wash methods on your clothes that science can devise. The laundry offers a big, clean, sanitary plant for your clothes to live in and a week-in-and-week-out service that never fails.

The laundry has a family wash service that will please you. Just telephone.

Union Improvement Club Makes Splendid Sum on Barbecue

What did the Union Improvement club make at their educational barbecue?

Club women all over Georgia will be interested in the answer for the barbecue of July 25 for Jesse Wisdom institute and Tallulah Falls school has attracted no end of attention, as the Union Improvement club is the only rural club in the fourth district and with its center of church, home and school, is a model organization. "Meat was higher than we have ever known it," writes an officer of the club. "But, even so, with all expenses paid, we cleared $130 which makes a gift of $65 for each of our schools."

This takes no reckoning of the pleasure of the day to the large crowd which assembled for a good time and to eat for education. Of this pleasant and profitable occasion Mrs Cumbee in the West Point News, says:

Ten o'clock the program said, and so a good number of interested men and women gathered in the auditorium of the Jesse Wisdom school Thursday morning, ready to partake of the many good things promised by the names on the program. Mrs. A. P Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president of the Fifth district; Mrs. R. K. Rambo, president of the Atlanta city federation; Mrs. Albert Hill, treasurer of the Georgia federation; our own fourth district president, Mrs. H. M. Bird, and Mrs. J. K. Ottley, chairman of the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls school.

Miniature Convention.

It was a miniature convention, an opportunity eagerly to be seized and one that doesn't come so very often, for it isn't every community that has the ability to gather so many prominent women and bring them to their own club room, where their own members can gather the broadening leaven to be gained from such intermingling.

From Charlotte, N. C., on an overnight trip, came one of these women to be ready to board Mrs. Ottley's automobile at 6:30 o'clock—the hour they were to leave Atlanta. The detour at Newnan caused some delay, so it was a little more than ten when the program began.

Union was at her best. Her women, ever cordial, greeted us with smiles more cordial than ever. Mrs. John Henry Jones and Mrs. Brawner, welcoming committee at the door of Jesse Wisdom institute, directed us upstairs to the auditorium, where Mrs. Jesse Wisdom herself, president of the Union Improvement club, welcomed us again.

Union and West Point are so closely related that there were no strangers there, and one just naturally felt at home. The auditorium was beautifully decorated in gold and white, and every convenience, looking to the comfort of their guests had been planned.

Mrs. Wisdom, as much at home on the stage, as she is when canning those delectable fruits which help Union win so many prizes, welcomed their guests in choice words, and introduced Rev. J. L. G. White, of Little Rock, Ark., who gave the opening prayer. Rev. White was holding protracted services at Union, and a splendid spirit, showing why Union puts things across when she attempts them, was shown in the calling in of the morning service that the program and barbecue might be given.

After prayer Mrs. Wisdom introduced the fourth district president, Mrs. H. M. Bird, to whom she turned over the meeting.

District Officers Present.

Mrs. Bird introduced the fourth district officers present—Miss Florrie Johnson, Miss Dora Freeman and Mrs. Mitchell, of LaGrange. Mrs. E. L. Cumbee, fourth district press chairman, was present, but preferred taking her notes in the audience.

Mrs. Bird then introduced Mrs. Ottley, who in turn introduced the members of her party: Mrs. Brantley, Mrs. Hastings, Mrs. T. T. Stevens, Mrs. Bolling Jones, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Albert Hill, Mrs. Rambo, Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Enoch Callaway. Each in turn explained their connection with the Tallulah Falls school, Mrs. Ottley telling of its needs and the need of its existence. She spoke of the gratification of her board of trustees at the whole-heartedness of Union Improvement club in planning this barbecue to help Greater Tallulah. She told of the mountain children walking 30 miles to this "Light of the Mountains," that they may receive the benefit of its instruction. She gave the school's other name—"The Heart of the Mountain"—for from its source is reaching out new life and opportunities for these mountain children, so long deprived of the advantages given to the more fortunate children of the state.

At the close of the program the delicious 'cue, cooked only as Georgia can prepare it, was served under the spreading oaks adjoining the Union Baptist church.

Among the West Pointers fortunate enough to be present were: Miss Florrie Johnson, Mrs. E. L. Cumbee, Mrs. Helen Herzberg, Dr. and Mrs. Rance O'Neal, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hardy, Mrs. J. G. Roberts, Miss Lurline Hargett, Miss Bertha Heyman and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Chastain.

Mrs. Garrett Presents Professional Books To Tallulah School

Mrs. W. T. Garrett, of Barnesville, has presented the professional books of her late husband, Mr. Garrett, to the library of Tallulah Falls Industrial school which will be of great aid to the teachers of this wonderful institution.

In her letter to Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees, Mrs. Garrett says:

"My dear Mrs. Ottley: It gives me great pleasure to send to Tallulah Falls school Mr. Garrett's professional books. He had visited this school and had great faith in it and I feel sure he should like for his books to come here. Mr. Garrett having been superintendent of schools for so many years I can appreciate the fact that teachers are so often handicapped by lack of maps, reference books and school room equipment. For at least one year I shall send $5 per month for you and Miss Davis to use as you see fit for these purposes. In this way I feel that in a small way I am reaching each child in this wonderful school.

"Most cordially,

"Della Harris Garrett."

The pedagogical department of the library at Federation school will be called the W. L. Garrett collection. Mrs. Garrett is a sister of Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia.

Mrs. Sherman Will Attend Convention.

In order to insure the presence of Mrs. John Sherman, president of the General Federation at the Convention of the Georgia Federation which will meet in Augusta next spring the City Federation has acceded to the request of Mrs. Brantley that the dates be fixed for early April, so April sixth has been selected as the opening date. As April fourth is Easter this seems to be a most propitious time, for Augusta is very lovely just then and many northern and western club women of note will arrange to be here for the convention. Mrs. Sherman and others of her executive board will attend the Florida convention the latter part of March. Mrs. Katherine S. Tippets, vice-president-at-large of the Florida Federation has written that if possible she will attend the Georgia convention. The City Federation expects to have headquarters at Bon Air-Vanderbilt and hold the evening sessions in the Tubman auditorium. This will be an unusual opportunity for Augusta to do honor to herself and to the South, to show the women of Georgia the charm of our city of winter sunshine and to show that Florida's activities, even in club matters are excelled in Georgia. —Augusta Chronicle.

State Health Chairman Makes Appeal for Better Health Work

Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, Ga., chairman of health for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. She is also second vice president of the eighth district, and past president of the Comer Woman's club. Mrs. Gholston is one of the most earnest and active leaders in club work and is deeply interested in the plans of the health department.

Mrs. J. W. Gholston, chairman of health of Georgia Federation Women's Clubs, urges all clubs to have at least one program on health.

The slogan is "Georgia Women Work Together for Better Health in Georgia."

"The crying need of the state seems to be disease prevention," said Mrs. Gholston. "How shall this, most effectively, be brought about?

"What did the draft board find out when they took stock of our young manhood to enter the world war?

"That one in every four was physically unfit!

Sought Out Causes.

"Then we sought out the causes of this condition and traced back to the cumulistic effects of maltruition, neglect through school period, and back of that to infancy, and back of that to pre-natal conditions.

"In short, it was clear that the youth of the country was found wanting, because we had cheated our children. The remedy lay in the health education of the public as to our future progress.

"When we hear, from good authority, that, for lack of good mothercraft, so many babies die, do we mean that mothers do not care? Oh, no, but because mothers do not know. The business of being a baby is still the most hazardous job in the world.

"Great progress has been and is still being made, since we have come to think and study nationally of health. Through various health agencies the aim is to strive for 100 per cent standard of health for every child in America, from infancy to maturity.

Average Life Span.

"The result thus far is that the average life span in the United States is now nearly 57 years, showing an increase of 15 years since 1870, so says United States public health service.

"If this has been acquired through these years, what shall we not expect now, since the public interest and cooperation are so vitally awake to the urgent need of health education. Georgia's great industrial development and educational advancement must be backed by a healthy citizenry.

"As club members, as mothers, strive to get and help others to get a better health vision.'

For

"'No life can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife,
And all life not be purer and stronger thereby.'"

Kingston Women Erect Memorial to Confederate Dead

BY BELL BAYLESS
Staff Representative.

Kingston, August 22.—(Special.)—Kingston women have always been to the front in patriotic work and it needs not the proof offered by a faded programme given in the sixties, to show that the History Club of today is but carrying on the work of its predecessors.

Miss Sallie Howard, now in Savannah, sends this program, found treasured among the effects of her recently deceased cousin, Miss Annie Owens, then a young girl of classic beauty, who posed in the tableaux. The paper is yellow and frail, the ink faded, the type quaint and different from modern letters, but the numbers were well selected and equally well carried out and the results still linger in the memory of some of the participants.

As Kingston had no opera house or auditorium in those days, a stage was fitted in a warehouse belonging to E. V. Johnson, (in the rear of the lot now occupied by the Methodist church) and white gauze was stretched in front to give a softened effect to the living pictures.

A special train brought a crowd of spectators from Rome, also the band which supplied the musical numbers. General P. M. B. Young, Dr. Leland and others came from Cartersville, and there was indeed a full house to witness the—Concert and Tableaux.

At Kingston, Ga., on Wednesday evening, September 4, 1867, in aid of the Ladies' Memorial association.

The programme: Music by the band; scene one, "Jacob's Dream"; music by .....; scene two, "Titania" (from Midsummer Night's Dream); music; scene three, "Oliver Twist at the Poor House"; music; scene four, "Tersichore"; music; scene five, "The Flower of the Family and Belle of Kingston"; music; scene six, "In the Dressing Room at the Fancy Ball"; music; scene seven, "A Card Party Broken Up"; music; scene eight, "Night and Morning." Doors open at 7:30 o'clock p. m Performance to begin at 8 o'clock. Admission 50 cents.—Cartersville Express Print.

Jacob's dream showed Mr. Frere (the only grown person who took part) sleeping while all the children of the town were arranged tier above tier, angels ascending and descending, above him. Here were Sallie and Susie Mayson, Fred Waring, Harry Beck, Fannie and Ella Ware, Dr. Dillam's daughters, Carrie and Emmie Jones, little Jane Waring, Col. Mark Hardin's children, Tudie and Kate Roper, and many others whose names have been forgotten and it was indeed a lovely scene, as was Titania posed by Bessie Gillam, with Mr. Frere as Bottom (the donkey's head was made from a calf skin) and the same children represented fairies.

Wesley Elliott was superintendent of the poor house, and Willie Gillam presented his petition to Ella Johnson in "Oliver Twist."

Annie Owens again posed in "Terpsichore," and also with Ella Johnson in "Night and Morning," arranged from Thorwaldsen's model.

A horrified protest arose back stage (which the children were commanded not to divulge) when the ladies heard, sandwiched between two artistic tableaux the band blare forth, "Sallie is the Gal for Me," but as scene 5 presented a sack of flour and huge dinner bell for its characters, another touch of humor was not out of place.

At the end of the programme was reprinted from the preceding issue of the Express the following:

CONCERT AND TABLEAUX, Kingston, Ga., September 4, 1867.

Almost every hill and valley around holds beneath its sod remains of Confederate soldiers. Time is rapidly effacing the localities of their graves. The rude boards that serve to identify them are in a state of decay, and unless something is done to rescue these consecrated spots from the destroying hands of time, ere long they can no more be distinguished.

The ladies of Kingston propose to give a concert and tableaux for the purpose of raising funds to defray the expenses of placing more durable head and foot-boards over the graves in the vicinity, earnestly entreat all friends of civilization, of humanity, of the Confederate dead, to aid them in the effort, by securing for them a full house on the occasion above mentioned.

Kingston, August 31, 1867.
—Cartersville Express Print.

Financial returns enabled these women of Kingston, the Ladies' Memorial association, to accomplish their object. Colonel George H. Waring donated the cement and Mrs. J. A. Rounsaville, of Rome, granddaughter of Judge Hooper who resided in Kingston during the war, and ex-state regent, D. A. R., is authority for the statement that this was the first monument to the Confederate dead erected in Georgia.

Paper and ink fade, sparkling eyes grow dim, but Kingston women have not grown weary in well doing.

Fifteen years ago the History club replaced the decaying wooden headboards with marble slabs, and since 1867 the 250 soldiers' graves have been given loving care.

Not content with honoring the past, Kingston again showed its mettle in patriotic work during the world war, and for the future is striving to educate its children, and hoping for world peace.

Greater Tallulah School Is Preparing for Action

Georgia Federation's school is being put in shape for the full capacity of 100 residents and every soul about the place is busy. Every room and all furniture is being thoroughly cleaned and arranged to house the girls and boys who will come in early September.

Some important features of the Greater Tallulah program are reaching actual completion too.

F. O. Stone Gives Water Equipment.

The most vital of these is a perfected water system—concrete reservoirs are being built and a thousand feet of pipe laid which will furnish running water in abundance for all the new bath rooms of the many houses. For drinking water the John S. Lester well is used and a second well close to the dining hall is now being dug. This will be called the Fenn Stone well as a tribute to F. O. Stone of Atlanta, who has given $500 to install the system. No improvement made at the school will be more valuable than this which will insure a free supply of water for all purposes.

Mr. Witham Gives Scholarships.

Nearly 100 boarding pupils must be provided with scholarships this year, so it is especially interesting to be able to announce that Mr. W. S. Witham has renewed the five scholarships of $150 each with which he has honored his only daughter, Mrs. Rufus T. Dorsey. The Laura William Dorsey scholarships are carrying five splendid girls.

Building Chairman Is at Tallulah.

Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, state chairman of the Tallulah Falls Industrial school for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, is spending several weeks at the school.

She says: "I am here at Tallulah Falls school for the month of August doing some special work for the school, trying to relieve Miss Davis a bit, too, in her multitudinous plans to meet the enlarged capacity of the school, which opens in September.

"There are numbers of visitors at the school every day from many states and as each gets a vision of the power and glory of our federation in this work we are doing to 'increase the light' you hear the highest praises of 'the heart of the federation.'"

She will be a charming addition to the social life of this city.

Miss Irene Thomas To Wed Dr. Warren in October

Prominent and affectionate interest centers in the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Irene Thomas and Dr. Green Dodd Warren on account of the prominence of the two families and the extreme popularity of the young couple.

Miss Thomas is one of Atlanta's most popular and admired belles. Although having never made a formal debut she has enjoyed unusual and wide popularity in Atlanta society and a number of cities where she has visited. She inherited her charm of manner from a long line of Virginia gentlewomen. Her great-grandmother, Minerva Irene Jones, held sway in Richmond society when "Churchill" was the nationally known boulevard of that city. Her maternal grandparent, Fannie Irene Slater, was also an acknowledged belle in Richmond during the civil war. The pretty bride-elect also inherits unusual beauty from her mother, Mrs. Irene B. Williams, beloved and well known Atlanta matron.

Miss Thomas' father, the late Maurice Walker Thomas, was manager of the Westinghouse Electric company in New Orleans, later coming to Atlanta as manager of the Allis Chalmers company. The Thomas family is a branch of the Virginia family by that name, descending from the Rutherford and Connally families.

The 1923 Blue Print, well-known Georgia Tech publication, carried a picture of Miss Thomas, selected by Charles Dana Gibson, as being the most beautiful girl in the southern states.

Other honors bestowed on Miss Thomas was crowning her as queen of the Atlanta Kirmess, and being chosen as "America" in R. O. T. C. celebration.

Attended Seminary.

Miss Thomas graduated from Washington seminary in the class of 1923 and last year completed a most successful year as physical director of that fashionable school. She has the distinctive honor of being twice chosen president of the Phi Pi sorority.

She has just returned from "Camp Nakanawa," in Tennessee, where she won recent laurels in horsemanship having been awarded a life-saving medal the previous summer.

Groom's Family.

Dr. Warren is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Warren, members of well-known southern families. His mother was Miss Annie Dodd, eldest daughter of the late Green T. Dodd, whose name he bears, his grandfather being one of Atlanta's most prominent and constructive citizens, and numbered his friends by the score. His maternal grandparent was Miss Melissa Callaway, a noted beauty and member of a renowned Virginia family that settled in Georgia and immediately won the same prestige that they had formerly enjoyed.

The groom-elect's paternal grandparent was the late Thomas P. Warren, who served as a surgeon in the Confederate army and was later a leading physician of this city. His paternal grandmother was before her marriage, Miss Helen Ernest, a representative of well-known Tennessee family.

Dr. Warren's father is one of Atlanta's best known specialists and a prominent figure in the professional, civic and social life. Dr. W. W. Warren, Jr., is a brother of the groom-elect.

The groom-to-be is a graduate of Tech High school, where he was a member of the S. P. M. fraternity. During his senior year Dr. Warren was captain of the basketball team. He completed his education at the Atlanta Southern Dental college, where he was a member of the Phi Omega fraternity.

He is now associated with Dr. Thomas P. Hinman.

The marriage of Miss Thomas and Dr. Warren will be a beautiful event of October, taking place at All Saints' Episcopal church.

Dorsett—Thomas Wedding Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Riggs, of Temple, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Inez Riggs Dorsett, to Robert Earl Thomas, of Atlanta. The marriage was solemnized Saturday, August 15, at 3 o'clock, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Guy H. Conley, on North Boulevard. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Caldwell, of Westminster Presbyterian church.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Thomas left for a motor trip to Asheville and other points of North Carolina.

WILLIAMS—WHITE.

Mr. and Mrs. Irby G. Williams announce the engagement of their daughter, Clara Belle, to Ernest L. White, both of Atlanta, the wedding to be solemnized in the late fall.

GANN—McGILL.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Gann announce the marriage of their daughter, Lucile, to William Samuel McGill.

ECKLES—CRAWFORD.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Eckles, of Bostwick, Ga., announce the engagement of their daughter, Florence Grey, to John Crawford, of Jacksonville, Fla., formerly of Lexington, Miss., the marriage to take place in the early fall.

OLIVER—BOWEN.

Miss Clyde Goodson Weds Mr. Thomas.

A wedding of cordial interest to their many friends was that of Miss Clyde Goodson and Ralph J. Thomas, which took place at Monticello, Fla., on August 11.

Young People Camp At Apalachee.

One of the most enjoyable occasions of the summer months took place on August 6-13 when a group of Apalachee young people and several visitors spent seven days of "life in the rough" on the Apalachee river near Apalachee. This is an annual event with these young people who have camped in different sections of the state each summer for a number of years. This camp, however, proved to be the most enjoyable one of any of the previous years. They had as their guests a number of out-of-town girls.

Among the visitors were: Misses Margaret Kendall, Madison; Martha Churchill, Covington; Anne Ruth Moore, Athens; Elizabeth Hodges, Atlanta; Lois Prior, Mountain View, Cal.; Ruth and Rena Prior, Apalachee. The young men sponsoring the camp included Samuel and Asbury Few, "Moon Mullins" Michael, Harold, Audley and Clifford Prior, Harold and Leo Shockley and Cornelius Vason, of Madison.

College Set Will Be Featured In Social Life This Week

The last week in August marks the end of the vacation period and the return of the college set from camps to take part in the social gaieties before their departure to colleges, the interim between being called the "little season" in socity with the younger set. Teas, luncheons, dances and swimming parties will be given in compliment to these popular young people, many of whom will entertain visitors.

Reception at Wohelo Lodge.

The most important social function to be given for the older social contingent will be Mrs Frank Tucker Mason's reception Tuesday afternoon at her summer home, Wohelo Lodge, situated at the foot of that wonderful monolith. Stone Mountain. On entering the grounds through a winding road, one is impressed with the enchantment of being far from the heat and traffic of a city to enjoy the hospitality of the charming chatelaine.

Dinner-Dance At Driving Club.

Saturday evening one of the loveliest dinner-dances of the summer season was given at the Piedmont Driving club. Assembled on the spacious terrace of the club Atlanta society enjoyed the delightful surroundings of this beautiful club for dinner and the dancing.

The tables placed around the outer edge of the terrace held as central decorations blue baskets filled with pink and lavender gladioli. Japanese lanterns, outlining the terrace, swayed among the shrubbery bordering the terrace and cast a soft light over the lovely scene. Attractive dance music was played throughout the evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Boynton had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Olin L. Pattillo of Dallas, Texas, who have been their house guests for a few days. Miss Estell Boynton entertained a group of the younger social set in honor of Miss Isabel Brumby, who is the guest of Miss Mary Louise Brumby.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry B. Vaughan had as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Julian Buff and Mrs. Jack Chambers.

Mrs. Allen Gives Lovely Tea.

One of the prettiest parties of the week was the lovely tea at which Mrs. J. P. Allen was hostess on Saturday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving club. This affair was given in honor of Miss Angel Allen, who has been spending the summer at Camp Makawana, Tenn., and her guest, Miss Kitty Upton, of New Orleans, who was at camp with Miss Allen, and is her guest for a few days. Later Miss Upton will be the guest of Miss Suzette Heath.

The guests assembled on the porch overlooking the park. Miss Hortense Adams, Miss Suzette Heath and Mrs. Grady Black assisted Mrs. Allen in receiving the guests.

The tea table was beautifully appointed. At intervals down the long table were baskets of flowers in the pastel shades. Covers were placed for 40 guests.

Miss Upton was gowned in flowered chiffon.

Mrs. Allen wore a handsome model of white crepe.

Miss Suzette Heath will honor Miss Upton with a buffet supper this evening.

Miss Spier Gives Lovely Luncheon.

Miss Evelyn Spier was hostess at a lovely luncheon on Saturday at the home of her mother, Mrs. R. G. Spier, on East Tenth street, in honor of the attendants who will be in her wedding, which will take place on September 10.

A color scheme of yellow and green was carried out in all the appointments of the luncheon. Covers were placed for ten guests.

Opportunity for Service Suggested in Letter.

A real opportunity for service has come under the attention of the editor of the woman's department of The Constitution, which carries with it the appeal of a southern woman of culture and refinement who is striving to stretch her finances so that her daughter may go to college this winter. The letter which follows says:

"Among your friends and acquaintances can you refer me to a woman of elegance and taste who is about 5 feet 7 inches tall and 40 inches bust; another, a young woman 5 feet 7 inches tall, 34 or 36 inches bust? I would like to find a woman about my size, another the size of my daughter from whom I could buy some clothes for the winter season. Money is hard to get, and our financial condition is by no means commensurate with our social position. I do not want just any old thing but would like to find a woman of wealth and taste who, for a reasonable sum, would like to pass on garments she had worn for a season.

"My daughter goes away to college next month. I want a lightweight evening wrap and later will want a heavy one, as she is going north. Do you not know some bride-to-be who would like to get a little money out of used garments to put into new ones?"

The name of the lady who wrote the above is recorded in the editor's office, and those Atlantans desiring to assist in this worthy appeal and to aid in making "both ends meet," will be given to interested parties. In these rushing days and changing modes, many a fine garment is put aside for a new and the more stylish one for the wardrobe.

This same coat or gown, which is relegated to the attic, would meet the requirements suggested in the appeal of a woman who is striving through financial difficulties to educate and clothe her daughter.

Mrs. Robinson To Be Honored.

Mrs. Julian Robinson will be hostess Monday at an informal tea at the Piedmont Driving club in honor of her guest, Miss Flora Jenkins, of Columbus, Ga.

Covers will be placed for ten guests of the honor guest.

Miss Woodberry Is Studying in Paris.

While in Paris Miss Woodberry is doing some special work in music in concert singing, and Miss Clapp is studying folk dancing. They will sail from Rotterdam for home the latter part of August.

Miss Corra Harris Is Honored.

Corra Harris, the writer, was guest of honor at a tea given at the St. Francis in San Francisco by Mrs. Gilbert L. Stradley. Mrs. Harris is visiting here from her home in Georgia and has informally met a number of San Francisco women interested in her work. Mrs. Harris his written a number of distinctive stories of the lives of the humbler clergymen and their wives.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Social Gaieties At Asheville.

Asheville, N. C., August 22.—The society event of outstanding distinction in Asheville at this height of the August season was the dancing party given Saturday night by Mr. and Mrs. John Amherst Cecil at their home, Biltmore house, to celebrate Mrs. Cecil's 25th birthday.

The occasion held a special significance since Mrs. Cecil, who was Cornelia Vanderbilt, came into full control on his birthday, according to the will of her father, the late George W. Vanderbilt, of the entire estate left her by her father, including the palatial chateau he built in the heart of the Land of the Sky.

The dance assembled a company of two hundred, among whom were a number of the younger set from other southern cities visiting in Asheville.

Among the Atlanta guests at Grove Park Inn, which is enjoying one of the biggest August seasons in its history, a number are spending the entire month in Asheville, and others make short visits in the course of tours of the mountain section.

Making short visits during the week were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Newell and their two attractive daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spratlin, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Gress, of Jacksonville, and their school-girl daughter, Gretchen, came from their cottage at Blowing Rock for a few days.

At the Inn for the season are Mrs. Albert Thornton, Miss Emittle, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Floyd, Miss Frances Floyd and Alfred Floyd, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold, Mrs. Adelaide Howell Bower, Mrs. James L. Dickey, F. W. Cole and Miss Cole, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Beilfuss, Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Paxon.

A number of the Atlanta ladies were guests of Mrs. Gilbert White, of Durham, at a bridge-luncheon Thursday at Biltmore Forest Country club.

Miss Mary Mann Wins Cup Offered by William Arnaud

The presentation of the William E. Arnau cup at the Y. W. C. A. camp, at Camp Highland, each summer is the most important event of the season. A beautiful silver cup is presented each year by Mr. Arnau to the best all round girl at camp. And this year Miss Mann, an Atlanta girl, is winner.

Miss Mann was awarded this signal honor on Saturday afternoon, when a big crowd had assembled at Highland to witness the presentation and a matinee put on by the camp staff. Up until the moment the cup was handed to Miss Mann, no one knew who the winner was. The members of the Camp Family decide this contest by voting on the girl who is the most outstanding at camp during the summer. For her sportsmanlike camp spirit, her all round ability in lines athletic, her generous and lovable nature, Mary Mann was awarded the silver cup for this summer.

There is an interesting bit of history in connection with Mary Mann. She is a member of one of Camp Highland's livest clubs, Weeona. There are only seven members and each is an outstanding personality. In fact, the first year the cup for best all round girl at camp was presented, it was won by another member of this club, Dot Morris. And Mary Mann, this year's almost unanimous winner, was second choice then. The next year the cup was awarded a Savannnah girl, Francis Kellar. Again Mary Mann came second. And last year, when Rose Wotten, an English girl, captured the cup and title of best all round girl, Mary Mann was second again.

This year she was hailed winner by a crowd of campers whose enthusiasm was unbounded. Everybody wanted Mary to win, for she is one of the most deserving, the best beloved, and most popular girls at Highland. It is no exaggeration to say that Mary caused more excitement than has been occasioned at camp all summer.

This presentation and the annual matinee given in connection with it is generally slated for Labor day. The affair took place Saturday afternoon for two reasons—the first because Miss Lucy Marvin Adams is leaving for New York next week to be gone some four months during which time she will be engaged in work for the National Y. W. C. A., and second because of the early opening of the city schools.

Miss Erma Fischer Given Lovely Party.

Misses Mercedes and Kathrine Fischer were hostesses at a bridge-tea Saturday afternoon at their home on Myrtle street, in honor of Miss Erma Eleanor Fischer, whose marriage to Austin Francis Brisbane will take place September 2.

A color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the decorations, and also the mints and ices.

The top score prize was a pair of hand-painted bud vases.

A compact was given for consolation. The honor guest was presented with a piece of lingerie.

Mrs. Johanna Fischer assisted in entertaining.

Peachtree Hills Woman's Club.

Mrs. R. K. White, of 119 Mobile avenue, was hostess to the Peachtree Hills Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon, August 19. The home was decorated with a profusion of summer flowers.

The business of the club consisted of a discussion of the plan for the waiting station at the car line, and it is the desire of the club to erect a structure which will be artistic and of credit to the community.

An entertainment was planned as a benefit toward the funds needed for the purpose, to be given on the afternoon of August 30.

Mr. Howard has expressed the hope that he will have the privilege of serving every member and her escort at some time during the evening between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock.

The Monday night gatherings are proving very popular. A prize is given for top score and there are only two rules the guests are requested to observe: (1) No club business must be discussed; (2) All who play bridge are expected to progress. The latter rule must be adhered to in order to increase club fellowship, which is the only motive of the committee sponsoring the gatherings. Those playing tomorrow night will be served with iced melon at the close of the game.

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock the hospital committee will meet at the club to make bandages. Mrs. V. L. Patton and Mrs. Tully Brooks are in charge of all branches of the hospital work during the absence of the chairman, Mrs. C. C. Shipley, who is recuperating from a long illness.

Wednesday, August 26, the executive board will meet at 2:30 p. m. to pass on new members and attend to the regular monthly business of the club. Mrs. Edward Smith, chairman of the board, will preside. Following this the general club meeting for August will open at 3:30 o'clock with assembly singing led by Mrs. Swann Burnett. The program chairman, Mrs. L. A. Hollingsworth, has arranged for musical numbers and readings and the business session will be presided over by the president, Mrs. Arthur Merrill.

Folks Who Know the Value of Sleep

¶ The other evening at the club, Dr. Randolph was discussing health. When Dr. Randolph talks about health, most folks who are anywhere around listen-in. ¶ "What do you consider the greatest single factor in maintaining and building health?" someone asked him. ¶ Quick as a flash, he replied: "Sleep." ¶ Then he added, "Regular hours of restful sleep do more toward combatting the destructive forces of our strenuous modern life than all the medicine we doctors can give folks. My advice to you, if you want to stay well, is less medicine and more sleep. ¶ "If we gave the choice of our sleeping units—beds, mattresses and springs, the same thought we give to the purchase of our automobiles, we would have a healthier nation." ¶ Ask your own doctor. His advice to you will probably be exactly similar to Dr. Randolph's.

Be sure of your mattress quality. A pretty covering may encase any sort of filling. Blue Ribbon Mattresses are made only of new clean cotton that has been felted into soft layers. The name Blue Ribbon is woven in the ticking on all genuine Blue Ribbon Mattresses.

The special top construction of Blue Ribbon Springs makes each row of coils work independently and adapt itself immediately to the position and weight of the body, and costs you no more than ordinary springs. Not all springs painted blue are Blue Ribbon Springs. To be sure you get a Blue Ribbon look for the trade mark tag on the spring.

Give this matter of Sleep Equipment Careful Thought ~ nothing is more important

NO LONGER is the purchase of sleep equipment just "buying a bed, mattress and spring." It's vastly more important than that. It's a matter that deserves your most careful consideration because much of the health of some member of the family depends upon it. ¶ On sleep equipment you should demand these things — Beauty, Restfulness and Economy. The more than 50 models of Blue Ribbon steel beds furnish an almost inexhaustible store from which to choose an exquisite design that will harmonize delightfully with your bedroom. Below is a typical example of Blue Ribbon craftsmanship (No. 1807). ¶ They are much more economical than wood beds and of course more sanitary and more easily kept clean. A damp cloth used ever so seldom, will restore all the newness and beauty of their finish. Blue Ribbon steel beds are finished in faithful reproductions of the most expensive woods as well as in ivory and white. Their finish is baked on and hand-rubbed and will never grow dull or crack. ¶ When used in combination with Blue Ribbon Mattresses and Springs they form the most restful sleep equipment yet discovered. Each one of the three units have a definite part in supplying the factors that make sleep more restful. The rigid Blue Ribbon Bed forms a perfect base for the resilient Blue Ribbon Spring and the Blue Ribbon Spring in turn gives just the right buoyancy to the soft Blue Ribbon Mattress. Before you purchase your next equipment talk this important matter over with your furniture dealer. Let him tell you in detail how Blue Ribbon Sleep equipment makes sleep more restful.

Mrs. Burger Convention Speaker

MRS. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

"Should an attempt be made to remove the eighteenth amendment from the constitution who would rise to its rescue first? The church? No! The W. C. T. U.? No! The Anti-Saloon League? No! Would they not be interested? Yes! And vitally so; but the first defender of the eighteenth amendment would be the combined automobile industry of the United States," said Mrs. Nelle Berger, president of the Missouri Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who will be the speaker on Wednesday evening, October 8, at the state W. C. T. U. convention in Macon, in a recent address.

"The greatest question before the American public today," she continued, "is not 'Can prohibition be enforced?' but 'Where shall we park our cars?'

Sixteen million automobiles upon our streets and highways demand sober drivers, and the 4,000,000 more to be sold annually in the next four years demand that no money shall go into the liquor business but shall go into this gigantic business enterprise of this nation.

"The moving picture magnates who have grown to be multi-millionaires would rise to the defense of the eighteenth amendment. The radio, which is beginning to put on an extensive selling campaign, would immediately broadcast in its defense.' Real estate dealers who are reaping golden harvests because of the abolition of the saloon, would fight to a finish to retain the eighteenth amendment. Schools and colleges filled now to overflowing would rise in a body to hold this amendment, which has brought hordes of students to their doors. Yes, the eighteenth amendment in the constitution and it is there to stay, because the church, the W. C. T. U., the Anti-Saloon League and the big business will keep it there."

Mrs. Nelle Gilham Burger, of Springfield, Mo., was born in St. Louis. Her parents came from Virginia and later moved to Illinois, where Mrs. Burger, while quite a young girl, became interested in temperance work. This interest was awakened by a chance invitation to attend a W. C. T. U. meeting in which she received her introduction to this organization. Her heart was won by its plea and possibilities, and almost from that hour her life has been dedicated to its service.

Then a 16-year-old girl unknown outside of her community—today a mature woman whose marked ability as an opponent of that John whose surname is Barleycorn—is nation-wide.

Legislative Successes.

She has served the Missouri W. C. T. U. in many official capacities, and is now rounding out the fourteenth year as state president. She is editor of The Missouri Counselor, the state W. C. T. U. official organ.

Mrs. Burger is recognized as among the foremost orators of the nation and has lectured in every state on total abstinence, law observance, law enforcement and world prohibition, world peace and world purity in an eloquent, forceful and convincing manner. She possesses a good voice and pleasing personality that convinces and wins her hearers.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor said of her: Mrs. Burger was a national lecturer and organizer for the W. C. T. U. and was at my first state convention, and was largely responsible for my accepting the presidency of the Georgia W. C. T. U. in 1910.

"After convention everywhere she went in Georgia to speak for us (and that was in the days when there was much prejudice against women speaking in the churches), she won the people body and soul to our work. Since then the call came from all sections: 'Send us another Mrs. Burger.'

"It is beautiful to me that she who was with me so helpfully and blessedly when I picked up the gavel for the first time, will be the speaker at my first state convention when I take that gavel up again."

Mrs. Burger has served her state upon many committees of public welfare, and as vice president of the Missouri woman's legislative committee has had many notable successes. Her executive ability is a rare gift and she is naturally a leader.

Some of the bills sponsored by the Missouri W. C. T. U. for which she worked which became laws are: the white slave bill, police woman, Frances E. Willard day in the public schools, scientific temperance instruction in schools, minimum wage for women, children's code laws, child labor laws, woman's suffrage, prohibition ratification and Missouri dry laws.

Mrs. Burger is honored and respected by the legislators, for with wisdom and gracious tactfulness she always meets trying situations. The history of reform movements of the state and nation could not be completely written without the record of the work of this gifted, consecrated and loyal leader.

Organizes Mexican W. C. T. U.

Several years ago she carried the white ribbon banner into old Mexico, and while there won among other honors the distinction of being the only temperance worker in the world at that time to be placed upon the pay roll of a foreign government.

Thereby hangs the tale of how she persuaded President Diaz to supplement the funds provided by the World's W. C. T. U. When her plans were perfected she went to the president and proposed in language diplomatic that his government go fifty-fifty on the expense of scientific temperance instruction for the children of the republic.

At the close of their conferences she held a government check for the required amount. Free transportation was also given her, as well as an official interpreter.

Her stay in Mexico was limited to one year, but during that time she wrote scientific temperance lessons for the schools of the federal district and 17 states and made a speaking tour through every state in the republic except two.

Such is Mrs. Burger abroad. At home she is wife and home maker. Though primarily a temperance advocate, she gives herself freely to any other good cause.

Her presence will be one of the chief attractions of the coming state W. C. T. U. convention in Macon, October 6-9.

Petition Grows.

The "I Observe the Law" petition for strict prohibition law inforcement, signed by total abstainers, is assuming astonishing proportions already. Hundreds of yards containing many more than 10,000 names of total abstainers have been sent to Mrs. W. G. Cotton, of Columbus, state corresponding secretary, from 61 places, and earnest workers are busy securing additional signers, and often new members, too.

It is desired that every church, adults' Sunday school class in the state and others write to Mrs. Cotton for one or more yard sheets, fill and return it to her to help on toward the mile goal.

Mrs. Cotton says: "I believe the Cherokee county W. C. T. U. must have secured everybody in the county, and I have headed the petition with Canton's 26 yards. Mrs. L. A. McClure's great work just proves what can be done when one goes seriously and prayerfully about securing signers as she and her helpers did.

"Then Cairo is next and Grady county has enrolled many yards. Pierce county's yards had written across the back: 'Nearly every citizen has enrolled.' One worker in the center of the state, who had a vision of the benefits accruing from the enrollment of pledge-signers on the signers themselves and their associates, on officials and office-seekers, and on the cause of law observance and law enforcement, secured six yards of petition signers and a score of patriotic rolls signed by young people, in spite of the fact that she was kept at home by sickness."

W. C. T. U. members are expected to carry a petition with them constantly, inviting every one that they meet to enroll, for it is desired to finish the mile of names of total abstainers' names by the state convention in October.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. Resumes Activities.

The Kirkwood P.-T. A. met August 19 to prepare for the work of the beginning school year. The meeting was opened with a prayer by the president, Mrs. H. G. Parks. After the minutes of the last meeting in June were read and approved the reports of treasurer and chairman of standing committees were heard.

Mrs. Charles W. Rushin, chairman of Pre-School age committee, reported of meetings which took place during the summer and the progress that was made. Mrs. F. H. G. Wilkie, chairman of citizenship, urged the mothers who had not registered to do so before Saturday, August 22, when the registration books close.

After business was disposed of, Miss Alexander, who is a public health nurse of Atlanta, introduced Miss Anne Simpson, a nurse in the United States public health service, who gave a very interesting talk on hygiene. Miss Simpson will visit the association again and show pictures and lecture on the subject. The next meeting of the P.-T. A. will be Wednesday, September 16.

Message From President General

"What I kept I lost,
What I spent I had,
What I gave I have."
—Persian Proverb.

August, now the eighth month of the calendar year, was named for the Roman emperor Augustus, one of the greatest rulers that ever lived. Of him a poet has said:

"August being rich arrayed
In garments all of gold down to the ground."

There is, indeed, something royal about it. For it is a month of gold and purple, its sun showing through a "golden glory" on the yellowing fields of grain, while everywhere there is the sheen of goldenrod and aster, and of purple grapes ripening on the vine.

One of the warmest months of the year, and usually one of the stillest, its heat is likely to be of the "swelstering" variety, hence August is proverbially the month of vacations.

To many of us it means pleasant change of scene and restful, health-giving hours spent apart from the usual routine of life's duties. For still others of us, the magic carpet of journeys, from one cause or another, fails to alight before our doorstep, and August, instead of affording leisure and change of scene, becomes, instead, one of the busiest months of the whole year, with young folks home from school and the joys, the cares and the responsibilities of hospitality thick about us. For still others of us it is a testing time of our powers of endurance and our serenity of disposition, with the yield of garden, field and orchard peaking themselves for distribution and winter storing.

Play and Rest.

However, no matter what the problems and responsibilities that come in lieu of the August holiday, let our compact with ourselves be, that we shall determine both to play and rest in our home environment. Routine is not only needful but essential in the well-ordered business of living, but well-planned breaks in the routine of one's daily life not only make for longer lives, for greater efficiency and for greater joy in the doing of our daily tasks, but for that happier understanding of our neighbor's viewpoint, which sweetens daily intercourse.

A famous physician's criticism of us American women is that, when we are most fatigued, instead of giving our bodies and our souls the needed repose, we put our intelligence in our vanity bags and goad ourselves to increased activity. Suppose, by way of answer, that, during this month of August, we try to so plan one of our waking hours that we may, as nearly as possible, shut ourselves off from the routine. This hour, spent in complete relaxation and rest, in uninterrupted reading, or in that form of enjoyment which means greatest bliss to each particular soul, will, I suspect, do a very great deal toward imbuing each one of us with that freedom from care and worry which will make for the poise that brings peace of mind in its wake. In this way one of us will prove herself a vacation specialist, prescribing for herself the type of vacation that it is possible to procure with the resources at hand.

Save to Travel.

And while we are upon this topic of vacation, I wonder if you know that the banking institutions of the country, in line with their Christmas club savings idea, are inaugurating save-to-travel clubs—with vacations carefully planned by experts, at prices ranging from $50 upwards. To even read the illustrated pamphlets issued in this connection is to indulge in that most fascinating of indoor sports, the planning of a journey which the save-to-travel clubs claim to turn from a dream to a certainty.

In world history there is scarcely a more important month in all the calendar year than that of August. It saw the battle of Thermopylae, in 480 B. C. It was in August, 1492, that Columbus sailed from Spain on his first voyage of discovery to the new world and, in August, 1502, that he first landed on the American continent. Likewise was it in August, 1620, that the Pilgrims sailed from England on the Mayflower, and that Hendrik Hudson first entered Hudson bay. Coming nearer our own day and time, the Holy Roman Empire ceased to exist in August, 1806; Fulton's Clermont made its trial trip in August, 1807; the United States and Spain signed peace proposals in August, 1898, and the principal old-world nations, engaging in the recent European conflict, declared war in August, 1914.

For us, in our own daily lives, and in our vacation plannings for increasing the membership and promoting the general welfare of our society may this month of August, 1925, likewise prove a time of auspicious beginnings whose like we have not yet been privileged to know, either as individuals or as an organization.

LORA HAINES COOK,
President General, N. S. D. A. R.

Miss Ellee Murrah Weds Mr. Fuller.

Shiloh, Ga., August 22.—An event of unusual interest was the wedding of Miss Ellee Murrah and Hewlett A. Fuller, which culminated a romance of several years, in which all their friends have been cordially interested. The bride is greatly admired for her charm of manner and sweetness of disposition. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Fuller and has a wide circle of friends and admirers.

The ceremony took place Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. C. C. Murrah. The invitation list was confined to the relatives and young friends of the bride and groom. Preceding the wedding, Mrs. W. B. White sang "I Love You Truly" and "At Dawning." She was accompanied by Mrs. Idus Robertson, of Manchester, who also played the wedding march.

Kle Club Will Hold Meeting on August 26

The Kle club will resume activities toward its Christmas charity work at its first fall meeting Wednesday, August 26, at 11 o'clock in the lodge room of the Elks' club.

The president, Mrs. Ed F. Bond, urges each member to make a special effort to be present. Many matters of importance and great interest will be taken up. Kle club pins may be purchased at this time at a nominal cost.

Members are requested to fulfill their pledges for the Christmas hope chest, Mrs. F. H. Naedele, chairman, Mrs. I. S. Moss, co-chairman.

All 1924 workers who have neglected to ally themselves so far this year are urged to get in touch with the secretary and renew their membership in order to assist in the Christmas activities, as well as enjoy the great satisfaction and joy to be derived from this philanthropic work. Many plans of a social nature have been formulated for the fall months.

Any mother, daughter, sister, wife or widow of an Elk in good standing is eligible and most cordially invited to join the Kle club.

This unit of B. P. O. E. No. 78 cooperates with them in their Christmas cheer, and it is the hope of each club that because of them this Yuletide season will prove brighter and happier to very many needy Atlantans than any previous one. Members are required to present their membership cards at all meetings.

THE 1925 ASSEMBLY.

The first sixty-day biennial session of the Georgia assembly justified the change from the old annual session law.

The net results were sorely disappointing in several outstanding ways, but a great deal of good legislation was enacted, and some of a most constructive nature.

The major programs generally failed, and it is extremely and especially unfortunate that no provision was made—or begun—for the expansion of the archaic state institutions, to meet modern demands. It is equally as unfortunate that a potential step toward the carrying of equal educational advantages to the boys and girls of Georgia was not made.

From the net records of the 1925 assembly when they are compiled and appraised will grow the major issues in the 1927 state-wide campaign. Education; revenues, transportation, that is, roads, rivers, rails; and an agricultural code, will necessarily, as we see it today, predominate among those issues.

The people of Atlanta have enjoyed and appreciated the presence, for two months, of the assemblymen—many of whom were accompanied by their families—and wish for them full measures of health, happiness and prosperity upon their return to their respective homes.

When the complete record of the assembly is compiled for public consumption it will be time sufficient to put it to the acid test both as to its acts of commission and omission.

TOUR OF ATLANTANS.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has made another progressive move in the organization of a good-will tour of local business men through south Georgia. The tour will be conducted over the A., B. & A. railroad, which penetrates a major section of the tobacco belt, and from the cities reached motor excursions will be made to nearby places, including inspections of various agricultural and industrial developments. The party will move out of Atlanta Thursday evening, September 3, and will spend Sunday at St. Simon. Those who may want to return to Atlanta on Saturday night, reaching here Sunday morning, may arrange to do so. The group will probably reach 250 or more in numbers, and there will be plenty of entertainment on the special train, and at the various points at which stops will be made. These will include Thomasville, Moultrie, Tifton, Valdosta, Fitzgerald, Douglas, Alma, Waycross, Brunswick and a number of other places.

The outstanding features, however, are the objects and purposes of the tour. It will not be for the purpose of attracting business to Atlanta, or "talking shop," but specifically a potential group expression of the good will and the cooperative spirit of Atlanta and Atlantans toward every other section of the state, and a token of a general feeling of rejoicing at the good crops, and the tide of prosperity running high in the southern sections of the state. It is also for the purpose of better acquainting Atlanta business men with other sections of the state, and with conditions that are so potent in the new era of economic progress in Georgia.

It is a most commendable undertaking and President Smith and Executive Secretary Barker are to be congratulated for having conceived and perfected the plan. The Atlanta chamber is taking a broad and comprehensive view of its service and functions, and is working diligently and resourcefully for a great coordinated Georgia, from the mountains to the sea.

COST OF RESTLESSNESS.

The impulse to move to new fields of endeavor—to seek new surroundings and new opportunities—is so overpowering at times that a life-time's earnings may be dissipated, and a period of depression ushered in upon a family that has everything at its command to contribute to happiness and success.

The spirit of restlessness is a dangerous one. Certainly no thoughtful person would counsel another remaining "settled" when better definite opportunities, all angles considered, opened up. And yet all that glitters is not gold, and nothing is more dangerous than impulsiveness in moving from one situation in life to another, or from taking "long chances on a gamble" when one's family is involved.

The last issue of the Manufacturers' Record tells this story:

"Let us repeat a story told a year or so ago about a town in southwest Virginia which had lived on the tobacco industry. This had been absorbed by some of the big combinations, and one of the tobacco people who had sold out concluded there was nothing left in the town in the way of opportunity and was planning to move elsewhere. He happened, however, just at that time to hear Dr. Russell Conwell's celebrated lecture, 'Acres of Diamonds,' which has been delivered over 6,000 times. He decided to remain where he was. He established a small furniture factory. He has kept on enlarging that factory until it now comprises some 14 or 15 large buildings."

The experience of the Virginian has been the experience of countless others who, instead of "moving away" because a temporary depression had appeared, bent renewed energies toward dissipating the depression and toward building outstanding and permanent success.

President W. R. C. Smith, of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, tells the story of a western farmer who had acquired a magnificent estate but had become restless and discontented and had gotten the consent of his better half—who no doubt yielded against her judgment—to offer the place for sale so that a residence might be taken up somewhere else, in new surroundings and with the temporary thrill of new faces as neighbors. Accordingly he minutely described his place and sent it to a metropolitan real estate agency for disposal. In the meantime he began to read the advertisements of other places, in other sections and states, looking to the purchase of a new home. Nothing pleased him. One evening while running through the pages of a current magazine he found a place for sale that did please him. The advertisement gave a "key address." It did not state the location of the property—this beautiful estate. It appealed to him so much he could not sleep. It was the place of his dreams. The good wife shared his enthusiasm. He wrote to the key address for information as to the state and the section in which the estate was located. Promptly he was informed that it was his own home — the advertisement of his own place. He was so afraid it would be sold he wired the agency withdrawing the listing, paid the expense of the advertising, and the disease of restlessness found a sure and permanent remedy.

This story conveys a strong and useful lesson. Some people in Georgia today who are doing well, with prospects good, are restless because they hear stories of fabulous fortunes being made overnight in realty speculation elsewhere. They ride over mines of gold chasing the elusive rainbow's end.

Contentment, coupled with a determination to win that grows stronger when conditions look darkest—nine times out of ten will win—and win an enduring victory.

TIME FOR CONSERVATISM.

Conservatism is a priceless jewel in stock market trading. It probably does not serve so well in spectacular fortune making or fortune losing, but where one great fortune is made by a reckless speculator a thousand others lose their "all" when they try such tactics.

Thoughtful business men are warning the investing public at this time not to be overconfident—at least recklessly confident—in bidding up the prices of speculative stocks.

Business conditions generally are good, and the outlook is good, and yet common sense teaches that overspeculation in anything is compelled to invite reaction.

The prices of industrial issues are ruling high—higher in some instances than ever before. They have followed favorable trade reports, and yet present tendencies in stocks contain unmistakable elements of danger.

The approaching fall will be one of healthy business in all sound lines, according to present indications. It is just such indications that suggest to the conservative business mind the advisability for caution. If conservatism is observed all legitimate business will undergo a certain and substantial growth. Wild speculations hurt legitimate business. Let us help to cultivate and maintain business soundness rather than dissipate it by going wild on "get-rich-quick" speculations.

THE NEXT TAX BILL.

According to press dispatches from the summer white house, the president has recently conferred with Secretary Mellon, Senator Smoot and Representative Tilson—the latter the republican floor leader of the house—on the prospects of early tax reform upon the convening of congress in December.

It is said the president expects the ways and means committee of the house to have a bill ready for the opening which will provide a cut in sur taxes of at least one-half, and otherwise materially reduce income taxes as applying to the general individual. Mr. Tilson has promised, it is said, to give such a bill the right of way in the expectation that it will be passed in the senate before the holidays set in.

Discussing this vital question which reaches every home the Chicago Daily News says:

"True tax reform should now come as a measure of delayed justice and an earnest of general prosperity. It is to be hoped that President Coolidge's vital distinction between tax reduction and tax reform is being emphasized in discussions of the subject with congressional leaders. Secretary Mellon, according to reports, does not intend to present another "Mellon program," but will play a passive part, giving information when asked for it and trusting congress to do the right thing. In view of the harsh criticisms that followed Mr. Mellon's efforts two years ago his present announced policy is strategically sound, provided the strong demand for true tax reform voiced by congressional leaders of both parties is supplemented by active support of their avowed principles."

The president was not satisfied with the last revenue act. He expects better things of the incoming congress. And if the members of congress will realize that revenue legislation should not be made a political football to be played through the congressional campaigns of 1926 we will undoubtedly get some genuine relief.

PLUCKY AMERICAN.

Although 18-year-old Gertrude Ederle, the American girl, failed to swim the English channel, due to a choppy sea that made passengers on the excursion boats ill, she smashed all records for speed during the eight hours in the water and made a new endurance record in face of the prevailing weather. The followers of similar exhibitions for a decade are unanimous in the opinion that it was one of the outstanding channel tests of history, and that Miss Ederle will be able at her next trial to conquer the elements—including the unexpected current—that encompassed her defeat.

The American is a bold and plucky champion, and by her exhibition won the esteem and good wishes of multitudes of people all over the world. Perhaps no test of swimming endurance before created so much general interest. She will, it is assumed, bide her time and try again. And Americans generally will wish for her a full measure of success.

AS WE PASS ALONG.

The New York of yesterday is rapidly passing. Old-timers who survive will recall the three popular hotels that clustered around the corners at Twenty-third street and Broadway. There was the Fifth avenue, the most fashionable of all in the great metropolis until the Waldorf-Astoria challenged its rank. Next to it was the Hoffman—the scene of more political "president making" than any hostelry in America. The Bartholdie across the street, was the New York home of William Jennings Bryan in his '96 and 1900 campaigns. They are all gone. The old Eden Musee, with its wax figures and champion chess automaton is gone. The old Madison Square Garden that housed everything from a four-ring circus to a Tom Dixon revival and climaxed its long and colorful career with the democratic national convention of 1924, is now gone.

But the most famous of all the old New York landmarks and the one that has withstood the tread of progress' march the longest, has at last succumbed to the inevitable, for the Academy of Music at Fourteenth street near Broadway began to tumble under the wrecking crews only yesterday.

It was in its day the finest playhouse in America. King Edward VII, when the dashing young Prince of Wales, maintained a box during his prolonged American visit. The titled heads of Europe and the ultra fashionable of America once mingled in the georgeously-decorated corridors. Grisi and Mario sang there, as did Jenny Lind. And Jim Fisk and Jake Sharp played monkeys there, when yet again Edwin Booth swayed great audiences with his emotional drama.

Fourteenth street, the gay Rialto of former days, with Tammany hall linked on to the east end of the academy, and Tom Sharkey's and other "sport" saloons, with their gilded mirrors inviting the between-the-acts tea-hounds to easy chairs and chattering, painted companions is now a street of memories.

Third avenue—just a block from Broadway, to the east—was the old Bowery, and from Fourteenth street to Park Row the underworld found its fun and planned its crimes. Today it is a street of business—just one uninteresting street in a great city of noise and confusion. That's all.

Modern New York is unlike the old. And yet is it any better? Perhaps so.

THE BELGIUM PACT.

The special concessions granted the Belgian commission in the debt pact signed with the United States war debt funding commission, will very probably retard rather than quicken the pending agreement with France.

The American commission consented to let Belgium pay off the pre-armistice loan of $171,780,000 in annual installments over a period of 62 years without one cent of interest at any time. And the debt for moneys borrowed after the war—a total of $246,000,000—is to be repaid on the same terms granted the British and the other debtor nations that have negotiated their payments. These cover an installment of 62 years with interest at the rate of 3 and 3 1-2 per cent.

It is now very probable, of course, that the French will demand the same distinction between pre-armistice and post-war debts.

The American commission, however, holds that Belgium occupies a unique position demanding this special concession, which France does not hold. The fact is, the concession was made in recognition of the late President Wilson's unratified pledge that whereby the United States would have looked to German reparations for repayment of the pre-armistice loans to Belgium.

At any rate it is believed the congress will speedily ratify the pact, and the American commission is to be congratulated that Belgium has been added to Great Britain, Poland, Hungary, Finland and Lithuania as nations having already satisfactorily arranged settlements.

TO URGE SIMPLIFICATION.

At the annual meeting of the American Institute of Accountants to be held in Washington, September 15-16, the simplification of the income tax return will be the paramount subject of discussion and definite action. That is to say, it is expected as a result of this meeting that definite recommendations will be laid before congress as to steps that may be taken to simplify the process of levying and collecting the tax.

The inconvenience and uncertainty which are a part of the present system of levying and collecting taxes are a source of as much complaint on the part of the business man, the accountants believe, as the amount of the tax.

If this inconvenience and uncertainty can be reduced or eliminated a distinct accomplishment will have been recorded.

Controversial and political questions, the institute announces, will be avoided in its recommendations and no effort will be made to suggest rates of taxes or the forms that taxation might take. The accountants will confine themselves to recommendations as to the simplification of the tax system.

The institute is the national organization of practising accountants with more than 2,000 members. The institute prepares examinations for applicants for admission and these examinations are adopted by the examining boards of 35 states and territories. A code of ethics adopted by the institute governs the professional practices of its members and this code is rigidly enforced. These rules of conduct are generally adopted as a guide for accountants who are not members of the institute. It maintains a library and information service at its headquarters in New York, and watches closely legislation in the states affecting accountancy. A large delegation of Georgia members will attend this conference.

This effort is a very commendable evidence of the active interest taken by accountants in the great fiscal questions of the day. Accountants are cooperating with chambers of commerce, trade organizations, banks and public officials in all parts of the country in public affairs and civic undertakings. The accountants during the past year have made efforts to reduce business crime and to extend the use of commercial arbitration in the settlement of business disputes. These items were both part of the public service work undertaken by the institute.

The Prince of Wales will visit South America next. That young man is determined to get all the first-hand information possible about the world he lives in.

When the summer's toil is ended, the modern prodigal son returns to the ancestral fields and orders veal, with trimmings.

The bootleg business must be "looking up," when a newspaper refers to "exclusive bootleg circles."

From the Shadows.

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

Did you know when I came in the dark to you there
Where sweet as of old you were sleeping?
Did you thrill to the kiss on your beautiful hair
While the dream-shadows round you were creeping?

There were tears in the eyes
That were formed of God's skies,
And I kissed them away,
With the shadows of sighs.

I know not your dreams in the dark or the light,
Or the sorrow that giveth no warning,
But I know that Love still comes to kiss you Goodnight,
And still leaves a kiss for Goodmorning.

Do you know I am near
When the darkness falls drear?—
Feel the kiss on your lips
And your beautiful hair?

Sunday Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Contributory Negligence.

Here's a letter from a minister which puts me in a mood to do a little long-distance diagnosing. Space permits the printing of only the salient features of the letter:

"I certainly like the plain truth. I preach it, and I find there are many that do not like it. . . . Yesterday I was accused of commiting a sin by taking aspirin tablets. I have taken aspirin for a good many years. Ever since I was thirteen (I am now 30) I have been subject to terrible headaches and nose-bleed. One day I heard of aspirin and started using it. For a time one table would suffice to relieve me, but gradually I found it necessary to take more, until now I have to take three at a time and usually two doses. The most I've ever taken was twelve tablets in less than twelve hours.

"Is this dangerous? Do these tablets affect the heart? A New York doctor I met there said they were harmless. Another doctor said they would hasten my death. What do you say?

"Sometimes my nose bleeds two or three times a day, and again it may be a week or longer between attacks.

"I am very nervous. I have to keep my hands and feet moving all the time. Often after a meeting I have to rub my legs, they ache so, and sometimes I cry like a baby. I sleep very lightly and lie for hours at night just twitching my feet continually, or keep one foot moving continually. I am very impatient and irritable. I know. In the last few years I have lost weight until I am now 25 pounds underweight. . . ."

Aspirin is the proprietary name of one brand of acetyl-salicylic acid. This coaltar derivative was patented—actually granted a patent, and not just designated "patent medicine"—when it was first introduced, and the patent expired a few years ago, so that now anybody may manufacture and sell it.

Like the older coaltar derivatives, acetanilid and phenacetin (or acetphenetidin, as it is chemically termed), acetyl-salicylic acid or aspirin stops aches or pains by benumbing one's sensation. In the same way these coaltar derivatives stop the sense of fatigue, or weariness, or depression, or worry, or anxiety or nausea—but they do not cure any of the underlying disease conditions responsible for these sensations. The presence of any such coaltar derivative in concoctions purporting to cure "colds," "grippe," "fever," "neuralgia," "headache," "neuritis," "rheumatism" or other conditions attended with ache or pain or malaise is an acknowledgment of indulgence in dope—if the victim has enough intelligence to comprehend what such indulgence means.

Now it is probably true that acetyl-salicylic acid (aspirin) is less injurious, taken as a pain-killer than the older coaltar derivatives. It is certainly not true that this newer pain-killer is harmless. Like acetanilid and phenacetin (acetphenetidin), it tends to break down the red blood corpuscles and embarrass their oxygen-carrying function; like these older drugs, it tends to damage the heart; and when abused, as our correspondent is abusing it, aspirin tends to disorganize the nervous system and make the victim a "nervous wreck." That is characteristic of almost any "dope."

I had not looked upon the aspirin habit in that light before, but the minister's friend was right when he called it a sin, for it certainly is a sin for any one to indulge a habit which impairs health.

Now I should not hesitate to take a dose or two of acetyl-salicylic acid or aspirin in an emergency, for relief from pain or distress of almost any kind. I do not think occasional or emergency resort to such drugs is dangerous for healthy, strong persons. But the frequent or habitual use of these drugs is unquestionably a dangerous ruinous practice, particularly for people who are not well and strong to begin with.

The minister, according to the data in his letter, is guilty of contributory negligence, in that he has apparently made no real effort to find out what causes his headaches and nose-bleedings and to have the trouble properly treated. Is this policy of inaction or passivity on his part inspired by his fondness for the "kick" in his favorite dope?

Worms Have Low Upkeep.

Has any one got worms that is troubled with a big appetite, but stays thin in spite of it?—(L. M.)

Ans.—No, that is a popular notion which has no foundation in fact. Most persons who really harbor tapeworms are rather overnourished and have just ordinary appetites.

Homebug, So To Speak.

We have just moved into a house which we find is infested with bedbugs and we will appreciate it very much if you will tell us how to get rid of them.—(R. A. M.)

Ans.—Fumigation is the most effective way, if you can have the services of an expert. If you must tackle the job yourself, squirt gasoline, kerosene or benzine in all cracks and crevices where bugs may hide, taking care to avoid fire or flame.

Prospective Mother.

Will you kindly send me the booklet you distribute on the rules for an expectant mother?—(F. H. K.)

Ans.—I do not distribute booklets. But I should be glad to send a letter of advice to any expectant mother who requests it.

Nuts in Bread.

Kindly tell me whether nuts in bread are indigestible. Are nuts indigestible raw? A drugless doctor here says so.—(Mrs. A. D.)

Ans.—Nuts are as digestible in bread as in any other way. Raw nuts are digestible and very wholesome, nutritious food.

The Salts Myth.

Kindly tell me if it is all right to put a little Epsom salts in the bath once a week. Will they help to reduce?—(Claire M. L.)

Ans.—That is just beauty-expert hokum. It is harmless to bathe with a solution of Epsom salts, but it is silly to imagine you can reduce that way.

Sulphur.

Please give a list of meats and vegetables that contain sulphur, and a list of fruits containing it, if they do.—(S. J. A.)

Ans.—Apples, pears, gooseberries, brown bread, beans, peas, radishes, cauliflower, cabbage, onions, eggs, milk, lean beef.

Commends Amorous' Plan for Chattahoochee

Editor Constitution: Thanks to Mr. Martin Amorous for reopening the Chattahoochee river waterway and waterpower project, with his contribution in The Constitution of August 10. He calls attention to the many ways in which this magnificent engineering scheme would benefit Georgia, and especially the region along the Chattahoochee river.

In addition to all these benefits, which he recites, we would like to suggest another, which has occurred to us after reading a splendid article in the last issue of The National Geographic Magazine, entitled "Toilers of the Sky." In this article, Mr. McFall Kerbey tells of the wonderful manner in which clouds are formed, how they are carried by the winds, and condensed to water the earth. This article tells of "the stuff clouds are made of," and how to distinguish rain clouds from those which deceive us often.

At this time, when thousands of our small creeks and spring branches are entirely dried up for the lack of rainfall, it is high time to look around and see if there is not some way to assists nature, at least to some extent. The writer of this interesting article in The National Geographic Magazine, answers the question: "Where do clouds come from?" by stating, that even the dew-drops upon a rose or a blade of grass, contribute to the formation of clouds; that all creeks, rivers, ponds, lakes, and especially large bodies of water, furnish moisture, which is constantly being lifted by the heat of the sun and formed into clouds.

Our section of the country is practically lakeless, painfully lacking in natural lakes. These four great lakes which would be formed by the four great dams which the government has already surveyed along the Chattahoochee river between Columbus and Atlanta, would probably furnish 50 or possibly 100 square miles of lake surface; and make a vast storehouse of water for making clouds, as well as all the other uses to which stored-up water can be put.

Atlanta Citizen Writes Of a Forsyth Experience

Editor Constitution: I have been reading with a great deal of interest the articles published in your paper regarding tourists being held up in different parts of the state, particularly the things that have happened in Forsyth county relative to negroes going through that county. I have no criticism to make of Forsyth county, and I know that there are just as good people living in that county as live anywhere; and from some of the letters, that I have read in your paper from people living in that county, would indicate that there had never been anything wrong done in Forsyth county. I want to give you an experience that I had.

Tuesday afternoon, July 7, I was coming from Dahlonega to Atlanta, and had in my car my wife and four children, the youngest of which is only a year old, and a negro nurse. We were running along fine until two or three miles north of Cummings, where we passed a group of some 12 or 15 men. I mean men and not boys. They were on the left-hand side of the road coming to Atlanta, under a woodshed or wellshed or something of the kind. Just as we got opposite them, several of them jumped to their feet and one of the men pointed a double-barrelled shotgun directly at my car. What his intentions were, I do not know; but there is one thing I am certain of; if I had had a gun in my car, I am sure I would have endeavored to protect myself and family.

I am thoroughly in sympathy with Forsyth county, as I would be with any other county, in trying to protect it from bootleggers; but I certainly do not believe that anyone has the right to say that a negro cannot go through that county.

I am of the opinion that if the better citizens of that county do not take some action toward trying to curb a bunch of roughnecks like those fellows were, then they need not expect anything except criticism and trouble in that county. I think I know what my constitutional rights are; and if I ever happen to go through that county again and cannot get the proper kind of protection, then the people there cannot expect anything else than for me to protect myself.

Why Poland Expelled the Germans

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

The persistence and growing bitterness of the crisis provoked by the expulsion by the Poles of German residents of Upper Silesia, who in the plebiscite three years ago voted for German sovereignty, has evoked many American comments, not a few of which have been based upon sentimental rather than critical grounds. It is obviously nothing less than a tragedy to see thousands of people suddenly driven forth from the land in which they were born and the conditions which have attended the enforced migration have added to the horror. Moreover, used as we are in America to the peaceful association of many European races come here to establish themselves, the whole episode seems barbaric.

Yet the facts are rather different from the superficial appearance and, bad as the method of expulsion may appear, it is still a matter of debate whether in the long run it may not prove where possible the simplest solution for one of the most difficult of world problems. In the present Polish instance the situation is clear. In the plebiscite of three years ago taken in all of upper Silesia, the vote favored Germany by approximately seven to five, but the north went solidly German and the south equally solidly Polish, while in the great industrial region of the center there was only a slight German preponderance. In accordance with the provisions of the treaty of Versailles and after long disputes, the territory was divided under the decision of a commission named by the league of nations and Poland received the south, Pleas and Rybnik counties, which has voted for Poland and a portion of the center, including the cities of Konigshutte and Cattowitz, which had voted for Germany. Thus Poland acquired a considerable German population, which had indicated its desire to remain German.

This German population was grouped in cities and about industrial establishments and, while it had been relatively long settled in Silesia, was nevertheless the result of immigration, for the native population has been since the beginning of history Slavic. These Germans had come and settled after Prussian conquest and they had been responsible for the great industrial development of the last century, but they were notwithstanding quite as foreign as, for example, the Scandinavian influx which has peopled much of the American northwest.

Failed to Fuse.

Unlike our immigrants, however, they had declined to fuse with the native race or, rather, they regarded the Poles as our immigrants regarded the native Indians. Supported by the central Prussian government, they exercised political control. But with the return of Polish rule after nearly seven centuries, they found themselves not only a minority but, having voted to retain German rule, liable to expulsion under the terms of the general settlement. The legal right of the Polish government to expel them was presently upheld by the league of nations, itself.

Despite this legal right, however, not a little American comment has dealt severely with Poland, arguing that the part of wisdom and humanity demanded that there should be no expulsion and a policy of reconciliation, not severity, would have been better. This is, however, to ignore certain facts. Germany on her side has never recognized as final or right the loss of Upper Silesia and steadily reaffirms her purpose to regain it. In the present negotiations over a guarantee pact with France she has declined to give similar assurances for her eastern frontiers. Poland is therefore on notice that Germany means to reclaim Upper Silesia.

This German purpose has two consequences. In the first place, the German residents have no temptation to yield to the situation of the hour and become loyal Polish citizens. In the second place, they constitute a permanent danger as they serve not alone as a basis for German manipulation but also a pretext for German propaganda. While there is a large German population in Polish Upper Silesia, the agitation for reunion in Germany will continue and, in case of war, Polish security would be compromised by this alien and hostile element.

But the Upper Silesian question is only a detail in the far broader German-Polish dispute which covers all the border land from the Baltic to the headwaters of the Oder, from Danzig to Cattowitz. Here for ten centuries the German and Slavic races have not only been in contact but as the tides have ebbed and flowed the races have become intermingled. There was a time when the Slav frontier was west of Berlin and there was a moment in the period of greatest power of the Teutonic knights when German rule was pushed far to the east of the existing line. As the treaty makers at Versailles discovered in 1919, it is quite impossible to draw a frontier which would separate the two races.

But before the war the German frontier had been pushed very deeply into undeniably Polish territory and several millions of Poles in West Prussia, Posen and Silesia were German subjects. They had been deprived of national and racial independence by the odious partitions of the earlier century and they were subjected to a long regime of tyranny which culminated in the effort to replace them on the land by enforced expropriation, one of the most brutal of the Bismarckian policies. In all this frontier region the Germans were in the minority, although they had settled largely in the cities and in a few scattered country districts about the cities.

The treaty of Versailles did not undertake to return to Poland her ancient frontiers; it limited itself by seeking to give the Poles the districts in which there was a clear Polish majority, although this naturally involved transferring to Polish sovereignty many enclaves with a German majority, districts in which the people were German and obviously hostile to the Polish annexation.

As a consequence, when west Prussia, Posen, Upper Silesia and other border districts returned to Poland there was an immediate emigration of many thousands of Germans, a migration which was partly voluntary and partly enforced. Since the German masters had treated the Poles with utmost harshness, they could expect little consideration. Yet this emigration was discouraged by the German government, which saw in the removal of this German element the elimination of an argument and an aid to reconquest. So in due time the Germans began to seek to remain and the Poles adopted a more or less settled policy of expulsion.

Alsace-Lorraine Precedent.

In the case of the Germans of Upper Silesia, the Germans are handicapped by having to admit the precedent of Alsace-Lorraine, where their annexation in 1871 was followed by a similar migration of the inhabitants who had elected to remain French citizens, some 200,000 abandoning their homes, and in some cases, in Metz, even taking up the dead from the cemeteries that they might lie in French soil.

The German-Polish situation was still further aggravated by the enduring bad blood between the governments and the multiplicity of disputes. Not only did the Germans refuse to recognize as definite the loss of the lands ceded to Poland but in a number of cases they carried on a policy of pinpricks which led to Polish reprisal. Perhaps one might more exactly say that both governments were equally responsible for the enduring friction, although the Polish was innocent of any design to annex more German territory.

The latest episode, the failure to agree upon a tariff adjustment and the consequent tariff war, which closed the German market to Upper Silesian coal and iron, was followed so nearly by the expulsion affair as to suggest reprisal, yet this is denied in Warsaw. Be this as it may, not only are many thousands of Germans now affected, but since the making of peace seven years ago upwards of a million Germans have left Polish lands and it is hardly to be denied that Polish policy would welcome the departure of the last Teuton.

German reprisal cannot be very effective because, while there are a certain number of Poles left in the present German territory, they are almost without exception industrial workers without any real roots; moreover, most of the population, once very numerous in the Ruhr, has already gone on to France and settled in the devastated area, where there are now whole villages with only Polish inhabitants.

Germany thus sees a systematic uprooting of the German elements all along her eastern boundary and thus the diminution of her chance to recover these lands. It is not true that the Polish action has increased the Polish danger of German attack, because there never has been at any time any chance of German acceptance of the loss of West Prussia and Upper Silesia or toleration of the separation of Danzig under the free city arrangement. But the whole expulsion episode has led to an explosion of German resentment and serves to emphasize the enduring danger in the east of Europe.

Conditions Disclosed.

But, after all, what is most significant for Americans in the whole affair is the underlying European condition which it discloses. Not only is there a Polo-German situation in the Vistula and Oder lands, but there is a German-Czech situation in Czecho-Slovakia, and where there is a German minority of 3,500,000, at least a quarters of the whole population, and occupying solidly many frontier districts. This population, which is hostile to the Czechs and eager to escape to German rule, constitutes a grave danger and the Czechs on their side have adopted a policy of enforced Slavicisation, which has been quite as disturbing in Berlin.

As long as there is a German minority in Czecho-Slovakia, the unity and security of the new state are menaced, but there the policy of expulsion is unavailable and that of denationalization the only possible substitute. But it as certanly makes for international unrest and just as German policy envisages the reconquest of the lost eastern provinces, it contemplates some course of action to protect the Germanic character of the large Teuton minorities in Bohemia and Moravia.

The German question in Poland and Czecho-Slovakia is, too, matched by both German and Hungarian questions in Rumania and by a Hungarian question in Czecho-Slovakia. In Rumania the frontiers were drawn at Paris to include nearly a million Hungarians who lived in enclaves within the area assigned to Rumania. Theoretically their protection was provided in the treaty, but actually they constitute a permanent danger, since Hungary continues to plan to reconquer these lost areas and her race brethren in them beckon with ever increasing earnestness.

A policy of expulsion has been in progress here for seven years and many hundreds of thousands of Magyars have been forced or persuaded to quit Transylvania, the Banat and other areas adjoining Hungary, and return to the already crowded Magyar state. The Germans, who could hardly be driven out to return to a land their ancestors left many centuries ago, have been subjected to a process of denationalization which has aroused bitter but futile German protests.

If the Germans of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia and the Magyars of Rumania were willing to accept Slav or Latin rule loyally, to consent to absorption by the majority, the expulsion policy would be at once indefensible in humanity and stupid in practice, but this is not the case and it is wholly unlikely that the Teuton and Magyar, believing themselves members of a superior race, could ever be brought to this capitulation. Indeed it is just as unreasonable to expect these minorities to consent to denationalize themselves as to expect the majorities to tolerate their continued and ever dangerous presence.

Renunciation Necessary.

If Hungary would consent to accept her territorial losses to Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia as permanent, the situation of the Magyar minorities in these states would be totally changed and the justification for harsh methods as well as the temptation to use them would disappear, but Hungary will not do this. If Germany would make a similar renunciation in the matter of cessions to Poland and abandon any pretension to protect German minorities in Czecho-Slovakia, the same would be true. But Germany will do nothing of the sort. Moreover, to expect this would be to expect something not only superhuman but quite beyond any American capacity.

If one could imagine that in the course of time the present emigrations, even though enforced, would lead to the disappearance of minorities and the creation of racially similar populations within political frontiers, the gain for peace would be obvious. On the whole, Greece has probably benefited by the renunciation of her Asiatic aspirations and the gain of the Hellenic population of Asia Minor. But the process is not capable of being carried to absolute results in many cases.

Nevertheless it is inevitable, and it seems certain to continue indefinitely. It is, after all, a phase of majority rule and we recognize the will of the majority to be absolute. It is a phase in the liberation of subject races which was the outstanding circumstance of the war results. It frequently does violence to preconceived notions of economic efficiency, since often the minority expelled is industrially the most highly trained element in the community, it invariably offends a sense of humanity because it imposes hardships and suffering.

Nor does it lie in American mouths to censure Poland, Czecho-Slovakia or Rumania since our insistence upon the hundred per cent Americanism of our fellow citizens is notorious. On the other hand our sympathy for the American minority in Mexico, for example, should go far to explain the feelings of the German and the Magyar, with the added circumstance that their brethren are being persecuted in a land which was long German or Magyar and whose loss they have never voluntarily resigned themselves to accept as permanent.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Anne Parrish, the successful winner of the second Harper prize, wrote the charming story, "A Pocketful of Poses," which made her many friends among the literary readers.

Harper's is an old and well established publishing house which holds its clientele from year to year with the same tenacity of an old and rare friendship, and for the past few years it has, since moving into its new home, put on new life and color which is being appreciated and discussed not only by the old friends but the new. There have been prize awards, novel contests and the publication of some of the best books of select fiction as well as miscellaneous books that have found their way not only to the library table but to the library's book shelf.

Last year Margaret Wilson was awarded Harper's first prize for her story, "The Able McLaughlins;" she also won the Pulitzer prize. And now Anne Parrish is the winner of the second Harper prize with her story entitled "The Perennial Bachelor" which mirrors a bygone period. It is indeed a story of evolution describing the customs of the times from 1850 to the present time.

The present day readers are always anxious for a biographical sketch of the author. They are not satisfied to read the story and simply be able to tell the author's name; they now want to study the author, to learn why she wrote the book, what she based it on, and even the circumstances under which she was inspired to write it.

Anne Parrish, author of "The Perennial Bachelor," was born in Colorado, where she spent her early childhood, later her family moved to Delaware and it was here that she spent her girlhood, and the story is to a large extent laid in her old home town where her mother still resides. About five years ago she decided she would write a story along this line, a subject which is the central figure of almost every town. The story of an old bachelor who danced and played the devoted beau to her mother and then when she made her debut he was equally attentive, and this popular bachelor is still going to parties and dancing with each season's debutantes.

While on a visit to her old home they were discussing his social career, the author asking "wonder why he never married?" Her mother replied, "Why, because he is a perennial bachelor." So this was her inspiration to write about this one, who is one of a thousand perennial bachelors.

"Where did you get your material for the background of this charming story?" she was asked. "By spending most of my time for several years in searching through attics and museums, perusing old journals and letters, not forgetting Godey's and Peterson's Lady Books, Old Friendship Albums, etc. So when I began writing the story I had all my data in hand and there was very little to do outside of weaving it all into a story. I just revelled in it. I never enjoyed anything any more in my life than I did the glorious days I spent in writing about Victor Campion. I worked all day through the summer and fall, not finishing the story until November, and when it had gone through the mill of revision I sent it to Harper's, and now I am so happy that I have won the prize!"

Anne Parrish is the wife of Charles A. Corliss, her home being in New York and at Englewood, N. J. She received the wireless while making a Mediterranean cruise that she had won the prize, to which she replied, "When your wireless came I was in the middle of a deck sports tournament. You can imagine how widely my rings fell about as I tried to finish the game as if nothing had happened. I feel as if fireworks were going on inside of me!"

The readers of this human interest story, whose publication date is August 25, will be loud in their praises of the charming young woman whose picture appears at the top of this column and the prediction is already assured of its wide popularity, for no society, whether in Delaware or Georgia, is complete without the attractive and most likable perennial bachelor. (Harper & Brothers.)

ANNE PARRISH.

Author of "The Perennial Bachelor," winner of the Harper $2,000 prize novel competition.

But Tom Norwood of the third generation and father of Rod, who was one of the most successful fur traders, and whose love of the great northwest adds a great deal to the life of the story; Sharman, the mysterious missionary, who in some way finds himself being gradually drawn towards "The Spider's" web, and Bapinini, a tool of "The Spider," and who is called the "Laughing Man," not because he is a happy looking man, but because of a scar that twists his face into a repulsive man, are the other characters around whom the story is woven. (Reilly & Lee Co., Chicago.)

The Pleasure Buyers. By Arthur Somers Roche, author of "A More Honorable Man," etc. The whole story can be told in the setting which is given: "The scene—a little winter pleasure resort in Florida—Palm Beach. The characters are made up of wealthy eastern people who have made this place a popular playground. The plot is a mystery. The villain, for there are even villains in Florida, is named Bassenas. The heroine, Helen Ripley, a young and innocent girl, soon learns that it is best to shun even the appearance of evil."

There is plenty of Florida romance, many humorous episodes add to its interest, and "there are many unexpected twists in the thread" as the story travels rapidly toward the solution of the mystery which seemingly remains a mystery to the end. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

The Monarch. By Pierre Mille, translated from the French by Faith Chipperfield. The author, who is well known in France—having been mentioned as a possible successor to the place of Anatole France in the French academy. This is the first of his works to be reproduced in America.

It is a whimsical tale of the back country of Provence that in many respects rivals "Tartarin of Tarascon." The hero in this really delightful story is called "The Monarch" because of his style of living, how he won a rich widow, how he borrowed a great estate in which to entertain her relatives, how he won a famous riding wager and many other amusing incidents are mentioned in such a clever manner as to fill a whole evening with plenty of entertainment. (Greenberg, Publisher, Inc., New York.)

NEW BOOKS.

Sand Dunes and Salt Marshes. By Dr. Charles Wendell Townsend, who is widely known as an authority on the habits of the birds which are characteristics of his chosen field, says Ralph Hoffman in his introduction. Dr. Townsend has written many interesting and valuable books which have been attractively illustrated from photographs. (L. C. Page & Co., Boston.)

Boy Guidance. A course in Catholic boy leadership. Outlined and edited by Rev. Kilian Hennrich, O. M. Cap. Preface by Very Rev. Michael Ripple. It contains several illustrations which will attract boys. The volume is confined to the training and character development of boys. The two contributors are well known and Catholic parents and teachers of schools will find it to be of real value in organization work, etc. The subjects are those which are the most vital in the training of the young boy, all of which is discussed through the Catholic viewpoint.

The Soul's Sincere Desire. By Dr. Glenn Clark, which was published as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly one year ago, is now a handsome little volume containing a message so true and so beautiful that it should be read by everyone. Under the title "In Appreciation" among the kind words expressed are the following: "But deserving gratitude above all the rest, a gratitude can never be repaid in words, is that silent band of men and women of many churches and many creeds, whose prayers have been a mighty force in bringing into manifestation Truth more exalted than the voice of him who utters it, and Light greater than the lamp that sends it forth." (The Atlantic Monthly Press, Boston.)

The Man Nobody Knows. By Bruce Barton, son of the eminent minister, Dr. William E. Barton, of Oak Park, Ill. The son, like the father, has won a large circle of friends among the literary stars as well as among his readers who appreciate his book, "What Shall It Profit a Man." (Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

THE HISTORY OF FAMOUS POEMS.

Henry E. Harman, of Atlanta, whose books of poetry which have added to his popularity as a man and a writer of verse, has contributed a collection of Brief Stories of Famous Songs, telling how and why they were written.

The writer has divided his collection so as to make it more attractive to the reader. For instance under "The Singer and His Song" is "Lead Kindly Light," one of the most beautiful songs ever written. Few people know perhaps that it was written by Dr. Henry Newman, of London, who was educated at Oxford, England, joined the Catholic church in 1879, and in less than thirty years afterwards he was invited to Rome to receive the cardinal's hat. No song has ever been more impressive or served its purpose better than "Lead Kindly Light."

And there's "Dixie," which has become world-wide—many claims have been made to its authorship, but Dan Emmett has gone down in history as the writer of the thrilling poem.

Mr. Harman gives the titles and the story of the leading patriotic songs of the country—all of which are familiar with the readers of the United States. "Songs of Memory" has no more popular selection than Burns' "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot"—

Among other old and popular songs which will be sung to the end of time are "Annie Laurie," "Old Kentucky Home," "Swanee River," "Old Black Joe" which will never lose any of their tenderness and pathos.

Then Mr. Harman skips a period and comes down to the present day with a lovely little compliment to the author of "Mighty Lak a Rose," Frank L. Stanton, which is so full of love and tenderness that it is being sung all over the world, the songs of this loved Georgia singer having been translated into several different languages. "The Grapevine Swing," by Dr. Samuel Minturn Peck "out of which he has builded his monument," will live forever, like the other beautiful poems which have been set to music and to which the writer pays a most loving tribute. (Industrial Press Publishing Co., Atlanta.)

HARPER'S NEW MAGAZINE.

While this is not exactly an advertising campaign for Harper & Brothers, the September number will be its seventy-fifth anniversary number, and while it is to remain as the old reliable magazine, it is to be published under a new program. The new cover has been designed by the famous type expert, W. A. Dwiggins, of Boston—there will be more diversity in the fiction and articles and the editorial policy will meet with the approval of its readers.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who is very much in the limelight at the present time, will edit a monthly department called "Religion and Life," and Christopher Morley's new novel, "Thunder on the Left," will please.

Harper's Magazine stands at the head of the list of the oldest monthly magazines in America, and for this reason it realized, with many other magazines, that the day of evolution had arrived, so simultaneously with the evolution of American literature as a whole, the announcement comes that Harper has been through the mill of evolution, which will be fully realized by those who were among its subscribers in 1850, and who will thoroughly enjoy the statement made under the title "A Word at the Start."

If space did not forbid the story of the evolution of "periodical writing" would be given and for this reason we are jumping over the "New England philosophizing and Puritan romance." The following information will interest the readers: "The new generation of short story writers began in the late sixties, the seventies and eighties when the development of local color in the stories was the style. At which time the south became romantic, the Appalachians picturesque, the Rockies virile, New England tragic and New York sophisticated. Among the popular writers were: Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Edward Everett Hale, George W. Cable, Charles Egbert Craddock, Sarah Orne Jewett, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman; then Richard Harding Davis, H. C. Bunner, Stephen Crane, James Lane Allen, Thomas Nelson Page, Owen Wister, Margaret Deland, W. D. Howells—the succession is unbroken to the writers of today."

The September issue of Harper's Magazine, while not confined entirely to American writers, for the following are among the number whose contributions have been selected:

Chistopher Morley, Wilbur Daniel Steele, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Gamaliel Bradford, Katharine Fullerton Gerould, Oswald Garrison Villard, and one Canadian author, Stephen Leacock.

Bertrand Russell, Rebecca West and Huxley are among the English writers whose stories will be read with interest, as they are well known in America.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

One of Atlanta's most charming writers, we refer to the author of "The Roses of St. Elizabeth," a little book which was published some years ago by Mrs. Jane Scott Woodruff, has received a very complimentary letter from her publishing house, the substance of the letter being as follows:

"You may be interested to know that the reason for the reissue of your little book this spring is that it has always been a favorite with Mr. Page. He has considered its reissue for several years. The publishers unhesitatingly recommend it as being in every way comparable in its charm, appeal and ethical value with such books as 'The Little Colonel' and 'Anne of the Green Gables.' L. C. Page Co."

Penelope Goes West.

Dorothea Castlehun, author of "House in the Golden Orchard" (the third Penelope book), writes her publishers that the new story about "Penelope" is almost finished and that its setting is laid on the western instead of the eastern coast. "I don't know how my readers will like the change from Maine to California," writes Miss Castlehun, "but if they only like it as well as I do, everything will be fine!" Miss Castelhun has been for some months a resident of Carmel, Cal., the center of a colony of artists and writers, where she has done some work in a bookshop besides continuing to write herself.

A New Romance By Gallizier.

L. C. Page & Co. announce that their 1926 list will include a new romance by Nathan Gallizier, well-known for his colorful novels with historical settings. "The Red Confessor" is the title of his new book, a story of Rome during the sixteenth century. The publication of "The Red Confessor" will be awaited with interest in France as well as in America, for both the Latin Academy and the Academy for International History in Paris have awarded Mr. Gallizier their gold medals and diplomas.

Baby Peggy's Burglar.

Just issued is a new edition of that childhood classic "Editha's Burglar." The greatest attraction about this new edition is that it is illustrated with delightful pictures of Baby Peggy's photoplay interpretation of Editha. Baby Peggy as "the little girl in a white frilled nightgown" is a winsome addition to a book already beloved.

The Return of Honor Bright.

Honor Bright, the lovable new heroine introduced to young readers by Laura E. Richards' last book, has just made her appearance in a new volume, called "Honor Bright's New her "fairy godmother," Mrs. Damian. Adventure." There is an interesting plot to the new story, most of which is laid in Bermuda, and an exciting new adventure indeed, for Honor and Announce Margaret Wilson's New Novel.

One of the first and most important fall publications on the Harper list is "The Kenworthys," by Margaret Wilson, whose novel, "The Able McLaughlins," won the Harper prize novel competition for 1923 and the Pulitzer award. "The Kenworthys" is not, like "The Able McLaughlins," a novel of frontier life. The characters are modern, although their lives are as brave and tempestuous as the pioneers' of Miss Wilson's earlier novel. "The Kenworthys" was published on the 14th of August.

When Irving Bacheller married Mrs. Mary E. Sollace one of his literary friends said, "Ah, now there is Sollace for a Bacheller!" True, but we wonder if "Father Abraham" gave his approval. (Bobbs-Merrill.)

Edith Wharton's novel, "The Mother's Recompense," is a best seller both in this country and in England. Permission has just been given for its inclusion in the famous Tauchnitz library. (Appleton's.)

A Second Uncle Tom's Cabin.

A clergyman in Irvington, N. J., reports that as a result of some of his flock reading Dorothy Walworth Carman's novel about a young minister's struggle, "Faith of Our Fathers," the Ladies' Aid society of his church has refurnished the parsonage.

Better Homes Leader And Workers Praised By Secretary Hoover

Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman of the Better Homes committee, recently received a letter from Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, of the United States, congratulating her and members of the committee for "well-merited winning of first prize in the 1925 Better Homes Demonstration campaign."

Mr. Hoover stated that the demonstration put on by the Atlanta Better Homes committee was adapted to the needs of an unusual large proportion of the population. In addition to the principal house that was built, equipped and furnished so attractively and economically, the inclusion of a home for negroes, under direction of a negro committee, and of quarters with particular attention to the problem of the immigration citizens, were excellent features, the secretary stated.

"In Atlanta you have made a genuine contribution to the advancement and its sympathetic diffusion among the people, Mr. Hoover concluded.

Question of Unification Faces General Conference

(The following is submitted by and published at the request of the Association for the Preservation of Southern Methodism):

BY G. M. EAKES.

In the New Orleans Christian Advocate, issue of April 23, 1925, there appeared an article headed "Catechism on Unification By Friends of Unification." In this catechism there were the two following questions and answers:

Question—What is required to adopt it? (The plan).

Answer—The law of the churches requires only that the general conferences of both churches adopt it, but both general conferences ask that the annual conferences indorse their action.

Question—How is this proved?

Answer—The supreme court of the United States, when appealed to soon after the division in 1844, validated the division, ruling that there was no appeal valid in law against the action of the general conference.

In the last July issue of that same paper I directed attention to this catechism and these two questions with their issue, and warned the church of the danger that lurks within them. This article was also published in The Atlanta Journal, and in several of our church papers.

Bitter Complaints.

Since the publication of my reply to the catechism, I have received several letters from friends of unification, complaining bitterly at the injustice they think I have done them. But so far as I have been able to see, no reply has been attempted in the papers, except the article sponsored by the friends of unification in the north Georgia conference and written by one of their leaders, the Rev. W. P. King, of Gainesville, Ga. This article was published in last Sunday's Atlanta Journal, and The Constitution.

Knowing the writer of this article as I do, I am somewhat surprised at his contemptuousness toward the hundreds of thousands of Southern Methodists who compose the Association to Preserve the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. My reviews of the catechism must have given his broad-minded tolerance a very severe shock, or perhaps he believes in other people being broad-minded and tolerant, himself excluded as is often true. But I am not concerned with his strictures on the Association to Preserve the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He has a right to think and say what he pleases about the folks who have made him the splendid man he is.

His article deals rather sharply with the writer of the paper which reviews the catechism in question. He is welcome to all that. It relieves him, it amuses me. He has my permission to go just as far as he likes.

There are just two sentences in Dr. King's article that deserve to be noticed, and here they are: "I suppose I am in a position to know the minds of the leading advocates of unification, at least as well as the friends of the opposition. I challenge any one to name one man who favors such an absurd and impossible procedure."

Reply to Challenge.

It is with the greatest pleasure that I submit the following facts to my readers. Facts which have come into my hands from various sources, and which prove conclusively that many of the friends of unification not only favor the absurd procedure set out in the catechism but they are working industriously to attain it.

In the first place, the catechism in question, with its clear declaration that the general conference has a right to unite the two churches of American Methodists without reference to the annual conferences, signed by "Friends of Unification," published April 23, 1925; was never repudiated by one of them until after my review of it appeared. Private letters declare it grossly misrepresents their organization, but it did not draw a disclaimer from that large organization, until my article appeared. If an organization to which I belong was grossly misrepresented, and under the name of the organization, I would, at least, protect the organization's good name. A silent consent was given to the teaching of the catechism until the review was published.

In the Central Christian Advocate of May 14, 1925, edited by Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, in Kansas City, the editor has the following placed most conspicuously in his paper:

A Question—The question has no bearing whatever on the desirability of unification. The question has to do with the legal value of the referendum now being taken through the annual and lay electoral conferences on the proposed plan. We quote from a catechism being lavishly circulated through the south in favor of the plan. (Then follow the two questions and answers just as they are given at the beginning of this article). After which the editor continues. "we would like the opinion of our ecclesiastical jurists on the foregoing statement. Has the vote now being taken in the annual conferences no legal or decisive value?"

Cites Interpretation.

This interpretation of the catechism was published by one of the leading journals of the Methodist Episcopal church on May 14, but so far as I have been able to discover no friend of unification has attempted a correction or disowned the teaching.

In The Christian Advocate (Nashville) under date of June 5, 1925, there is an article entitled "The Consummation of Unification." Let me ask my readers to find in their file The Christian Advocate of that date and read the whole article. Space will allow me to quote only small portions of it, as follows: "A question not involving the constitution is not to be referred to the annual conferences for ratification. The unification of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South is not a constitutional question." Further on in his article he says again, "The reference of unification to the annual conferences of the two churches was an act ultra vires on the part of both general conferences. It is conceivable, and indeed is common, for courts to refer matters to a jury which the court itself must decide, desiring by this act the opinion of the jury, but the ultimate decision of the case is vested in the court. So here. As a matter of expediency the general conferences might refer this matter to the annual conferences for ratification, but the ultimate decision for or against unification is vested in the general conferences of the respective churches."

The quotations just given are from the pen of Dr. N. B. Williams, presiding elder of the Waycross district in the South Georgia conference. Dr. Williams has written extensively, advocating the plan of unification, and has been widely quoted as an authority on this subject. He certainly has the ability to say what he means, for these words are very clear and definite.

It is, of course, impossible for me to know how many friends of unification agree with the writers of the "Catechism" and with Dr. Williams, but certainly none of them have disagreed with them in any very public way.

Discusses Motive.

It is also impossible for me to know how many friends of unification there are who hold that the plan of unification is a constitutional measure, and must be approved by the constitutional vote of the annual conferences, who, nevertheless, hold that if the plan of unification is defeated in annual conferences, the general conference has a right by resolution to declare the two churches united under a new and independent movement. But there are undoubtedly some unification leaders who hold that view. Their correspondence with me, touching my former article, clearly implies that this is true.

And it is not amazing that this is true. If I am not mistaken the commission on unification made a favorable report to our general conference at Hot Springs in 1922 on the proposition made to us by the Methodist Episcopal church that both general conferences declare the churches united and work out differences in a convention later. That is quite true, I am sure. And I am equally sure that the general conference at Hot Springs, composed of the same men who met at Chattanooga later, developed strong support for this method of uniting the churches. This "absurd" procedure does not seem to be impossible. Indeed it seems to be quite possible. And unless the members of the annual conferences shall protect the church, so overwhelmingly against the plan of unification, by carefully selected delegates to the general conference, the possibility is a probability.

I have before me private letters, the sanctity of which I shall not violate, giving assurance with names and places, that this plan of uniting the two churches by general conference action is being openly advocated by unificationists in different parts of the church. In a company of representative men, less than a month ago, the unificationists were asked if they did not favor such general conference action. Three of the five said they did favor it, one was non-committal and one was opposed.

Politics Hinted.

Within the bounds of one of our annual conferences, less than a month since, according to what I believe to be reliable information, the Friends of Unification in that territory met for the purpose of getting out a ticket for the general conference of men who were of like faith with themselves. They declared themselves favorable to general conference action uniting the two churches, and favored that as a policy if the majority of those elected throughout the church were favorable to unification.

Here are some of the facts in my possession. I think the church is entitled to them. I shall be glad to pursue the subject further if those of the opposition desire it. I have no "axe to grind" and no "fence to keep up."

In conclusion, please let me say kindly to the brethren, this is no time to trot our quadrennial boys that have carried us safely through many a grandstand parade. We had just as well leave them in the stable. We have one issue before us, and one question to settle, and only one for the time being. That question is shall the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, continue its work and worship as a denomination in the Church of Christ, or shall it become an organic part of the Methodist Episcopal church. When we have answered that question, it will be early enough to trot out our quadrennial ponies for the delectation of the grandstand. The answer to the question is with the annual conference in the vote on the plan of unification and in the election of delegates to the general conference.

STATE TEXTILE MEN MEET HERE SEPT. 15

Several hundred textile men will meet in Atlanta on Tuesday, September 15, for the annual convention of the Textile Operating Executives of Georgia, it was announced Saturday by Robert W. Philip, associate editor of "Cotton," who is secretary-treasurer of the organization. The meeting will be at the Ansley hotel.

This association comprises the operating superintendents and department heads of the cotton mills of Georgia, and a number of visitors from adjoining states also will be present. The technical subjects of sizing and weaving will form the basis of the practical discussion, which will occupy practically the entire time.

A general chairman to succeed W. W. Arnold, Jr., of LaGrange; a vice general chairman to succeed L. L. Jones, of Canton, and a member of the executive committee will be elected. The morning session will open at 9:30 o'clock and will be given over to a weaving discussion, led by David W. Anderson, manager and superintendent, Pacolet Manufacturing company, New Holland, Ga. Especial attention will be given to economy and reduction of waste.

At 12:45 o'clock a "Dutch" luncheon will be served to the delegates, at which an interesting musical program will be presented.

The afternoon session will begin at 2 o'clock, which will be given over to sizing discussion under leadership of W. W. Arnold, Jr., who is general superintendent of five of the Fuller E. Callaway mills in Georgia. A questionnaire embodying major questions to be discussed has been submitted to each superintendent in Georgia, with request that answers be sent to the secretary to aid the committee in preparations for the meeting.

Elder W. M. Blackwell Resigns Church Here To Take Tampa Church

Elder Walter M. Blackwell, pastor of the Atlanta Primitive Baptist church for the past three and one-half years, has resigned and will preach his last sermon here Sunday. He will take up the work of a church in Tampa.

This church was established by Elder Blackwell a little over three years ago with a charter membership of only thirteen. The present membership is about 90, and members have succeeded in building the church building located on North Boulevard and St. Charles avenue.

Elder Blackwell will leave the last of the month for Tampa, Fla., where he is to establish a church and begin the work of erecting a church building, it is said.

SILLS AT HIS BEST IN 'THE KNOCKOUT' AT MET

The screen's greatest fighter—Milton Sills.

Sills' movie career has been just one fight after another the last few years. And in "The Knockout" he enacts the biggest physical encounter of his career, surpassing even that in "The Spoilers," which established a fight precedent in screen history.

As the fighting Sir Oliver Tressilian in "The Sea Hawk," Sills established himself definitely in the screen world as a portrayer of virile roles. He followed this with his forceful characterization of Major Craig in "As Man Desires." His fistic struggles in this picture were so realistic that he was laid up for a week. As the intrepid fighting Officer Jim in his first starring picture, "The Making of O'Malley," he fought his way through seven reels.

In his present picture, "The Knockout," Sills surpasses any of his former affrays, having John Kolb, a six-foot-seven-inch Titan as his opponent, battling furiously in the turbulent waters of a Canadian river during the break of a log jam. Sills was badly bruised and nursed a black eye for several days as a result of his hectic physical exertions in this fight.

"The Knockout"—an Earl Hudson screen version of M. D. C. Crawford's "The Comeback," is a story of romance and adventure. Lambert Hillyer directed and its cast includes Lorna Duveen, Jed Prouty, Claude King, John Philip Kolb, Harlan Knight and others.

The stage presentation will be the Seven Aces with Adolph Verdi at the piano. The Metropolitan News and usual Metropolitan short reel novelties will round out an attractive program.

Miss Lucile Beagle Is Nellie Sullivan Star On Rialto Prologue

If you were one of the hundreds who went to the Rialto theater last week and saw the first appearance of the Nellie Sullivan dancers in the colorful and tuneful stage productions, then you remember Miss Lucile Beagle.

Maybe not by name, but you remember her just the same. She was the rather tall, dark-haired girl, second from the right end. Ah, ha! We thought you would.

Miss Beagle, those who are in a position to know say, is one of the most promising young dancers in Atlanta. She is particularly adapted to Oriental settings and Oriental dances.

She is going to do one this week in the second stage production of the Sullivan dancers at the Rialto. Her slender figure and consummate grace make her doubly suitable for this bit.

George O'Hara.

George O'Hara is one of the distinctive figures in the crowd that surges around the wharf where the good ship "Three Brothers" is "docked." The young actor, who is playing an important role in "The Sea Beast" for Warner Brothers, has dressed for the occasion and the period costume of king blue broadcloth, with short coat, frilled shirt, patent leather sailor hat is most picturesque and becomes him well.

With the arrival in New York of Blanche Sweet to take the leading role, Robert Kane has launched production at the Cosmopolitan studios of the first of a series of pictures for First National. It is "Invisible Wounds," adapted from Frederick Palmer's novel of the same name, by Howard Higgin and Sada Cowan. In addition to Miss Sweet, the cast includes Ben Lyon, Holbrook Blinn, Clare Eames, Effie Shannon, Dorothy Cummings, George Cooper, Pedro de Cordova, Lucius Henderson and Diana Kane. Mr. Higgin is directing.

Richard Dix Stars 'The Lucky Devil' Howard's Feature

Speed, thrills and romance—all are contained, and then some, in "The Lucky Devil," latest vehicle of Richard Dix, handsome daredevil of the screen, that will be offered at the Howard theater this week as the big feature film attraction.

It is another of those hair-raising auto racing thrillers like Wallace Reid used to do so well, and the kind in which Dix, himself, has helped to establish his reputation in the last few years.

In brief, the story has to do with a young man who longs for something he hasn't got. That's Dix. He wants it so badly that, as things usually go, he got it in the end.

Dix, as Randy Farman, is a demonstrator of auto camping outfits. He falls in love with the beautiful car that is in the department store window. Oh! how he wanted that automobile.

Then came his big chance. A car similar to that one was being raffled off at a charity bazar. It took a good gambler to play the game, but he invested half of his savings on chances on that car. And he won it.

And that's where the real story begins. There's plenty of speed and action on after that, particularly in the big racing scene of the picture in which many of the country's best racing drivers actually took part.

It is a fact that Dix, who enacts the part of one of the drivers, drove his car every foot of the way along the race; was in every spill himself in which he is pictured. He's not one of the kind to let someone else do his work for him, especially if there's the element of chance and danger in it.

Supporting Dix in this splendid thriller are Esther Ralston, Edna May Oliver, Tom Findley, Anthony Jowitt, "Gunboat" Smith and many other well-known favorites of the silver sheet.

You'll like the "Lucky Devil" because it is different. You'll laugh a-plenty, too, for there's a fine thread of humor running through this picture.

In addition to the feature picture, the Howard stock company will present another excellent stage production with Byron Warner, director of Warner's Howard orchestra; Miss Virginia Futrelle, soprano; Miss Olive Hill, danseuse, and members of the ballet seen at their best.

Richard Barthelmess, who is a navy "gob" in "Shore Leave" and a boy of the tenaments in "The Beautiful City," will be a prince on the order of England's popular heir to the throne in his next First National starring vehicle, "Just Suppose." And when it is recalled that Dick was a Chinaman in "Broken Blossoms," a backwoodsman of the Kentucky hills in "Tol'able David," a broken down war veteran in "The Enchanted Cottage," and a castaway in "Soul Fire," it must be admitted that he is indeed a most versatile young actor.

LINCOLN'S BEST BOOK IN FILM AT RIALTO

A constellation of popular stars glitters on the stage and screen of the Rialto theater this week in the presentation of another greater movie season program which embraces three headline numbers and surpasses any effort ever put on in the theater, according to the opinion of Manager Murray.

"Rugged Water," the feature photoplay, features Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery and beautiful Phyllis Haver in a romance-drama of the life-saving service, produced by Paramount from Joseph C. Lincoln's best seller.

Miss Nellie Sullivan, who has long been one of the leading figures in the south as a dancing teacher and producer of stage attractions, has been engaged to stage another revue at the Rialto, because of the tremendous hit scored by the revue produced there by her last week. Miss Sullivan this week will again present Misses Lucile Amaker, Paula DeVoll, Pansy Watson and Shirley Small in a new series of dance and song numbers, with especial attention this week to striking stage settings and scenery.

Miss Sullivan, with a full week of rehearsals, has devised a partiularly beautiful bathing scene.

Carl LaFell's orchestra, also held over for another week because of their success of last, will again support Miss Sullivan's revue with music and offer a popular musical program.

Other attractions will be "Sneezing Beezers," a Sennett comedy, and Pathe News.

No walk of life is more fraught with drama or danger than that of the United States Life-Saving service on treacherous Cape Cod. Every thrill experienced by the courageous men who daily gamble their own lives against the fury of the elements in an effort to save other lives is depicted in "Rugged Water," the Rialto's feature picture.

In the screen story Warner Baxter expects, as No. 1 man of the Setuckit life-saving station, to succeed the retiring captain, but politics result in the appointment of a man from another station, Wallace Beery, who arrives with his daughter, Lois Wilson, upbraids the crew for no reason at all, insults Baxter and gets himself disliked generally.

Baxter's rapidly developing interest in Lois Wilson causes him to remain at his post instead of resigning. When he rescues her from the incoming tide she begins to feel a deeper interest in him. He feels he cannot yet propose to her because, due to his lack of knowledge of women, he has permitted an ambition girl in the neighboring village to make him think he has proposed to her. She wants him to make Beery's work so hard for him he'll be fired for incompetency. But Baxter, chiefly because of Lois Wilson, protects the tyrannical captain's job.

"Rugged Water" was adapted by James Shelley Hamilton from Joseph C. Lincoln's novel of the same name. Miss Wilson, Baxter, Beery and Phyllis Haver are featured in the cast, which includes, among others, Dot Farley, James Mason, Willard Cooley, Jack Byron and Warren Rodgers.

Louise Fazenda.

Building up thoughts with bricks and mortar has been the occupation of Louise Fazenda who will soon be established in her new home in the Wilshire district. Thoughts have kept apace with the stroke of the hammer. There is a brightness about the new home that has a contagion. Every visitor whom the comedienne has taken to the place has remarked about it. There is a view that embraces the whole city. There is a something about it that the French call "elan."

When Louise commences her next picture she will issue forth from a home that expresses so charmingly her personality. Without are lovely trees, shrubs and flowers which she has planted. Within a wired enclosure is a little thatched house with cunning red chimney. Its owner is a golden haired cocker who looks as he had mortgaged the sun's rays. Happiness and sunshine everywhere—good stuff for the business of laughter!

NELLIE SULLIVAN'S REVUE AT RIALTO FEATURE PROLOGUE

Miss Nellie Sullivan's review prologue at the Rialto theater this week will include four of the most elaborately costumed and staged singing and dancing numbers ever attempted at this theater.

The five Atlanta girls, pupils of Miss Sullivan are Misses Paula DuVoll, Shirley Small, Frances Watson, Margaret Clemons, and Lucille Beagle.

Miss Frances Watson will be presented in a resplendently set-up eccentric dance.

Miss Beagle will appear in a lavish and graceful Oriental dance.

"Ukelele Ladies," latest song hit, will be presented by the group and staged under the personal direction of Miss Sullivan. Some of the most unique stage settings and effects ever designed will be employed in this number.

The whole group will appear again in a novelty finale.

The number will be presented with music by Carl LeFell's popular orchestra. The Rialto's feature picture will be "Rugged Water," with Lois Wilson, Wallace Beery, Warner Baxter.

ALICE JOYCE AT CAMEO IN "LITTLE FRENCH GIRL"

"What's Become of Sally?" Why she is in the movies now and this week she will be at the new Cameo theater for a mid-week engagement. This time Colleen Moore is the "Sally" that everyone will want to see and hear about. The stage production of "Sally" was Ziegfeld's greatest, it also proved Marillyn Miller's greatest vehicle. The same is true of the motion picture because Colleen Moore is at her very best, and with Leon Errol in the support of the dainty Colleen a treat is in store for all who come to the Cameo this Wednesday and Thursday.

Another instant hit is booked at this theater next week when "The Little French Girl" opens for a two-day engagement on Monday. Reading almost like a movie blue book is the cast, Alice Joyce, Mary Brian, Neil Hamilton and Esther Ralston. If you are one of the million readers of America's favorite novel by Anne Douglas Sedgwick you'll certainly want to see the picture. If you haven't read it, we promise you that this sensational novel of French morals and manners in which the plot centers around a fascinating French divorcee and her quietly beautiful young daughter, will prove one of the really absorbing stories of the present time. The picture was produced by Herbert Brennon of "Peter Pan" fame.

"Forty Winks," the Friday and Saturday feature is purely in fun, but it offers a real plot. It is a merry melofarce about a blundering Englishman who plays detective and uncovers a whole gang of crooks. Raymond Griffith, Paramount's new comedy star; Viola Dana and Theodore Roberts are the featured players. It has just one laugh in the picture, but it starts with the first scene and only ends with the final fadeout.

'SINNERS IN HEAVEN' PALACE PHOTOPLAY

"Sinners in Heaven," starring Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix, serves to open the current week's program of unusual film features scheduled at the Palace theater, Inman park. The picture, which will be shown Monday and Tuesday, tells the story of a man and a girl who are through fate wrecked on a tropical island off the coast of Africa. It is the screen version of the famous story of the same name by Clive Arden. The strong supporting cast includes Holmes Herbert, Montague Love, Effie Shannon, Florence Billins, Betty Hilburn and Marcia Harris.

The love of romance and adventure, possessed by all persons no matter how placid they may appear on the surface, will find an outlet in "The Isle of Lost Ships," which is said to hold the record for the number of thrills and unusual situations it contains, which will be the attraction Wednesday. Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Frank Campeau and Walter Long are the featured players.

"The Reckless Age," starring Reginald Denny, which will be shown Thursday and Friday, is an adaptation of "Love Insurance," a novel by Earl Derr Biggers in which the true whimsical humor of life is the chief element.

The popular freckled-faced star, Wesley Barry, will be seen Saturday in "Battling Bunion" his latest and most amusing feature.

Valentino Buys Italian Villa.

Rudolph Valentino has bought an Italian villa in Beverly Hills, near Hollywood. It is surrounded by nine acres of ground and is one of the highest spots in the section. It overlooks Pickfair, the estate of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin's mansion, and also the famous Spanish rancho of the late Thomas H. Ince. Frances Marion, Fred Thompson and Fred Niblo also own acreage in the same region and will build magnificent homes.

Davis Haney, general manager of George R. Reed, Inc., in announcing the purchase yesterday, stated the price was in the neighborhood of $100,000.

The house has just been completed. The landscaping and outside improvements will be carried out under the star's direction. The most startling of these will be an airplane landing field, for which extra acreage was purchased. The star believes it to be a matter of short time when it will be possible to travel to and from the studio by air. This will make the high hills as accessible as the valleys and the ideal location for palatial homes.

Rudy will move his stables from Griffith Park to the Beverly Hills place. He will also build a swimming pool and tennis court.

The residence is white and has 11 rooms. One enters a large living room with a full-length plate-glass window commanding a view through the entire valley of Hollywood, Los Angeles and Catalina Island. Immediately below is a canyon filled with sycamores, oaks and wild flowers.

Large fireplaces are in the living room and library. The floors are of teak wood. Rustic paths with log steps wind through native shrubs to delightful summer houses.

Valentino will transfer his furnishings from his New York apartment, and his Whitley Heights home in Hollywood to the new estate. He will not move immediately, however, as he is just starting "The Black Eagle," his first United Artists production, and as he wants to finish the landscaping on the new place first.

Back of the purchase of this Italian villa is a romance as vivid as any the star ever enacted on the screen. Valentino came to America 12 years ago, poor and unknown. For years he endured dire hardship. When he got his big chance in "The Four Horsemen" he rose to dizzy heights of fame and has been steadily advancing ever since.

Carl Miller.

Carl Miller is one of those versatile actors who is constantly varying his line of work. When he first began his screen work he was always the romantic hero. Then came "The Woman of Paris" when the role he played was that of a penniless young artist who killed himself for unrequited love. With "The Redeeming Sin," in which he supported Nazimova, he was the rich, young Parisian, man-about-town, blase and philanderling. It was his work in this production that showed him in so different a light that he appeared the ideal person for the fat part he is now playing in "We Moderns," with Colleen Moore for First National. Polished, suave, the sophisticate he plays will undoubtedly establish him in this kind of characterization, so popular with the fans today.

Earl Hudson, who supervised the filming of the Watterson Rothacker-First National production, "The Lost World," says he had more trouble getting a small kitten to act in the early scenes than he had later with a prehistoric brontosaurus bigger than ten elephants.

'PRETTY LADIES' BIG MOVIE AT LOEW'S

The fourth week of the "Greater Movie Season" will be celebrated at Loew's Grand this week by the notable production, "Pretty Ladies," a picture which delineates all the exotic excitement of Broadway night life with an all-star cast of players, including a chorus of 50 girls.

The authoress of "Pretty Ladies" is Adela Rogers St. Johns, of whom it must be said that she "knows her Broadway" even better than she knows the Hollywood which has served as an indestructible background for the numerous magazine stories she has had widely published of late.

"Pretty Ladies," too, saw the color of magazine print before the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company singled it out for picturization on the ground that it is the most incisive, most typical of all the voluminous records, realistic or fictitious, on the street called Broadway. Alice D. G. Miller wrote the screen version.

Further evidence of the fact that "Pretty Ladies" fairly breathes and exudes Broadway life is the famous characters which Miss St. Johns has made part of her story or, rather, around whom she wove her story. Such personages as Ann Pennington (played by the ebullient Ann herself), Frances White (impersonated by Norma Shearer), Will Rogers, Grisco, Gallagher and Shean and Eddie Cantor, give to the photoplay a stamp of realism never before attempted. Even if you have never known the difference between a hoofer and a heifer, you will not remain in darkness long when the leading satellites of Broadway's Who's Who begin their lifelike parade before you.

The man directionally responsible for "Pretty Ladies" is Monta Bell, and it is said by movie dignitaries that while Mr. Bell has distinguished himself as a remarkable director in the past he is certain to be looked upon as something more than that when his latest production has begun to run its public course.

The featured roles of Maggie Keenan, star comedienne of the "Divinities of 1925," and Al Cassidy, the drum player-jazz composer, have respectively been entrusted to ZaSu Pitts and Tom Moore.

The story, in brief, is devoted to more of a bit of Broadway truth than it is to its poetry. Maggie is the kind of a girl who can "steal" a show but who cannot in her simple way of living attract one-tenth the masculine attentions of a Follies beauty. She is miserable in her loneliness until she undertakes to help Al Cassidy, a drum player who is struggling to write a "hit." From there on even sophisticated Broadwayites will be interested in the proceedings.

NOLA ST. CLAIR TOPS KEITH'S VAUDEVILLE

"The Road to Starland," a fantasy with music and laughter, featuring Nola St. Clair will be offered at Keith's Forsyth theater all this week as the headlining feature of another excellent program of big-time vaudeville.

Starland is the Arcadia of the theater. The road to it is steep and winding and full of obstacles. Here is material for the whimsical mind to weave into fantasy. And here is where Nola St. Clair and her company take full advantage of it.

It is a clever idea with lilting music and bright lyrics with dialogues and situations providing real humor and wit. Nola St. Clair is well known in both branches of the theater. She has been seen in several vaudeville acts and has done much clever work on the legitimate stage.

In her present vehicle she is supported by William Godall, Elton Calkins, Armand Patzer and the Wheeler sisters. No better act in vaudeville has been presented here in a long time than "The Road to Starland."

Marshall Montgomery, extraordinary ventriloquist, will appear on the program as an added attraction. Marshall Montgomery is considered the world's greatest ventriloquist, offering feats never before attempted by any of his contemporary artists. His performance includes novel features and sensational touches.

Also the program includes as a special feature Sherrie Matthews in "Personality Plus."

Here the old adage "like father like son" should be changed to "like father like daughter." A generation ago the theater knew no more popular star than Sherrie Matthews of Matthews and Bolger fame. His daughter has inherited his name as well as his talent. She is a chip off the old block. She is pretty and wholesome and is a thoroughly likeable girl.

Another act on the program will be Jarrow, the humorous trickster. Jarrow is a sleight of hand performer. He demonstrates conclusively that optics are sluggish and bungling compared to the mobility of his fingers and hands.

Hazel Moran introduced the "cow-girl" to vaudeville. She throws a mean lariat and with it she keeps up a sure-fire line of wit. In other words she is the Will Rogers girl of vaudeville.

A Pathe newsreel and a Felix Cat comedy complete the bill.

PARACHUTE ARTISTS JUMP AT LAKEWOOD

Free movies tonight and every night during the week, a balloon ascension, parachute drop, band concert, rides, dancing and picnics will feature Lakewood's entertainment program for the coming week.

Two feature free movies will be shown tonight, starting at 7 o'clock and a free moving picture will be shown every night during the week with a change of program daily. Several feature pictures have been billed for the coming week.

Exum's parachute artists will give another daredevil exhibition of leaping from a balloon by means of a parachute this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the midway just below the shooting gallery. The balloon will be filled on the midway and spectators will have an opportunity to see the big balloon while it is being filled with hot air.

There will be a two-hour free band concert this afternoon with Clint Barber in charge. The band concert will start at 3:30 o'clock.

Dancing every night except Sunday will be one of the bright features for Lakewood park during the coming week.

Parking space for more than 600 automobiles is available.

Alfred Green, director of "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter," and many other highly successful screen productions, has been signed to direct Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone in Sawyer-Lubin's next First National picture, "Spanish Sunlight," to be made in California. The director's most recent accomplishment was "The Talker," with an all-star cast, including Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson.

A pirate sequence in natural color will be a feature of George Fitzmaurice's screen version of "The Dark Angel," First National picture sponsored by Samuel Goldwyn and presenting Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky. Hungarian film "find," in the leading roles.

SIX BIG FEATURES ON HOWARD PROLOGUE

The third week's presentation by the Howard Stock company should far eclipse previous ones in point of scenic and costumic beauty; in production finesse and snappy and tuneful numbers, for, according to the management, the loose ends have been whipped together and it is now a completely organized and permanent feature of the program.

No effort has been spared in perfecting details for this week's offering. New sets, brilliant in coloring and effect have been made and a musical score worthy of any musical revue is in waiting for the Howard patrons.

One of the big features of the show will be "The Rose Girl Waltz," put on by Byron Warner and his Howard "Hot Cakes" band, with Olive Hill, premier danseuse of the company, and the entire ensemble of Howard girls.

Mr. Warner has an individual way of putting his selections over and he has put all of his resourcefulness into this number.

"When I Think of You" will be sung by Miss Virginia Futrelle, soprano, whose vocal ability is most highly regarded not only by Howard patrons, but by those who saw and heard her during her association with the Hippodrome in New York.

And in addition to these numbers the program will include:

The Howard girls in a novelty number, entitled "Something Different."

Another novelty number by Miss Olive Hill by herself.

Byron Warner and his Howard "Hot Cakes" band, playing "Meditation," by Thais, with violin solo by Harry Pomar and "Row, Row, Rosie."

And then the grand finale, "Happy," led by Miss Futrelle and staged by the entire company.

Screen's Greatest Actor.

Who is the screen's greatest actor?

The ever-interesting question has been revived among critics and players with the designation of Ramon Novarro as the Booth of the screen by Eugene V. Brewster, editor and publisher.

Pola Negri some time ago proclaimed Novarro the greatest actor, naming John Barrymore and Valentino as second and third.

Barrymore, who won the Valentino medal for the best performance of last year, is an enthusiastic supporter of Adolphe Menjou, rating him the finest actor with Chaplin coming second.

Novarro, who was heralded first as a genius by Rex Ingram, is equally enthusiastic in behalf of Emil Jannings, pointing to "Passion," "Deception" and "The Last Laugh" as histrionic genius.

Herbert Howe, the critic, who is another staunch Novarro supporter, points out that screen artists may be divided into two groups; one represented by Menjou and Chaplin, playing variations on the same character with divine touch; the other, represented by Novarro, Jannings and Barrymore, who serve as receiving sets for characters out of all time and space.

Jannings came into fame in this country as the king in "Passion," following it with Henry VIII in "Deception," and winning critical acclaim more recently as the doorman in "The Last Laugh."

Barrymore never had any great film distinction until he appeared as Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Beau Brummel was his next role of consequence.

Novarro flashed into immediate prominence in his first role, that of the Austrian Rupert in "The Prisoner of Zenda." Then followed the South Sea Island youth in "Where the Pavement Ends;" the dashing French hero, Scaramouche; the wily and witty Arab dragoman of "The Arab;" the Apache of the Paris gutters in "The Red Lily." Two more distinctive characters are now being created by him, that of Ben Hur, prince of Jerusalem, in "Ben Hur," and an up-to-date American youth in "The Midshipman."

This apparently puts Novarro in line with Jannings as an interpreter of infinite variety.

The most marked tendency in regard to star popularity, say the critics, is in the matter of characterization. Formerly it was held that a star to be popular must always play the hero, who always was himself. To assume a beard or other disguise was regarded as fatal.

The style in stars has changed. Today character men hold the place of worship, and we find even a handsome youth of the Novarro mold eschewing the matinee idol class by going in for characterization.

LIBRARY LITERARY NOTES

BY CLYDE PETTUS, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

HAPPY HAVENS.

In time-honored Lancaster's world praise there is too much of the reasoning of necessity to reassure those in need of encouragement; for, in saying sanguine things about the omnipresent eye of heaven, he is evidently making the best of a bad business. His testimony in the matter of ports and happy havens is a piece of special pleading inseparable from spontaneous tribute to the charms of the universe.

Quite the contrary is the case of C. E. Montague, who, as one can judge from the zestful pages of "The Right Place," is indeed in the holiday humor necessary to the writing of a chronicle suitably subtitled "A Book of Pleasures." His world, like that of the Gypsy Petulengro, holds a fair share of "sun, moon and stars, brother—all sweet things"—and is as cheerful a place as solitary walks and city streets, green fields and asphalt can make it for a spirit sufficiently broad awake to have no need of Stevenson's petitioned pointed pleasure. His is the penetrating eye that finds beauty in Birmingham as well as Lausanne, and sees history—if not sermons—in stone along the London road.

A place, as Mr. Montague defines it, is no more than a series of emotions stirred by passing through a portion of space; the space and the beholder collaborating in results differing from one another in glory. The inarticulate will create their places to their private satisfaction (or dissatisfaction) while nature's fairy tales in partnership with a vocabulary may result in a Sussex coast seen through the spectacles of Mr. Kipling enjoying his fair land tremendously after a sojourn in India; or a tract of Yorkshire moor blossoming like the rose before the yearning eyes of Emily Bronte. All of the places that Mr. Montague describes—in most beautiful king's English—are the Alps and the Pennines and the Manchester-London high road plus Mr. Montague. For the significant thing is that if we go forth to see for ourselves the Swiss mountains and the English hills and a road that is colored geologically, decorated architecturally and enlivened human-interestedly, we shall find the picture fading to the extent of the less receptive personality following the plus.

The overture to "The Right Place" suggests Elia's essay on the approach of the new year, when "a jolly candidate for 1821" expresses himself as in love with this green earth. Mr. Montague likewise makes "undiplomatic admissions of full satisfaction" with a boyhood by the Thames and the Isis and a youth of dawns and sunsets in the earth's high places. He would not forego his share in the life with which Aurora Leigh grudgingly makes her peace. To him the only trouble is that time is too short to hold so much elation, and ghosts do not a-journeying go.

The manner in which the quest of "The Right Place" is conducted is the work of an epicurean traveller who knows the fine points of maps. Not the ABC's of maps only, with colored peaks and valleys, nor even the old hill-shaded masterpieces of the engraver's art. The true map-reader is satisfied with no less than the best work of those men whose glacier contour lines cost them nights in sleeping-sacks on the snow, whose impersonal records are the result of steps cut in ice slopes and instruments carried with difficulty through mountain storms. With such a map nothing is easier than the preparation for a longed-for journey—you know what may be seen from Snowden—you can follow every mile from Lucerne to Milan and if, such mental furnishing forth accomplished, you find it more convenient to remain at home, your mind will have enjoyed healthful vacation exercise and your bank account be in no wise depleted.

Mr. Montague's comments along the way are not entirely gladsome. He remarks that there are 'aromatists' among travelers, forever endeavoring to put storied ruins between the wind and their nobility. He has a bone to pick with feudal England (though gently as befits differences with the dying) and is severe with those to the manor born, with men who build country houses in London, and persons who call Leeds ugly. An occasional keen-edged phrase recalls the irony of "Disenchantment" which a few of us characterized as "another war book" and avoided reading until a spark from "Fiery Particles" kindled a retroactive interest. Looking quite through the deeds of men in wartime France is not so different a process from watching a world go by in days of peace, and Mr. Montague carries both to the point of pungent comment, with one amusing result. In chapter 14 the little burst of moral precept that has been hovering in the background asserts itself against its author's will. So three pages of ethics are added to the number on economics, architecture, mountain views and joy of life.

"What it all comes to"—though one could wish the arrival deferred for many more chapters of travelling hopefully—is the assurance of a multitude of right places. For one it may be within sight of the giant cables of Brooklyn bridge; for another, a country lane where the dogwood blooms. But it is a safe conclusion that Mr. Montague's map is most surely in tune in "Little England."

Del Lord.

Del Lord has made so many thrillers that only those brave souls come to his call of "camera" without batting an eyelash. About two years ago Mr. Lord directed Louise Fazenda in "Cold Chills," an educational comedy, with the comedienne in the old-time makeup. She knew his reputation of old, for both had grown up at Sennett's. At the end of the third day when all had gone well Louise came to him and said:

"My, Del, but I am so relieved. When I heard that you were to direct me, I saw myself in a cage of lions, hanging to the edge of a six-story building, driving a car over a cliff. Why I just couldn't sleep!"

The New Sky.

(F. G. H. in the Continental Edition of the London Mail.)

When first we see the new sky the sight nearly takes our breath away. Sky where sky never was before! For a while it seems the most wonderful peep of blue ever seen. And yet we tell ourselves it is but the housebreakers who have revealed it, the busy army of men who are cutting a way so that the Boulevard des Italiens and the Boulevard Haussmann may meet.

For all this argument for the commonplace we always look for this space of heaven's blue at the end of the long boulevard. We treasure it as something won, something lost and found again; but there is more in it than that. We watch the changing aspects of this little piece of new sky, see it sometimes calm and blue, sometimes swept with storm clouds, or lit at night with the glow of the blazing boulevard we cannot see. And then we think that in a little while the boulevard itself, will be revealed. The energy of it all, this cutting through the great cliff walls of houses and then to find—the sky!

An American woman has made a good sized fortune in introducing hot cakes with Vermont syrup in London.

Americanitis---Its Cause and Cure

(The following is issued by the committee on church cooperation:)

This rather expressive word, not yet admitted to the dictionary, is usually employed with a flavor of humor to indicate the bumptius foibles of an exaggerated patriotism as exhibited by some types of our citizenry.

From the angle of a physician, a Chicago doctor in a recent article has given the word definite meaning and content. To him it is a disease; sinister, contagious, malignant. Not a matter of humor, but of health and happiness, peace and prosperity, life or death. For him its symptoms are restlessness, anxiety, premature ageing, high blood pressure, paralysis, appoplexy—death.

Causes enumerated are inherited tendency to nervousness, uncontrolled emotional nature, a search for thrills; the lurid, spectacular, and startling, as seen in the whirl of modern society with its rivalries, parties, dances, and unseasonable hours. He declares the man who is tense, high strung, of a restless and driving disposition; and the woman who is irritable, restless, fidgety, and eternally in search of new thrills, are a type distinctly American.

Cure Suggested.

As a cure he suggests avoidance of contributing causes enumerated above, training from the cradle in the art of self-control, ability to live contentedly with oneself, and in reasonable harmony with the world and the laws of life under which Mother Nature gave him being.

Long ago Paul entreated people to live quiet, tranquil lives, with perfect piety; proving religion to be of value in every way in this life and the life hereafter.

The Great Teacher sought the quiet of wood and mountain, and the rest and repose of church and Sabbath. He knew so well the secret of normal life, that in three years, without unseemly hurry or waste of nervous energy, he could say truthfully he had finished his work. He was a model in mental poise, physical fitness, efficient labor, moral regnancy, and spiritual perfection.

Christianity is interested in the body as well as the soul. The church is Christianity organized for service. In our mad haste it invites us to come apart awhile for rest and prayer. It helps us back to our normal selves after the stress and grind of the week. A religious atmosphere doeth good like a medicine.

Jurists sometimes sentence offenders to church attendance. Such a judgment has high personal value and is no longer regarded as a grandstand performance. Aside from its moral value it is a tonic for body and mind. Many of our ills are traceable directly or indirectly to the restless pace at which we go either in business or pleasure or both. It is disintegrating the family and the church. A revival of church going will conserve nervous energy, and promote mental rest and physical vigor. To rule our own lives is a greater achievement than to take a city. Church attendance on Sunday will take much of the blue out of Monday.

A recent cartoon pictures a church with a hole in the roof and a man, called Indifference, stealing the attendants away. Indifference is a human quality. Only people can exhibit it. Neither heat nor cold, nor call of outdoors, nor sermons good nor bad can empty pews; only people can do that. That such a thief is operating in the churches of Atlanta, empty pews within and multitudes smitten with Americanitis without bear adequate testimony. Barred doors and a tyler's sword offer us no defense.

Day Is Designated.

In an effort to stimulate attendance the churches of Atlanta will observe September 20 as Go-To-Church Sunday. In Christ's name they invite every citizen to attend some church that day. We must replace the imp of Indifference by the angel of Interest. To enjoy and profit by a Christian civilization without lending it sympathetic and active support is essentially and morally dishonest. To destroy one's body is tragedy, but spiritual suicide is infinitely worse.

Few churches in the city could accommodate their membership if all should attend the same service. All our churches cannot comfortably seat one fourth our population. When these are habitually unfilled some idea is had of the small percentage who attend with any degree of regularity.

We publish to the world that we are a great city and growing greater. That our growth and prosperity are as solid as Stone mountain. Jesus said a house built on the sand will fall. Let Atlanta grow and build, but take heed how it builds. One who was only casually interested in the growth of cities, but tremendously interested in the growth of civilization and the Kingdom of God said, "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Christ; for one day every building will be tried as by fire, whether it be good or bad."

"THIEF OF BAGDAD" AT ALAMO NO. 2 THIS WEEK

It is evident when Douglas Fairbanks produced "The Thief of Bagdad," which will be shown at Alamo No. 2 beginning Monday he had in mind to making the apparently impossible an accomplished fact. In every city where this picture has been shown the same strain has been: "I wonder how he does it." "Is that possible in reality?" etc.

When the redoubtable Doug clambers up a rope that is suspended in thin air, one begins to take notice; then he dives to the bottom of the water, kills an under sea monster and when his sub-oceanic business is finished, he clamly propels himself to the surface.

He enters an enchanted woods, where a tall tree, at the wave of hand, comes to life and walks about with uncanny disrespect to all the accepted ideas of tree conduct.

Later in the picture, the Thief climbs a flight of a thousand steps that lead to the clouds and mounts a beautiful winged horse that gracefully flies away with Doug on his back. By now, you are ready to believe that anything is possible and when, as a climax, you see Doug and the princess step upon a magic carpet, it seems quite proper for the rug, of its own volition to rise up and sail out of the window, circle the house-tops of Bagdad amidst the plaudits of the multitude, and disappear with its human freight across the rising moon.

The magic introduced into this film is so unusual that it would seem likely the dominating interest, but very wisely Douglas keeps every subservient to the story and the beautiful romance of the Thief and the princess is both compelling and dramatic, with a well balanced mixture of thrills and surprises.

The management, in presenting this remarkable film to Atlantans at popular prices for the first time, will adhere to its well-established policy of offering the usual children's matinee each morning during the showing of the picture, when an admission of only 10 cents will be charged to its juvenile patrons. The film will be shown from Monday to Friday inclusive.

BIG VAUDEVILLE ACTS FEATURE LOEW'S BILL

All types of singing and dancing ranging from the Russian classic to the bowery walk-arounds will be featured on the new bill which opens Monday at Loew's Grand theater and which is headed by the famous Russian Master Singers. All five of the acts present musical numbers or dances and all are of a widely varied character.

Harmony singing of the highest class is offered by the Russian Master Singers, who have arranged a program which contains the sweetest melodies of many lands as well as the latest popular American song hits. Four men and one woman are in the turn and all have voices which blend together perfectly. Russian songs long have been noted for their adaptation to harmony programs and the Russian Master Singers will render several of the classics which have been standard hits for years. The act also will be brightened by many dances of the Russian type as well as modern dances.

Sharing honors with the headliner, according to advance notices, will be "Wigginsville," a funny playlet presented by three girls and two men. Several catchy and tuneful musical numbers interrupt the action of the comedy from time to time.

One of the most popular novelty offerings of the year will be "Toyland Frolics" which is in the hands of a capable comedian and three attractive girl co-workers. Singing and dancing along with piano and violin numbers will be featured.

Two popular comedians Lubin and Lowrie, will provide much of the fun on the new bill. They are singers and dancers and bring a fresh array of new jokes and gags. The Loew organization has been digging up some real comedians recently and they have been scoring big hits in Atlanta. Lubin and Lowrie are said to be the top notchers among the new comers.

Bell and LeClair, one of the old favorite teams, will come with their "tough" comedy which also is featured by singing and dancing.

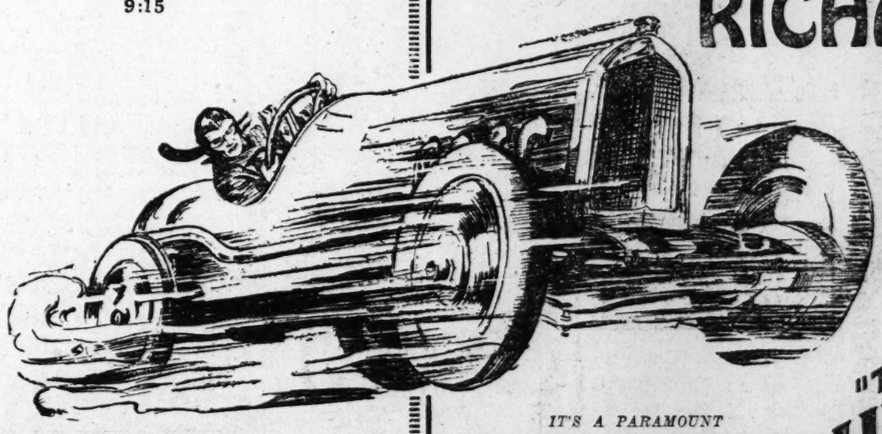

"Pretty Ladies," produced by Monta Bell, will be the Loew feature picture for the week.

Norma Talmadge is, for the time being at least, forsaking the sweet, devoted characterizations of her recent mother roles. In "Paris After Dark," which will follow "Graustark" to the screen as a First National release with the capable star, she will be seen as an impudent spitfire, an idol of the Apaches of the Montmartre.

LULLWATER SHIRT STORY IS RELATED IN UNIQUE FORM

Platt Young, Atlanta Writer, Tells in Interesting Style the History of Well-Known Shirt.

BY PLATT YOUNG.

Let folding silks to queenly thrones still cling, 'tis cotton rules as one perpetual king, whose constant reign proves clear the perfect plan that Mother Earth shall clothe and nourish man. From seed to harvest, Georgia's reddened clay the cotton plant doth nourish all the way, till raised in virgin whiteness through the dirt unfolds a tale descriptive of the shirt.

Lullwater shirts, from cotton boll to you, are made of chambray, dyed a service blue; three piles of cloth are multiples of might that strengthen collar, make it fit aright, and from initial use insure for you such ease and comfort as is justly due.

Its double rows of stitching help to light a field of blue with threads of purest white. In every seam whose strength is might and main are reinforcements, added strength to gain.

Each garment's fashioned full that freedom may invest the wearer with all needed play. Five natty buttons, fixed and permanent, give finished touch with pearly luster blent, while every feature of designer's art Lullwater shirts portray in major part, which makes them fit for service or for play—for earnest work or whiling hours away.

Glimpse of Shirt.

A glimpse of how Lullwater shirts are made is pictured here (from actual scenes portrayed), that those possessing curiosity may comprehend this tale in fancy free and get a greater vision, larger part of weaver's magic and of maker's art.

A bale of cotton weighing quarter ton, unloaded and unbanded, then undone, by skillful hands is fed to great machine which fans and separates, preserves the clean, and then delivers it in heaps and rows pure white and spotless as the winter snows.

A large revolving vat next greets the eye, well filled with standard grade of bluest dye, in charge of men whose color lore shall deck the storied sciences of Georgia Tech, who watch the dyeing process to its end that each successive lot shall ever blend in harmony with what has passed review to keep the product uniform in hue.

When all this mass becomes completely dried in long machine with fever heat inside, in fluffiness like mingled flow and ebb, 'tis then converted to a lengthened web. The card machines with industry and buzz reduce this web to filament of fuzz and then deliver in continued twist a coil one-half the thickness of your wrist.

Delicate Methods.

This rope or coil is now reduced in size, stepped down from thick to thinner ere your eyes can scarce detect the swiftness of the change. With each machine three sizes in its range, from spool and spindle on its way it goes until sustaining thread its marvel shows.

This thread, which forms the warp, is wrapped around revolving rolls, from many spools unwound, and every strand soon finds its proper place with keen precision as its gathers pace. These rolls are passed along to weaving room and quick respond to action of the loom. The woof is fed from spindles left and right across the warp, then woven fast and tight, behold the cloth from which Lullwater shirts are fashioned in their standard lengths and girts!

This chambray now, reflecting azure skies, is measured out in bolts of standard size, thence to long tables in the cutting room is forwarded this product of the loom, where master hands, with pattern tools in rhyme, are cutting shirts in dozens at a time.

Lullwater shirts, from cotton boll to you, are ready now to stitch and finish, too. In modern room which makers show with pride, is every modern method to provide for light and sanitation, comfort, ease, all blended with a keen desire to please.

Trained Workers.

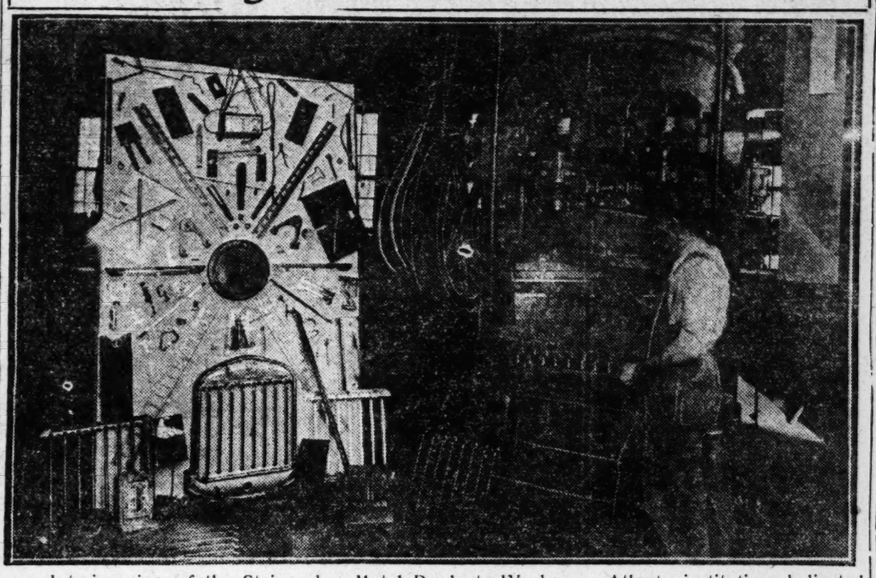

Here nimble fingers, trained in action free, are ever plying with dexterity the parts assigned—each knows of maker's claim to build a garment worthy of its name, and so maintains with tireless energy Lullwater's standards of supremacy.

No prison labor here, but man and maid with care selected for the part portrayed. Machines in vast profusion, great array, are special made to work Lullwater way, assuring you results of highest class in manufactured products for the mass.

With lightening swiftness, blended here with art, Lullwater shirts in part and counterpart are now completed, stacked in mammoth pile—a unity in workmanship and style, reflecting reign of cotton all the way and quick conversion from its bed of clay to clothe mankind, to give that service due the product of the cotton boll to you.

When shirts are sized and sorted, folded, pressed, attractive boxes house as welcome guest till all responsive corners of the earth shall learn full value of a dollar's worth.

Where Ideas Evolve Into Patented Parts - At Big Metal Products Works Here

Interior view of the Steingruber Metal Products Works, an Atlanta institution dedicated to the improvement and development of ingenious mechanical devices for textile manufacturers and automobile accessory houses. Mr. Steingruber is personally in charge of his production department and cooperates gladly with young inventors in Atlanta and from other parts of the south.

"Why go north?" is the question presented to the southern investors and mechanics by George Steingruber, proprietor of the Steingruber Metal Products Works, 116-A West Mitchell street, where his inventive genius is waving a magic wand of success over many a young and ambitious inventor's idea. Mr. Steingruber is regarded by those familiar with his work as gifted with an astonishing insight into the potential value of labor-saving devices as well as with a vision of the practical benefits which new devices promise humanity.

This is one of the few businesses of its kind in the south, taking rank among the important industrial enterprises of Atlanta because of the unusual high quality of perfection which characterizes its products. The business has been established for the past eight years and has been growing continuously from the very first day of its organization. Before this concern was established it was necessary to send to the extreme northeast. It was started in a comparatively small way, but the trade has grown until it now covers the south. The plant now consists of a large, three-story brick building of generous dimensions and equipped in a modern way with the latest machinery and special apparatus peculiar to this particular industry. The man at the head of affairs and sole proprietor, George Steingruber, is a man of twenty-one years' experience in the trade and understands its every detail. He devotes his whole time and personal attention to the work and at the same time gives employment to mechanics who are also experienced and have been chosen because of their special fitness and qualifications for the work.

Mr. Steingruber believes in quality first, last and all the time, and it has become generally understood that when a contract is turned over to him that it is executed with 100 per cent satisfaction to patrons, not only as regards best quality workmanship, but also best quality materials. Mr. Steingruber is loyal to every interest of Atlanta and believes this city is one of the finest in the world, with a brilliant future, and he is doing all he can to make the advantages of this city known far and wide. He is also well known fraternally, being a member of such orders as the Masons, Elks, etc.

Great Quantities of Willite Paving Being Used Here

During the past six years thousands of square yards of Willite pavement has been laid in the city of Atlanta. There is a distinctive difference betwgen Willite asphalt and other asphalt. It is easily explained, as follows, the old method is that called "penetration," the asphalt in the form of a thin oil, being squirted on top of the rock base and penetrated into it by water.

Willite is a mixed method, like cake or bread and is laid 1½ or 2 inches thick as a wearing surface. Also, by the Willite of toughening and tempering the mix, all the waves, pushing and rolling is eliminated. This allows the paving much longer life and creates a much smoother surface.

Ponce de Leon avenue has this method. This is probably one of the most important jobs ever let in Atlanta. Trinity avenue and many other Atlanta thoroughfares are either being laid with Willite now or will be in the near future.

A very interesting letter was received by Harry Goodhart, of the Willite-Southeast company, from G. H. Yancey, Jr., of Yancey Brothers, the big road building machinery people of Atlanta.

The letter follows:

"Dear Sir: Some time ago you were out to our office in the interest of Willite pavement and made the statement that your automobile would not skid on Willite. When you made this statement the writer really did not believe it, but figured that the first opportunity he had would see whether or not this statement was true.

"Several days ago I was going out to my father's residence on Piedmont avenue, and as it was raining very hard, I decided to go out Peachtree and turn into Fifteenth street, and, as you know, it is a downgrade on Fifteenth. I turned into Fifteenth driving about 15 miles per hour and put on my brakes and noticed that my car did not skid. I then speeded up to about 35 and slapped on the brakes and could not make the car skid. This test was repeated four times while on Fifteenth street and met with the same results.

"The writer has always believed that Willite was good pavement, and as skidding has always been the main objection to plain asphalt pavement. I cannot see why you should not be able to sell Willite on all pavement jobs in preference to any other kind."

Standard Tent, Awning Co. Launches Expansion Plans

President David T. Ricks, of the Standard Tent and Awning company of 192 Edgewood avenue, announces that his firm will open up a branch factory in Daytona, Fla., today.

Mr. Ricks decided upon Daytona as the best place for this branch in his line of business after making an extensive survey of the lower part of Florida.

Mr. Ricks stated Saturday that the Daytona plant will be a branch plant and that Atlanta would always be the headqurters for the Standard Tent and Awning company.

In speaking of their Atlanta plant Mr Ricks who is a very enthusiastic Atlanta booster, stated that no place in the civilized world is as favorable as Atlanta in their line.

In the first place he stated Atlanta was a large city in the heart of the cotton states with large mills within a radius of 200 miles that makes their cotton duck of the cotton grown in their vicinity giving Atlanta the advantage of getting lower freight rates and, as canvas goods are very heavy, this is a big advantage.

Then as Atlanta geographical location and splendid rail facilities are unsurpassable for all lines of manufacturing where the raw material is furnished in this section, we are just getting ready to do big things here, stated Mr. Ricks, who also stated that no Florida city could serve Muscle Shoals, Ala.; Paducah, Ky.; Harrisonburg, Va., or Raleigh, N. C., as well as Atlanta when they have to go 250 miles or more farther to serve them. On the other hand Chicago, Toledo or New York cannot serve the south as well as Atlanta can on account of the southern buyer having to pay charges on the raw material shipped north and the finished product after its manufacture.

The Daytona branch will be in charge of Vice President W. J. Thomas, who has lived in Florida often and on for many years and is familiar with the needs of all that may want anything in the canvas goods line from a circus tent to a camp chair.

The Edgewood avenue plant is a very busy place these days, much work being done for construction companies and individuals in new tents and tarpaulins; a good business is also being done in tourists' camps and furniture, this firm being recognized leaders in supplying the needs of the traveling automobile tourists.

WHERE EMANCIPATION BACKFIRED
President Kemel Pasha, of Turkey, with his wife, whom he divorced by simply issuing a statement in the form of a decree. When they were married two years ago, Kemel Pasha, at his wife's insistence, did much to emancipate Turkish women. Maybe that's what was the matter here.

I Was Fat
Now I Only Weigh 130 Pounds

Took off 50 Pounds in 8 Weeks
No diets, exercises, creams, dangerous drugs, or worthless reducing girdles
Read about "SAN-GRI-NA" latest French way to take off Fat—It's safe and lasting

"I did not have to go through strenuous exercises nor rub myself with absurd creams, which generally put on flesh instead of taking it off. I did not wear weakening garments, nor torture myself with diets. I was fortunate enough while in Europe to find out the secrets with which millionaires, French actresses and beautiful women of Paris keep their figures slender. Not only did I easily and gradually lose 50 pounds, but the reduction was lasting, as I have never gained a pound since stopping the treatment. I feel and look years younger, and my health has greatly improved with this wonderful discovery. No matter how fat you are, you may do just as I did, and easily lose a few pounds every week without any danger. Simply go to any good drug store, get a package of SAN-GRI-NA tablets (insist on these, as nothing like it has ever been offered before to the public), take it as per directions, and watch your weight go down. You can eat all you want while you take SAN-GRI-NA. IT IS GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS; the formula of a French physician, and is now recommended by leading American specialists and physicians as a safe and efficacious way to reduce.

On sale at any good Drug or Department Store. If your druggist does not carry SAN-GRI-NA in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C.

PARIS-FRANCE

By Mildred Cram

"You're awful kind. But don't you see, if you gave it to me, it wouldn't be mine. I've got to earn it."

The Story of a Girl Who Chose to Dream

THE citizen who named that little prairie town Paris had never been in France. Paris it was when the first double row of shacks straggled along the dusty high road, and Paris it remained when the shacks had given way to frame houses and brick blocks.

When the Reynoldses moved out from New Hampshire, Will Reynolds said to his wife, "This place will please you. Not a fancy exterior, but a frivolous name."

And he pinched her cheek, because he loved her. She was extravagant, silly, impractical, but he loved her. He was not aware of the incongruity of her costume—the bustled skirt, the tight silk bodice, the absurd little French hat. She minced at his side, and all Paris turned to stare. Never had the lanky, sunburned residents seen the like of her.

Will purchased a small house in Main street—not the Boulevard Haussmann. This was our own Paris, built upon the rolling prairie beneath a white sky. And Reynolds hung out a neat sign painted black and bearing in gold the announcement that William Reynolds, M. D.'s office hours were from twelve to one and from three to five.

The house was flush with the sidewalk, but had a garden in the rear, where a wilted tree gave a little shade and there was a patch of grass. Here, her ruffles and bustles spread upon a bench, her slippered feet elevated, Mrs. Reynolds dreamed she was in a French garden. She was "expecting," but her thoughts had a habit of dancing away from this fact. She could imagine herself wealthy, courted, triumphant, but she could not imagine herself a prairie mother.

"This is new country, Maisie," Will Reynolds would say. "Bound to be great some day. It's dull for you, but I prefer to grow with a new state, a new town. Pioneers! I dare say, when this place is civilized, I'll move on again. I don't like finished things. There's something sad in work that is done. Aren't you sorry you married me?"

This was in the seventies. Paris had no sidewalks save in the center of town, where boards had been laid in haphazard fashion before the bank, the hotel and the store. Two years later Main street was paved, and buggies from the country rattled smartly on asphalt for three miles.

Will Reynolds forgave Maisie for not being a good housekeeper. He was too sympathetic and too tolerant to be a physician, to live at all, as a matter of fact, in a world of pain. He argued to himself that a woman can't wear ribbons and bangles, and sweep and cook, can't have soft hands and wash dishes.

Most of the housework he did himself. "Now you run up to bed, Maisie. I'll finish the dishes."

There were no servants in Paris. A Mrs. Kenyon, tiny, wrinkled, emotional, came in once a week and scrubbed everything except the doctor's office. This room, cluttered and dusty, was always left to the last, and when Mrs. Kenyon appeared in the door, straining to lift a pail, gray with fatigue, Will would say, "Now, you run along home, Mrs. Kenyon. I'll do ...e office." But the office was never done. A litter of bottles obscured the shelves. Maps of the anatomy, pink and blue and terrifying, adorned the walls. His desk was placed in front of the window so that he might face his patients, who were allowed the comfort of a worn chair upholstered in horsehair.

HE was too busy to dream of the child that was coming. Whenever he remembered, as he did in moments of stress and worry, it was like a warm flood of feeling from his head to his toes. And the nearest he ever came to criticizing Maisie was to wish that she might take the facts of life more seriously. She seemed to skim over the surface of things. He wished that, now and then, she would be afraid, that she would cry in his arms, that she would show him, by needing him, that she was aware of the life in her keeping.

These was transient thoughts. He loved her. And he told himself that she was marvelously plucky.

Paris whispered that the new doctor's wife was expecting any day now. And then, before any one knew anything about it, Mrs. Reynolds was seen out for a drive prettier than ever, wearing one of the new pointed capes with ruffles, and carrying her baby wrapped in a pink blanket. It was just like her, people said, to be secretive about something that is everybody's business.

Maisie named her daughter Geraldine. Geraldine lay in the pink blanket, making those puckering, fleeting grimaces, those gum rubbings and bubblings precious to mothers. But Maisie was not interested. She was afraid that Will might have lost his romantic love for her, so she pressed her shoulder against his, smiled up into his face, dimpled and blushed for him, and let him see her profile. She knew that he adored her nose.

Geraldine beat her hands and blinked at the white, cloudless sky and, making a one-sided effort, yawned.

This was her debut in Paris. And she is the heroine of the story.

Maisie was on of those women who care more for their husbands than for their children, and, perhaps because of this, she resented Geraldine. The doctor, when he found time to make love to his daughter, did it surreptitiously—a kiss, a nudge of his blunt forefinger, a chuckle. Maisie was always there to jump upon his knee, to twine her arms around him and to nuzzle—he called it nuzzling—her face in his neck. "You love the baby more than you love me."

When she was five you saw she was destined to be either very plain or very lovely. She was solemn, sallow, and melancholy. Maisie dressed her in the plaids and velvets of the period, cut her black hair with a bang, and gave her pie plate hats with streamers. She was photographed thus, at five, against a background painted to represent Niagara Falls. She leaned upon a papier mache stump, and one foot was crossed over the other in the immemorial manner of Dion Boucicault.

She never played with other little girls, and gained the impression that she was either peculiar or superior. From Maisie she learned that she could epxect nothing from her father, who was too much in love with her mother to make a success of parenthood. Maisie implanted in the solemn, yellow child an inordinate love of finery, a longing for something indefinite called "life," and a conviction that she was destined, some day, to be great. When Geraldine was seven, she painted her first picture—a Venetian lagoon, a gondola, and a crescent moon.

Maisie bent over the table, cupping her chin in her hands, and said, "Wonderful! Perfectly beautiful! I always knew you'd be an artist. My father and mother wanted me to be an artist, but I married instead. I might have gone to Paris."

"Paris?"

"Not this Paris! Across the ocean. Paris, France. If I'd gone, I'd have been great. Like Rosa Bonheur. Or Angelica Kauffman. Women who became great. I had it in me. But I married your father."

"Why?"

MAISIE shut her eyes, and was shaken by a little ecstacy, a ripple of remembrance. "I loved him."

Geraldine went back to her painting, unable to comprehend. She had recently come into the possession of a drawing book—thick pages bound in canvas. A shiny box of water colors, prismatic cubes imbedded in porcelain, contained the mysterious ingredients with which, were she able, she might transfer her dreams to paper. She struggled with the medium. Her visions were all of palaces, stars, roses, fountains and grottos, marble balustrades and princesses. The sketch book was full of quaint and terrible translations of these dreams, and Geraldine knew the agony of one whose dreams are stillborn.

"She is going to be an artist," Maisie told Will. "We'll send her to Paris when she's sixteen."

"Paris!" The doctor laughed and pinched her cheek. Geraldine realized that Paris was some sort of joke. Perhaps her mother imagined this other Paris, France.

The Paris Geraldine knew was growing like a cabbage, sprawling over the hot prairie. In summer, the sky was hot blue, and yellow clouds hung low on the horizon, pulsing with fire, the fitful flickering of heat lightning. No rain fell. The streets were a swirl of dust. In winter the sky was fleckless, white, or lead gray, and snow fell like goose feathers, thick and warm. In spring the roads were deep with mud, but the prairie showed green and frogs sang in the ditches and birds flew up from the fields.

Main street, not the boulevard, had decked itself with those houses antedating the Chicago fair, elaborate, fretted, and turreted confections made with a jigsaw. Lawns, restrained by granite posts and cast iron chains, surrounded the courthouse, and a bed of salvia blazed before Judge Kennedy's place. In the park, the pride of Paris, a cannon, mounted upon a pedestal, squatted upon pyramids of cannon balls like a hen upon a nest.

Maisie, wearing a plaid dress buttoned from throat to hem with jet buttons, minced the length of Main street, Geraldine's fingers clung to the gloved fingers desperately. People stared at her mother. Her mother was too pretty. And something fanatical stirred in Geraldine. She wanted her mother to wear a gray apron and to do her hair in a wispy knot. She wanted her mother to pass unnoticed. She was jealous, and hurt and ashamed because people stared. Men shouldn't say, "Pretty woman!" after her mother had passed. Mothers had to be different.

When Geraldine was ten, a young man came to the house twice a week and showed her how to draw. He was an Italian, Maisie said, and his name was Rossi. He had long fingers and a small mouth and little white teeth. He held the pencil delicately, crooking his finger, as if he were trying to be elegant. "This is a perspective. You will notice a road. It is wide—so wide—in the foreground. But as it diminishes. it tapers off, until, at the horizon, it is no more than a pin point—so!"

Maisie would clasp her pretty, smooth, plump hands under her chin and, tipping her head to one side, would murmur: "Of course! If I could have studied. They said I had great talent."

Geraldine hated Rossi. She grew sullen, stupid, and did not seem to understand anything. With a flushed face, pouting, she sat as if turned to stone. She noticed that her mother wore amethyst earrings when Rossi came. They shook in her ears, little points of violet glitter.

And Geraldine, out of an obscure need to be understood, went to her father. He was in his office, stirring something in the mortar, and whistling. He was so healthy, so big, so sane, in that room given over to sick people, against that background of grewsome, colored plates. The head. The liver Man. Woman. The arteries.

"Well, Gerry?"

"Mother's wearing her earrings. And Mr. Rossi's here."

Her father went on whistling and stirring, squinting at the mixture in the mortar. His face twitched once or twice. After a while he said: "O," and, opening the door, he went quickly across the hall, just as he was.

Gerry heard him laughing in there, and Mr. Rossi said: "O, yes, much talent. Indeed!" The front door opened and closed, and her mother and father talked and talked. Gerry sat in the patients' chair, her eyes on a fascinating picture of a disemboweled man, and she was lulled by that murmur of voices. Then her father came in, with a curious, bright look in his eyes.

Her mother's eyes were red. "You little beast!" she said. "You jealous, hateful little beast, to tell him that!"

But her father said: "Don't scold her, Maisie! It's my fault. I'm not with you as much as I should be. Sick people. I'm so sorry for 'em! And I neglect you, whom I love more than all the world. You and Gerry. My girls! My babies!"

Gathering them up, he kissed them both.

Gerry was eleven when Maisie died.

The winter had been particularly hard, a winter of blizzards and implacable winds and frozen mud. The prairie was not beautiful; it was bleak, like an empty sea.

One night, in February, the doctor had been called to a farm ten miles from Paris where a man lay dying. Maisie had gone with him, wrapped in a buffalo coat, her hands tucked into a little, absurd sealskin muff. And a week later she had died of pneumonia.

Gerry was accustomed to her father's indifference. Only now it was deepened by grief and remorse. "I shouldn't have let her go! But she begged so!"

And Gerry cried herself to sleep night after night, because Maisie was gone. But at the same time she was glad Maisie was out of danger. Maisie belonged to them, now.

As Gerry grew up. Will bent over and crumpled and grew gray. His patients drove him, harassed and took advantage of him. 'I guess 'I won't go on with the pioneers. It's Nebraska now, and New Mexico, and Calfornia. Golly, how I'd like to smell the California sage! But I'm ossified. Grown into Paris like a dead tree."

After a while he began to notice Gerry. She was seventeen, now tall, thin, sallow, with a great bun of black hair at the back of her neck and sleeves like balloons. "Why, doggone it, Gerry, you're a young lady, and I never knew it! You'll be having a beau next!"

Gerry flushed. She was angry. "I should say not! I'm not at all interested in men. I'm going to be an artist. I'm going to Paris some day and study. Mother said I could."

Will's rambling attention focused, and for a moment he seemed to be in contact with a world he habitually avoided. 'Did she, now? Paris. France. That's a long way, Gerry."

"She promised I could go when I was sixteen. I'm seventeen."

The doctor rubbed his chin. "We'll go to Chicago. There's some sort of fair going on there. I reckon you can see as much art in Chicago as you ever could in Paris, France. Maybe more."

SO THEY went, the doctor absent minded and gentle, Gerry stiff with recognition of the marvel. The prairies seemed to roll back upon the horizon, as if spun upon a bobbin, and the plain gave way to suburbs, to crowded streets, to lights, noise, people, the glamorous lobby of a hotel banked with tubbed palms and starred with nickel plated spittoons. Then the exhibition grounds, the wheel, the Japanese gardens, the great, echoing, white halls, the plaster fountains and heroic statues and midways and pavilions. She was afraid of her emotion, afraid people might notice it, laugh at her. "Aren't you having a good time?" her father asked.

"Yes, very!"

A good time!

The sleeves of her poplin dress were like twin balloons and she wore a "tailored" straw hat. Her belt was pinned low in front with a twisted silver dragon, and she tried to bulge in the back to "scoop" like the women of fashion. For the first time she saw women in bloomers, thousands and thousands of them, riding bicycles in Jackson park, like wheeled butterflies.

And for the first time she came into contact with the beautiful, with symmetry, with color. She saw paintings, statues, fabrics, porcelains. What she could not understand she absorbed, like a sponge soaking up water. She accepted and admired everything, good, bad, and indifferent. She moved in a daze, a surfeit of feeling. And Will, browsing, thinking of his patients, knew nothing whatever about her. She wasn't pretty. She said little. Only her eyes were alight with some inner fire, so that they were like black diamonds, or quartz, hard and bright.

She was going to be a great artist.

They went back to Paris, to the hot prairie in mid-August.

Will said: 'Well, it looks pretty good, after all. I never could bear cities. People smother me. I guess I'm a born frontiersman. I'd never die of loneliness, but I'd perish in crowds."

Gerry got out her box of water color, sharpened her pencils, and painted her first masterpiece: "Roses in a blue vase."

The doctor dragged all of his friends into the front parlor, now Gerry's studio, to look at it. "Isn't it pretty? Real as life, now, isn't it? Every leaf and petal perfect."

Following this debut, Mr. Shultz, who edited the Paris Star, mentioned, "Our native daughter, poet of the brush, Geraldine Reynolds, pride of Paris, artistic genius has returned from the world's fair."

And thereafter Gerry went haloed with an invisible nimbus; she wore laurel. She painted flowers, sunsets, country roads, and church steeples—landscapes created from her imagination, evoked from a crooked memory of pictures. While all about her, the prairie shimmered in the sun and sultry cumuli heaped themselves upon the horizon, and farmers worked in the fields. She never saw them. She moved in a world of roses and marble balustrades, a world apart from plains patterned with the moving shadows of clouds. "Poet of the brush. Paris' child of genius." And she felt the weight of the invisible laurel on her hair.

When she was twenty, Joe Burch came to Paris. He had been farther west, but had turned back to the prairie because nowhere else in the world could he be himself. "O I've seen California, and the sea, and I've smelled the sage your father is always talking about, but I've never seen anything in California to touch the prairie. Why it's as wide as a man's heart and as deep as time and as changeable as a woman. Now, if I were you, Miss Gerry, I'd paint pictures of the prairie."

GERRY sniffed. They were sitting in Maisie's parlor, Gerry's studio. Upon a bamboo easel, Garry's latest canvas, to be presented to the Paris library, displayed an expanse of blue white snow, a gate, a steeple, and a crescent moon. Joe Burch always lounged, and one long leg was hooked over the other, so that a foot dangled and you saw the sole of an enormous shoe. He was the tallest man in Paris. He had thatched brows, a mop of hair and a big nose. Gerry always avoided his eyes because, somehow, they were too honest. There is such a thing as being too much in the sunlight, on the outside of things. Gerry preferred dreams to facts. She was working toward Paris, and immortality. She liked to pretend that she was chosen by destiny to remain always in ignorance of the brutal facts of life and death.

"Why not? Don't you like the prairie?"

"No," she said sharply, "it's crude."

"Crude." Joe Burch considered that word. Then he began to laugh, shaking his big shoulders that were made twice as big by a padded coat. "Well, now!"

Gerry flushed. She was almost pretty when she flushed. And Joe Burch was silenced by a sudden pity for her. With all that hair let down, she'd look like a little girl—but she had a mighty fine jaw! What she believed, she believed.

"Well, you come out riding with me some day, Miss Gerry, and I'll show you the prairie I mean. I've got five hundred acres. Some day I'll have a thousand."

She went with him because he would not be denied. He had a jaw of his own. And they drove in his gig behind a pair of pacers, straight up Main street and out into the country. Gerry felt as if some one had snatched off the laurels. The poet of the brush, driving with a man, a farmer. She glanced up at him, and a funny little shudder passed through her, because his skin was wrinkled and burned, his neck creased like a workingman's neck, between the line of his collar and the straight black hair, shingled.

"This is America," he said. "This belongs to you and me, to simple folks like us. We've made it. We've planted it. Some day we'll finish it. But I like it as it is. I run away from jobs that are done! I like to begin."

"And I like finished things," she said primly. "I belong in Paris, France. Some day, when you're plowing these fields, I'll be in Paris."

Suddenly he swept her into the circle of his arm and held her close, so close that she cried: "Don't! You're hurting me, Joe Burch!"

"Am I? Well, I mean to! You silly little woman, you deserve to be hurt. You've got notions that ought to be squeezed out of you. And I'm the one to do it. I like you a whole lot. You're going to be my wife, some day. Soon. You're going to stop painting pictures and bake cakes. And when we're both middle aged, and sensible, we'll go to France. But first the prairie's got to bloom!"

SHE lifted her eyes to his face, knowing he was deeply shaken and herself panic stricken. She had never thought this could happen to her, and somehow she was sorry, not for him, but for herself. She should not have come! She might have known! She wanted to live alone in her citadel of purity and tranquillity, undisturbed, in ignorance! She felt the living warmth of this man, the weight of his body, the compelling pressure of his arms. If she gave way, surrendered to her faintness, she would never again be herself, but his, deprived forever of the laurel.

"No, no," she said. Why was it that she had never noticed what white teeth he had? If he only wouldn't smile as if he had won her already! If only he wouldn't be so sure of her!

"We'll have a farmhouse, Gerry, out here. A storm roof with a peak. A porch facing south. A big kitchen. Right here, where we are now, on this rise of ground. Can't you see your house, Gerry? Feel it growing up out of the earth? A cellar, then the first floor, and the second, and the roof, and the chimneys! Isn't that better than Paris, France? Why, France isn't yours, Gerry. It never can be. It isn't real. But I'm real. And I'm asking you to marry me."

She shook her head.

Within her there was a conflict, sharp, blind, terrible, between her two undeveloped and antagonistic selves, between Gerry the woman and Gerry the genius. She stiffened. She must fight. She was chosen. "I hate you! I do! Let me go. I don't want to marry anybody."

Slowly he loosened his arms. His face grew white; his mouth twisted in a curious way. Gerry knew she had lost him. And most desperately she wanted him back. For now, turned away from her, hers no longer, he was not a man but a child, not to be feared, but comforted, not to run from, but to cherish. She sat stiff and aloof at his side while he turned the pacers around and drove toward Paris. She longed to call him back, to say: "I was a fool! I love you." They did not speak. The horses, indifferent to what had happened, wove the curious pattern of their gait along the dusty road and the sun sank, bringing the cool shadows of late afternoon. "If I should speak, now! If I should tell him!" But she could not bring herself to look at him. Even her tears were held back; they would not overflow from her heart and spill out of her eyes.

Joe Burch left her at the doctor's door. William Reynolds, Office Hours Twelve to One, Three to Five," in dim gold upon rusty black. He drove up smartly, handed Gerry down, tipped his hat. "Goodby, Miss Gerry. It's been a pleasant drive."

She passed the open door of the doctor's office and had a glimpse of

Among Us Georgians : : :

—By—
W. C. WOODALL

THE Colonel, as we may with impunity address him, shall be nameless here, for he is still in the land of the living. A Georgian born and bred, he is one of the contributions of this state to the great state of Mississippi, where he has practiced his profession, the law, for many years. He is the oldest lawyer at the bar of the Mississippi town where he resides, and has and enjoys the peculiar dignity and prestige that this distinction confers. Indeed, his station is such that he has fallen into the habit of taking liberties in the courtroom that would call forth a stern reprimand from the judge if attempted by a young lawyer.

The colonel, therefore, has a pretty wide range in what he says and does in the courtroom in his home town, but one day he went so far in his free and breezy comment on the plaintiff, the jury and all others concerned that the judge had to admonish him to be more temperate and respectful in his talk. The veteran lawyer could hardly realize that the court was trimming his sails, and within five minutes was violating the proprieties more flagrantly than ever. Again the judge called him down, this time a bit sharply, and said that if he repeated the offense the court would have to fine him.

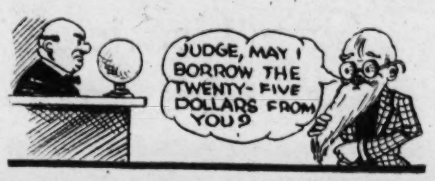

The colonel edited his remarks for fully five minutes and then began to speak of "justice" as administered in that court with such scant respect that the judge stopped him short and imposed a fine of twenty-five dollars for contempt of court.

It was unprecedented! The audience gasped, and the colonel came to earth with a dull thud.

"Your honor," he said, "this is an unexpected and very embarrassing situation. I haven't twenty-five dollars, and I certainly would hate to go to jail."

"Colonel—, a man of your prominence can easily raise twenty-five dollars," said the court, soothingly. "You have scores of friends. No doubt some of your friends in this very courtroom would gladly lend you the money."

"Of all the old friends that I have in the courtroom," said the veteran lawyer, in tones of great affection, "there is none that I esteem more highly or would more quickly call on in the moment of trouble than you!

Judge, may I borrow the twenty-five dollars from you?"

"Mr. Clerk!" said the court promptly and vigorously, "please remit this fine. The state of Mississippi can much more easily stand the loss of twenty-five dollars than I can."

ED ALEXANDER, of Atlanta, used to be just Ed Alexander, but he is Edgar Alexander now—that is, officially.

Some years ago this well-known Atlantan was a witness in a case and his testimony was rather important. When cross-examination time came, the lawyer on the other side said:

"Young man, what is your name?"

"Ed Alexander," politely replied the gentleman bearing that name.

"Why 'Ed' is no name at all!" fumed the lawyer. "'Ed,' as any intelligent person knows, is an abbreviation of either 'Edward' or 'Edgar.' Now tell us the truth, you man—remember that you are under oath—remember that heaven itself is watching you as you swear—is it 'Edgar' or 'Edward'?"

"Why, to tell you the truth I don't know," replied our hero. "I've been called Ed Alexander all my life. If there's anything more to it, I don't know it."

"And they expect to prove the case by him—by a man who doesn't even know his own name!" thundered the lawyer. "Such audacity is unparalleled. Your honor, I move that the testimony of this witness be stricken!"

"The court can hardly go that far," said the judge, smiling in spite of himself at the other's fierce earnestness. "I can appreciate the point you make, but it hardly constitutes ground to throw out the witness' entire testimony."

"Well, the jury can consider all the surrounding and contributory circumstances," said the peppery and almost cross cross-examining lawyer.

The intelligent jury of twelve honest and upright citizens did that very thing! They looked at Ed Alexander with frank curiosity and some misgiving—a man who didn't even know his own name, as the lawyer said.

"I see that it's up to me to get a full, complete and official name, one that will satisfy the lawyers and hold them awhile," said Mr. Alexander, good naturedly, to a group of smiling friends as they left the courtroom. "From henceforth, and now on, it shall be 'Edgar' Alexander—that is the official, legal name. Bear witness, my friends!"

And "Edgar Alexander" it remains to this good day.

By the way, if you want to be made a "colonel" for life, just visit this young man's office. It is one of the things that he does particularly well, and with a soothing grace that will be balm to your very soul!

The Alley of Forgotten Men : :

ONE by one they slunk through the drizzling rain, invariably with coat collars turned up, along dreary deserted streets into the dimly-lit alley. From afar off could be heard the rising roar of an elevated train, swelling louder each moment till its steel clanged overhead, shaking the pillars and quaking the streets— then like thunder it rumbled away again. The open window of a corner saloon sent out the monotonous, hollow jingle of a player-piano and the sound of shouting, quarreling voices.

They all halted before a glass-paneled door that swung open at a mere touch of the bunched shoulders, but they did not enter before throwing a hasty, suspicious glance backward; because for all his nonchalant baton-swinging and soft whistling of a music hall ditty that cop in oilskins had his eyes wide open and watched every one of the late passers till the glass door swung shut behind him.

Inside they had to stoop down to peer through a small sliding wicket in the wall, from where a man with leering eyes and a scowling face handed them a brass check with number—the number of their mat on the floor. Then down the worn wooden stairs into the warm, fetid atmosphere of the low-ceilinged basement. One single electric bulb threw a fantastic light through the long room. The floor was covered with only half-distinguishable forms, sprawled in the most grotesque and ludicrous attitudes. Tall and short forms, with knees drawn up and hands clasped behind their backs. Some lying flat on their faces, others again curled up like animals. Here and there the red glow of a burning cigarette amid that massed shadow. Low murmurs of subdued conversation ran along the floor. Right under the light lay a man snoring with a raucous, nasal sound that was so startling and irritating that his neighbors kept up a running fire of vicious swearing and vile words in his direction, without, however, disturbing the snorer.

BUT the smell in that subterranean cave was overpowering. A man coming in from the clear night air outside felt it grab his throat and choke off his breath; putrid it was and pungent.

Everywhere the slow, heavy, throaty breathing of men, dialogues in undertone, sharp and commanding shouts for quiet and the eerie moaning of humans in the grip of a smothering nightmare of the hallucinations of fitful dreams.

Gradually the talking stopped. Sleep and torpor, induced by an atmosphere heavier than drugs silenced that nondescript army of drifters and tramps, that collection of flotsam and wrecks from the storm of life.

Only one voice in a far corner now kept up a low, halting monologue in a colorless tone, interrupted occasionally by a questioning "huh" or an affirmative grunt. A nearby church tower tolled the midnight hour. When the last boom had died away in the night the voice suddenly stopped speaking, it instead rose in a long, shrill, piercing yell. It screamed for mercy and yelled with blood-curdling anguish. The sleepers jumped to their feet. They stumbled over each other in that semi-darkness, tramped over faces and bodies, collided with sickening thuds fell down in grotesque sprawling heaps. The air was filled with curses and shouts. The one electric bulb and its uncertain glow revealed to the awakened superintendent on the stairs a mob of clawing, fighting wild men, groping with extended arms, battering their way to the stairs, smashing each others' faces like savages to get near the exit.

* * * *

HELL had broken loose and was coming up the stairs. Outside police whistles rent the air. Night sticks were rapping on the curb. The cop with oilskins, electric searchlight in one hand and drawn revolver in the other was first to descend in that seething inferno. The flood of light calmed the hysterical mob. The commanding voice of the bluecoat restored quiet somewhat. In a moment other policemen followed. The crowd was ordered against the walls. In the far corner, where the voices had kept up a late conversation lay two forms. The searchlights flashed on the steel of a knife sticking in the breast of one of them. He was dead. The other stirred and rolled his head.

One cop lifted him to a half-sitting posture. His tongue hung out of his mouth, the man's face was swollen and of a ghastly hue. Water was poured between his bleeding lips. He opened his eyes.

The clang of an ambulance was heard up the street. People were slamming the glass-paneled door upstairs. There were footsteps in the hall. A hospital interne in spotless white ran through the room. "Almost choked to death," he said, bending over the man the cops had lifted up.

"What'd ya fight about?" rapped out the sergeant. "Why'd ya kill this man?" The fellow rolled his eyes and spluttered some sounds through his battered face. The doctor poured some whisky and forced it down. Two men carried him upstairs to the waiting ambulance.

"Doctor!" said the man as they raced through deserted streets. The interne bent over him.

"Doctor, that man ruined my life fifteen years ago. He stole my wife. We met tonight. He boasted about it. He didn't know I was the husband . . ."

Dr. Ha-Reubeni and his wife in their Jerusalem laboratory where they study and classify plants and flowers from all parts of Palestine and prepare them for preservation in the new museum

New Light on

Lilies of the Parable Really Daisies, the Sharon Rose a Tulip---and Why the Once Delicious "Apples of Sodom" Are No Longer Fit to Eat

EVERY reader of the Bible knows how frequently flowers, trees and other plants of various kinds are mentioned in its pages. But it has never been very clear just what these were—whether they were things that we call by the same names today and forms of vegetation that are still found in Palestine.

Just what, for example, was the rose of Sharon which is immortalized in the Song of Solomon? Was it one of the numerous varieties of roses which we prize so highly nowadays, and if so, which one?

And the "lilies" which are mentioned by Christ in one of His best-known parables. Were they like the lilies which adorn our churches at Easter or were they the more gayly-colored, more showy flowers which we call tiger lilies?

All these and many other interesting questions can now be answered as a result of the work which Dr. Ha-Reubeni, a distinguished botanist, and his wife, Chana, also a trained scientist, have been doing in Palestine.

For eighteen years they have been studying everything that grows there. Now they are able to identify practically every flower and tree which is mentioned in the Bible and to correct numerous mistakes which have crept into its text because its translators were theologians and linguists rather than naturalists.

Through their eyes we are enabled to see the tree-covered hills and the flowering valleys of the Holy Land just as the prophets and preachers of the Old Testament and Jesus of Nazareth saw them, and to find new interest and new beauty in countless Bible passages.

"Consider the lilies how they grow; they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

When Jesus spoke these words He

The Brook Kedron, Jerusalem, another of the Holy Land's historic garden spots

quite evidently was referring to some flower that was well known to His hearers—a flower that grew abundantly with the grass and was often cut down and burned with the hay. But just what was it?

One of the most ancient translations of this passage makes Jesus say "white flowers" instead of "lilies." Dr. Ha-Reubeni discovered that the Arabs to this day refer to the daisy which is so common in Palestine and which botanists call Anthemis Palestina as the "white flower."

Therefore, he thinks it quite plain that it was not a lily at all of which Jesus spoke, but the modest daisy—a flower very much like the one we know by the same name.

THE daisy fits in with all the conditions of the parable. It is beautiful in the modest, simple way which would have appealed to Jesus. It is beautiful at all hours of the day. It is beautiful at every period of its growth. When it has dried up it is gathered together with the dried grass and cast into the furnace.

Its delicate beauty, and its ultimate fate in the flames, suggested to Jesus the thought of His parable. He points it out as something the ordinary observer would not readily see. "Yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these . . . which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven."

It should also be remembered that

A Palestine plant which, according to old Arab legends, produced one of the most delicious fruits until it fell under a curse

the daisy has a crown, which gives special aptitude to the comparison with Solomon, the crowned king.

"Can we not imagine," says Dr. Ha-Reubeni, "that the thoughts and emotions which surged in Jesus did not always allow Him easy sleep, that they awakened Him at dawn, that He went out into the fields among the hills, walking in the morning light over these fields of the delicate Anthemis with its simple crowned beauty, and that on some such morning there was born in the heart of Jesus this beautiful parable?"

It is through painstaking study of the Greek and Hebrew texts of the Bible, and by gathering all the information possible from the Arabs, who have many legends about the fruits and flowers of Palestine, that the great botanist and his devoted wife have settled many disputed questions.

There is, for instance, the Hebrew term translated "Rose of Sharon," which is so vividly used in the "Song of Songs," the greatest apotheosis of love known in any literature. Dr. Ha-Reubeni proves that it is not a rose at all, but a very beautiful tulip known scientifically as Tulip Praecox.

It is called a rose in the Song of Solomon, Dr. Ha-Reubeni maintains, because there happened to be no Hebrew word for tulip, and so it went on and on through various translations under an utterly erroneous name. Recent archaeological discoveries bear out this explanation of the matter.

Dr. Ha-Reubeni identifies the "apples of Sodom" with the fruit known to botanists as Salanum Sanctum. According to the Arab legends, these apples were once large and luscious, but became small, withered and unpalatable when they fell under the curse which destroyed the kicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Another fruit plant which is common in Palestine and which is also found in far off Porto Rico is known as Calatropos Prucera. Its fruit is not fit to eat, but this, according to the Arabs, is due to the fact that it is under a curse like the "apples of Sodom." Before the curse which destroyed the wicked believed to have been one of the most delicious of fruits.

THESE legends of the accursed fruits are very interesting. Dr. Ha-Reubeni thinks, when studied in connection with the incident of Jesus and the fig tree. In the twenty-first chapter of Matthew we read:

"And when He saw a fig tree in the way, He came to it, and found nothing thereon but leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee forever. And presently the fig tree withered away."

In this case it was only the individual tree that suffered, but the Arab legends declare that many whole species have been rendered of no further use to man through being accursed.

In New York is a garden in which are about 400 of the plants, trees, shrubs and flowers mentioned in Shakespeare's plays and sonnets. Dr. Ha-Reubeni's plans to establish a series of gardens at Jerusalem which will contain every kind of vegetation mentioned in the Bible that can be identified and found growing today.

the Bible's Flowers and Trees

In the museum he founded in Jerusalem some time ago the doctor has already gathered specimens of every growing thing to be found in Palestine. This collection is not only of remarkable interest to students of Biblical history but is proving of great value in the development of the country's agriculture and other industries.

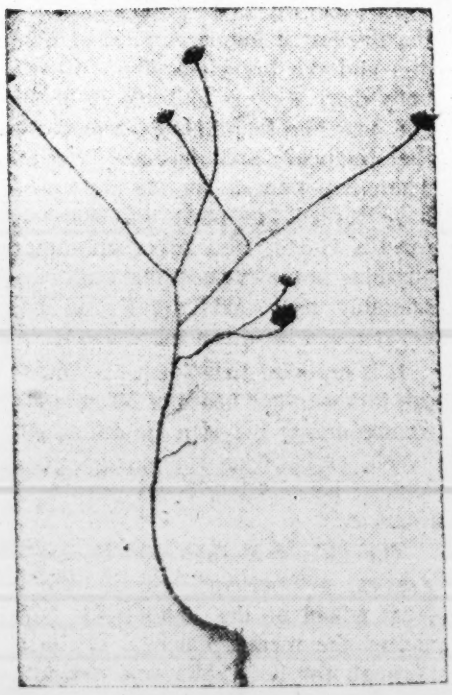

One of the proposed series of gardens will be devoted entirely to the prophet Isaiah. It will undertake to interpret through the beauties of nature many of the most impressive passages of the book of Isaiah as well as to present a complete collection of the kinds of vegetation to which the prophet refers.

One plot in the garden will be devoted exclusively to the fifth chapter of the Book of Isaiah with its beautiful parable of the vineyard. Here will be seen growing the terebinth and the cedar, the palm and the wheat, the cypress and the vine of Sibmah, the olive and the fig, cotton and flax, spelt and cummin, the acacia, the myrtle, the plane tree, the larch, the willow, the bay tree and the rose and all the other flowers of the field.

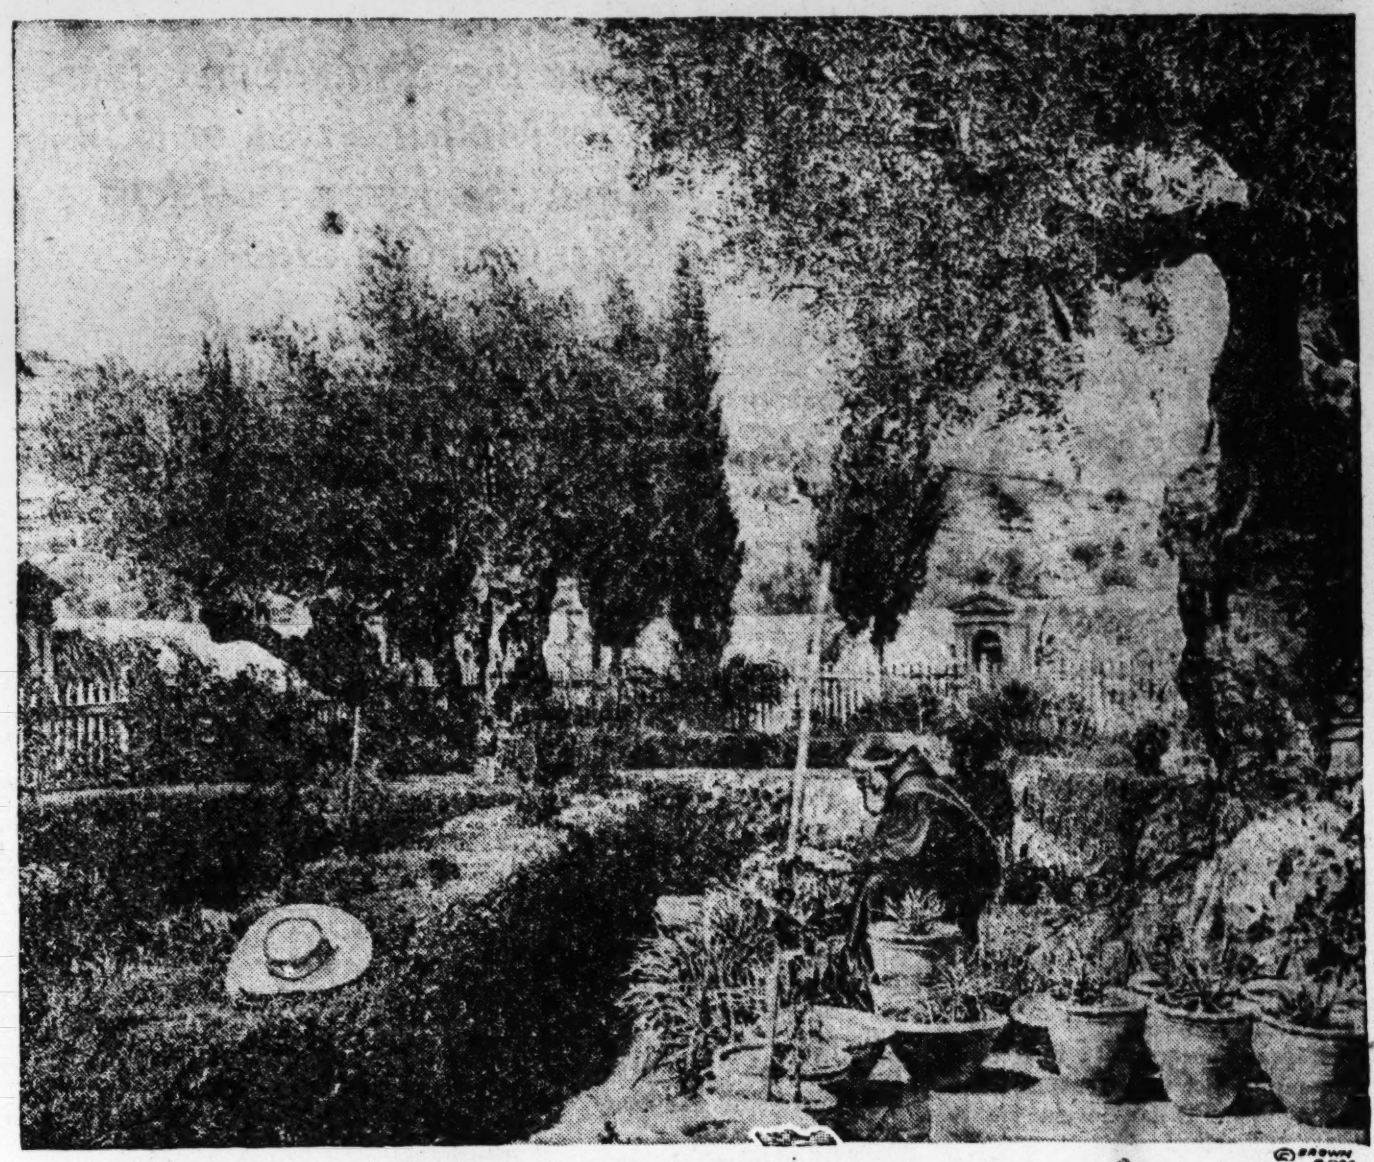

Another plot will be devoted to making vivid the wonderful sermon which is preached in the seventh chapter of Isaiah and which has so long been misunderstood.

Thus far all Dr. Ha-Reubeni's work has been financed out of his private means, but the proposed Biblical garden will call for such heavy expenditures that he will have to seek financial aid. Since the garden will deal with both the Old and the New Testament, he is in hopes that men and women of all creeds will be glad to help him establish it.

Of course, the trees and flowers of

A dried specimen of the very common variety of Palestine daisies which Dr. Ha-Reubeni believes were the lilies referred to by Jesus in His famous parable

The Garden of Gethsemane on the Mount of Olives and one of the Franciscan monks who devote themselves to the care of its trees and flowers. On the right is one of the seven huge olive trees which are believed to have been shading this beautiful spot in the days when Jesus came here to meditate and pray the Holy Land that are of the greatest interest to devout Christians are those that grow in the Garden of Gethsemane on the Mount of Olives. This beautiful spot was one to which Jesus frequently retired for meditation and prayer, and it was here that He was betrayed by Judas Iscariot.

NATURALLY it has been cared for by Christians ever since, when they had the power, and today it is in charge of the Franciscan monks, who give loving care to its great olive trees and beautiful flowers.

The seven olive trees are very ancient. The oldest and largest is about twenty-six feet in circumference and has had to be girdled with iron bands to hold it together. In 1915 a plague of locusts swarmed over the garden, devouring everything, but it has been restored since, and now blooms with a large variety of the native blossoms, planted and tended most sedulously by the monks.

It is more than possible that these very olive trees looked down upon the betrayal of Jesus. While it is said that Titus, the Roman conqueror of Jerusalem in 70 A. D., cut down all the trees around the city, he may have spared those in this garden, because he was in possession of the Mount of Olives, and it was therefore not necessary to sacrifice them. The trees have been mentioned by pilgrims as early as the seventh century. Even then they were very large and gave evidence of great age.

Dr. Ha-Reubeni is a native of Russia. When he went to Palestine with his wife nearly twenty years ago he was called Ephraim Rubinowitch. But he was determined to become a true Palestinian and so he changed his name to the Hebrew equivalent for "son of Reuben"—Ha-Reubeni.

The doctor and his wife recently arrived in the United States to lecture at the American Museum of Natural History and in the New York and Brooklyn botanical gardens and to give an exhibition of the flora of the Holy Land at Columbia university.

They are a most interesting couple, welded together by a common interest in plants and flowers and the history of Bible times. To the study of these they plan to devote the rest of their lives.

Dr. Ha-Reubeni and his wife were born in the same city and grew up together. She went to Germany to continue her studies in botany and he to Paris and later on to Lausanne as a professor in a university. Immediately after their marriage they went to the Holy Land.

"First of all," says Dr. Ha-Reubeni in describing the work to which he and his wife are so devoted, "we wanted to revive the bond between the Jew and nature that existed in ancient times.

Branch of a "Sodom Apple" tree, showing the small, unpalatable things which its once large and luscious apples are believed to have become after the destruction of the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah

'Then, too, we wanted to revive the meanings and the sentiments of the prophets and sages of the long-gone days by means of correct knowledge of the natural beauties of Palestine. Much of this has been lost.

"The translators through whom the Bible has passed from time to time have not been naturalists. They have misunderstood certain words and expressions and have made many mistakes.

"Also, we wished to examine the flora of the country from strictly scientific and economic points of view.

"The concrete results of our work have been many. We have established the first botanical museum Jerusalem has ever had. In it are classified and exhibited practically all the flowers and plants mentioned in the Bible."

Lady Montagu's Problem

Will the Duchess of Manchester's Pretty Daughter Take the Straight and Narrow Path Her Mother Urges, or Will She Follow the Jazzy Footsteps of Her Gay Old Dad?

The Duke of Manchester, separated for years from his rich, American-born wife and now seeking a divorce from her

LADY MARY MONTAGU, young and pretty, rich and titled, stands at life's cross-roads, puzzled to know which of two widely divergent roads to take.

It is not the choice of a road to matrimony which is troubling Lady Mary. Parents not lovers are the problem involved.

Shall she follow down the bright, pleasure strewn road which her gay father, the Duke of Manchester, has folowed all his life? Or shall she choose the drably staid and highly respectable highway on which the feet of her mother, the former Helena Zimmerman, of Cincinnati, are so firmly set?

For the life of her Lady Montagu can't decide which to do, and yet decide she must very soon. Her choice could not have been long delayed in any case, but now that her father has brought suit for divorce it become immediately imperative.

Her young ladyship is devoted to both her parents. Since their separation several years ago she has divided her time about equally between them. Whatever choice she makes will cost her a pang, no matter how much happiness it brings.

And it is believed that both the duke and the duchess are quite as deeply concerned over this problem of the cross-roads as their daughter. With each of them she has always been a special favorite. Each of them would hate to see her go the other's way and is doing everything possible to prevent it.

There are hints that in the duke's case, there are financial reasons as well as reasons of love why he would like to have his daughter cling to him. He is always in bankruptcy of near the verge of it. Lady Montagu already has money in her own right and some day she will have a big share of the miliions which her shrewd old grandfather, the late Eugene Zimmerman, was so careful to keep out of the Duke of Manchester's reach.

The duchess is sparing no effort to convince her daughter how much there is to be gained in the way of a brilliant marriage and countless other things by coming her way. She brought Lady Mary to America a few weeks ago and introduced her into the New York and Newport smart set. Now she is planning to have her presented at court.

But the more her parents try to convince their daughter the more bewildered she is, the more undecided which road she ought to take.

BORN in England of an American mother and the granddaughter on her father's side of an American woman, Lady Montagu is, nevertheless, distinctly English both in looks and manner.

She is a buxom young woman of the fair-haired English type. The glow of good health shows in a charming touch of natural color that lies close beneath her beautiful cream-like complexion. Large soft blue eyes that look straight at one have been considered by artists the finest of all her many attractive features.

During her stay in New York, Lady Montagu and her mother were guests of Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt. The Vanderbilts are old friends of the duchess, and this friendship is enough to show the social status of the duchess in America.

In England it is even higher. In marked contrast to her noble husband, the duchess moves in the most arstocratic circles of British society — what some call a hopelessly oldfashioned circle. It is a little coterie that through all these years of jazz and cocktails, bobbed hair and abbreviated skirts, Queen Mary has held together by her conservative leadership.

The duke, possessor of one of England's oldest titles, has for many years shown a marked inclination for the lighter, livelier side of life. While his wife would be horrified if one were to suggest her visiting a night club, "Kim," as the duke is affectionately called by his intimates in bohemian circles, is an active supporter of one of the biggest night clubs in London.

The night club idea which originated with an American found a hearty supporter in the Duke of Manchester. It started during the war and since then several hundred of these clubs have sprung up all over London— good, bad and indifferent. That of which the duke is a member is one of the best known, including in its cosmopolitan membership noblemen, actors, writers, artists and musicians of sorts.

It's a jolly place, where members may invite their friends to dinner and dance, to a cabaret supper or even an afternoon tea dance. On what are known as "gala nights," the authorities permit the place to remain open hours later than the licensed amusement places are permitted to. The dancing and drinking continue until nearly dawn.

The Maharajah of Karputhala never thinks one of his lavish parties quite complete unless "Kim" is among those present

The Duchess of Manchester, whose ideas about her daughter's future are so widely different from the Duke's

The young Duchess of Leinster, a former stage favorite, is a well-known member of this club. Unlike the Duchess of Manchester, she believes in children seeing life at an early age.

WHEN her baby was a year old she took him to a tea dance given at the club and then, not knowing what to do with him, engaged one of the waiters to roll him back and forth the length of the ballroom perched on top of a tea wagon. The baby liked this and the guests applauded it as a great novelty.

So dissimilar in tastes, it is no wonder that the duchess and her noble husband should not have hit it off together. As Helena Zimmerman, daughter of the immensely wealthy railroad magnate, the duchess has inherited something of her father's hard-headed American business sense. Hers is a practical, serious sort of mind. This serious attitude toward life has increased with her years and experience.

Now, having shown decided wisdom in handling her own affairs and managing her father's great estate, she is turning her attention to her children—and particularly to Lady Montagu.

"Everybody loves 'Kim,'" is a remark frequently heard when the duke and duchess are under discussion. "There is nothing mean about him. He wouldn't harm a fly." And "Kim," in truth, does draw friends as a magnet draws steel.

He's known as a "good fellow" in the liveliest bohemian circles of London and the French capital. Everybody there is eager to drink his health and hear him relate his experiences in the financial and business worlds. These experiences, for the most part, have turned out most unfortunately for His Grace, who never attempted anything in the business line until considerably past middle age and has never met with much success in it.

It is reported that when his American father-in-law heard of his going to France during the war, he remarked: "Well, perhaps he will make a good soldier; he certainly is no good as a financier."

The duke's mother was Consuelo Yznaga, a Louisiana woman and a great friend of the Vanderbilts, who named the former Duchess of Marlborough for her. She was rich and the duke receives a large income from her estate. But what might mean a considerable fortune to a more thrifty person, is mere spending money to this freehanded high liver.

of Life's Cross-Roads

Since he and his wealthy American wife separated the duke has tried without success to increase his income through various business enterprises.

A few years ago he came to this country and became interested in a big film company that hoped to teach the Bible to children via moving pictures. This venture was short lived.

Later he had visions of a great fortune to be made out of gold mines in northern Quebec. Unhappily for the duke one of the financial backers died while he was en route to Canada.

While hunting around for a new backer he ran up a bill of $1,438 at the Mount Royal hotel in Montreal. When he went off without settling, the hotel had a writ of summons issued that prevented the duke from leaving Canada until the bill was paid.

In his own bohemian set, however, nobody cares how much of a failure "good old Kim" is at business. Among his particular friends are Fanny Ward, the actress, and her husband, Jack Dean. Fanny's lovely London home is the scene of many gay parties where the duke is hailed as a favorite guest.

Then there's that famed dispensar of European hospitality, the Maharajah of Karputhala, whose parties are always scenes of oriental splendor. He and the duke are great chums.

The duke himself gives lively parties at his country place near Maidenhead. Everybody who gets an invitation to one of these considers himself lucky.

This lovely old English home, only a few miles from the great estate of Lord and Lady Astor, the duke bought at the close of the war. This is where he periodically entertains Lady Montagu and his other children and makes them acquainted with Lon-

Lady Mary Montagu, the charming prize in the hotly contested tug of war now being waged between her spendthrift father and her rich mother

It has a fine ... ...ounds shaded by stately elms. A sketch of the Thames winding lazily alongside the small estate gives an added charm.

... duke know noth... about managing a home, but there's the dependable Chelton, his austere English butler. Chelton is so attached to his master that nothing would induce him to leave. During the war the butler attained to the rank of major, but this made no difference with Chelton's faithfulness.

During their early married life the Manchesters maintained a great home in the fashionable Mayfair section of Grosvenor Square. But, as their marital differences increased, the home was given up. The duchess, unlike other American women who have married into the British peerage, cares nothing for the spectacular social career she might so easily have on her $500,000 a year.

Her friends are the quiet, unpretentious people, who feel themselves the backbone of conservative British aristocracy—people who continue to believe that hotels were intended for the convenience of the public and not for the vulgar display of wealth.

In this atmosphere of strait-laced conservatism, wealth and aristocratic lineage is where the duchess of Manchester feels that her daughter ought to be, leading a life quite as serious as the men and women around her.

Nowhere else, the duchess thinks, will Lady Mary be so sure of finding a husband worthy of her; and nowhere else will she be so certain of happiness once her love mate is found, for in this circle divorce is frowned upon.

On the other hand, the duke, having seen how well Lady Mary gets on with his friends from the theatrical, artistic and literary worlds, is just as positive that she ought to cast her lot with him.

For a husband for her nothing would suit him better than a dashing young actor or an artist or playwright. If the young man had money so much the better but, in the duke's estimation, poverty would not matter so long as he was clever and a "good fellow."

Perhaps no other girl ever faced a more puzzling problem than Lady Mary Montagu as she stands at life's cross-roads. Certainly few girls have parents who lead lives more amazingly dissimilar than those of the Duke and Duchess of Manchester or who have more widely different ideas as to what a daughter should do with her own life.

FORNEY WYLY

WITHOUT Glenn Hunter, it is highly improbable "Merton of the Movies" would have become the very successful play and equally successful photoplay it unquestionably did. And this Mr. Hunter I find to be a most engaging chap. In fact, he is the very clever sort of person, who, on being interviewed, directs the conversation toward you instead of toward himself, realizing of course that nine out of every ten people had rather talk about themselves than any other subject in the world.

In my case, it was particularly unfortunate. I must have continued my life story far into the afternoon. Indeed at the conclusion of my narrative, the exhausted Mr. Hunter could not say he was not told just how many Wylys did not come over on the Mayflower, as well as all of the bright little sayings I made to my nurse at the age of four. He should be able to write far, far more about boring and uninteresting me than I am able to about the extremely interesting and modest Mr. Hunter.

At the present time, Mr. Hunter is busily engaged in making a series of movies. He's just finished "The Pinch Hitter" in which the feminine lead is played by the alluring Constance Bennett, and has started work on another one, "The Clod-hopper" several scenes of which I saw taken. In this newest picture, Mr. Hunter is a small-towner who comes to New York to go on the stage. As to just what happened to him, you'll of course find out from the picture. His movie of "Merton of the Movies" is of course the one for which he is best known. Another of his popular films was "West of the Water Tower" in which he appeared with May McAvoy.

On the speaking stage, besides his well-known "Merton" he scored quite decidedly with Billie Burke in "Intimate Strangers." He also appeared in the original production of "Clarence" with Helen Hayes and Alfred Lunt. At the present time he is considering several plays from which he will select the one he will appear in on Broadway this fall.

Mr. Hunter is one of the most natural persons I have ever met. His overnight success in "Merton" did not result in his having to buy his hats several sizes larger than he formerly had. He impresses you as a most sincere, conscientions chap who is whole-heartedly wrapped up in his work, and who is going to do bigger things all the time.

Glenn Hunter, famous stage and screen star, and Constance Bennett, popular film favorite, as they appear in a forthcoming picture, "The Pinch Hitter."

HOW, do you suppose, did a certain prominent Atlanta girl visiting here, feel the other night at Texas Guinan's Supper Club when some one in the party of which she was a member said out before everybody:

"Oh, Miss Blank, you're the girl I heard Barbara LaMarr's maid say she used to know in Atlanta."

The question which will come to most of our minds is "what was 'the prominent Atlanta girl' doing on a party with persons who know maids?" the very natural answer to such a question being, "So's your old man."

"THE Morning After" you couldn't failed to grasp, is a play which deals with the results of a well-oiled gin party. In fact as you first view this very woebegone crowd, you are quite vividly reminded of how you yourself, I mean, of how some friends of yours. have felt "on the day after." The host and hostess who believe all of their house-party guests left the island the night before, gradually discover a stray wife here, and an unclaimed husband there, were somehow left in the scramble that will follow even the best of such parties. A terrible storm comes up, the boat gets away, and the distracted host and hostess find themselves with hangons as well as hang-overs.

Again will I refuse to help cure your insomnia by recounting the plot of a comedy. All in all, however, it's a very entertaining play, brimful of really funny lines and situations. Arthur Aylsworth, one of the husbands who live in bodily fear of their wives, is most amusing, while Donald Foster who plays what must be termed as "the hero" is very convincing. For genuine beauty the ladies in "The Morning After" are positively Ziegfeldian. In particular did I enjoy looking at Kay Johnson who

ESTELLE TAYLOR DEMPSEY, slim and vivid with her dark hair and eyes and wearing a purple georgette dress, was entertaining tea guests in her new home with Jack up in Los Feliz Heights.

Like all brides she was glad to show off her new home and while we toured the charming house she said: "Jack claims that for once he got a good break—he married a girl with furniture."

The pretty ivory bedroom was furnished from Estelle's own boudoir. There was a white satin spread with a filmy lace cover. A canopy of pale blue silk draped the head of the cushion strewn bed.

The bureau, under the glass of the top, showed a pale blue silk spread embroidered in roses by Estelle's own hands. A great blue floor cushion with flower ornaments supported a large and exquisitely languishing French doll with a hoop skirt and powdered wig.

Huge dragons encircled the cloissone urn which, with an enormous white bearskin, comprise Jack's contribution to the furnishings.

In Jack's own dressing room the feminine touch is equally evident. Pale green painted furniture with spreads of orchid and gold changeable taffeta, ruffled and trimmed with flowers from Estelle's nimble fingers, and tiny taffeta ruffled curtains at the windows furnish this room. Dolls of high degree snuggle under the tables or rest on the chairs or bed. Imagine dolls in Jack Dempsey's own room! And tiny vanity cushions, lace be-ruffled, accompany them.

Jack, with the easy good nature of the newly married husband accepts all this as his own, but absolutely refuses for any of his men friends to take a peek at this. He says he's afraid they'd kiss him. But a very virile scarlet dressing gown and leather slippers peeked from the clothes closet.

Jack's own masculine possessions are kept at his dressing room in the gymnasium for these days he has little time at home, Estelle confided, because of arrangements pending for another battle in the ring.

VALENTINO has been giving himself the most violent sort of exercise the last few days working on his new picture, "The Lone Eagle." Seen twenty miles out on location last Tuesday in a black cossack uniform with red sash and red silk shirt, Valentino was busy lifting a horseback rider right off his steed. The rider was supposed to pass under a bridge on which Rudy lay. Rudy lifted him from his horse and dropped him onto a donkey which was following the horse. As this exercise had to be repeated six times to satisfy the rapacious cameraman and as the temperature was dancing around 100, perspiration was pouring from the screen's most famous pompadour. "At every lift," said Rudy, "that man gained twenty pounds. And to think that I put in that piece of business myself."

Conversation turned to charm in women, and in answer to a question as to whether restfulness was a charm in a woman, Valentino vowed he had never found a charming woman restful.

Sir Federico Beltran-Masses, the famous Spanish painter who is a boon companion of Rudy's appeared at this point, rosy-cheeked and clad in Hollywood rompers (local lingo for knickers) to announce that the only restful and charming woman in the world was Death. Whereat the party climbed into a red leather upholstered gray racer and was whisked into Hollywood proper at forty-five miles an hour, Rudolph Valentino Guglielmo acting as chauffeur.

RUDY has been having a bit of vacation baching it, as Winifred Hudnut Valentino has been in the country for a short rest, to recover from a severe cold.

Wednesday noon saw him with Masses at the Montmartre enjoying the dancing and food. Anita Stewart in a flowered lavender chiffon dress with a picture hat of lavender and purple, was his dancing partner, while Mrs. Clarence Brown, in scarlet, danced with Masses.

Mrs. Ernst Lubitsch, Mrs. Charley Ray, Mrs. Conrad Nagel and Enid Bennett Nible were lunching together not far from the crowded dance floor, on which Dorothy Mackaill, in blue, with a large leghorn hat, was dancing. Syd Chaplin was busily dancing with first this one, then that, of a group of decorative flappers. Dorothy Phillips, in a white sports suit and blue felt hat was looking on.

PUTTING a synthetic pop into fake champagne nearly ruined the day at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayers this week. Mae Murray, playing in "The Masked Bride," appears in a scene in the Paris Montmartre with a comedy waiter played by Lee White. Lee's stunt was to shake up a bottle of vinegar, to which had been added some lowly soda and at the proper moment to remove the cork, and presto, movie champagne would fizz forth.

The idea was fine, but the denouement came too soon, for the cork hit the ceiling and as the startled White whirled the spurting bottle encircled the set, drenching Mae, Francis X. Bushman and Director Von Sternberg.

A little earlier the same day Mae had been dancing for the camera in a bead and spangle gown which somehow didn't seem able to stay with her for every swirl brought a shower of beads rolling over the floor and impeding serious-minded VonSternberg, who, megaphone in hand, was running about trying in vain to stem the inundation of popping crystals.

THE Charleston craze has Hollywood by the toes; one casuality in line of duty is reported by Evelyn Brent, who has lost a perfectly good colored maid named Violet. Said Violet, who hails from a tiny town in Georgia, got a night off last week and with her beau skitted about in a cafe on San Pedro street in such an interesting manner that she was offered a job by a visiting dancing teacher "to teach white folks how to dance the Charleston" at the modest sum of $20 a day. As Violet has been doing the Charleston since she learned how to walk it looks like chicken dinner to Violet and Evelyn is minus a fine maid.

Paul and the Philippian Jailor

* * * *

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

WE study today a miracle wrought through Paul and Silas and an account of the revenge attempted by those to whom the performance of the miracle brought pecuniary loss.

At Philippi they found a slave girl whose skill in the magical art was a source of profit to her masters. She was a sort of fortune teller or clairvoyant and for a fee would tell or pretend to tell the future. She followed the apostles for many days, crying out, "These men are the servants of the most high God, which shew us the way of salvation."

It is evident that the words were not uttered because of faith or in the spirit of helpfulness, for we are told that it grieved Paul and that, turning to her, he commanded the spirit of divination to come out of her. When her masters found that this change had been wrought in her, they were angry because their hope of gains had been destroyed, so they at once caught Paul and Silas and drew them into the market place unto the rulers.

Here we have a case similar to that of Demetrius (recorded in Acts 19). He, it will be remembered, was a silversmith; when he found that Paul's teachings were liable to destroy the profitable trade of making idols, he called his craftsmen together and pointed out the danger that threatened their occupation.

When his fellow craftsmen were fully aroused to the menace of Paul's preaching, they raised a cry against Paul—not a frank charge that he was injuring their business, but the insincere charge that he was interfering with the worship of Diana. "Great is Diana of the Ephesians" was the slogan that they adopted in their effort to protect their business under the guise of protecting their religion.

And so with the masters of this damsel possessed with the spirit of divination; their charge against Paul and Silas was that they "teach customs which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans." The multitudes, which seemed to have been easily aroused against the Christians, "rose up together against them."

THE magistrates, resorting to their usual custom in such cases, rent off their clothes, and commanded that the disciples should be beaten. After many stripes had been laid upon them, they were thrust into prison and the jailer was charged to keep them safely. The jailer, unwilling to take any chance of their escaping, "made their feet fast in the stocks."

Poor Paul; he escaped from one danger only to fall into another. Later, he reviewed his experience with his persecutors and gave an account of the many forms of suffering through which he was compelled to pass. But outward circumstances, however trying, never disturbed Paul's composure. He was in tune with God and at peace with Christ—how could he conceal his joy? Our text tells us that at midnight Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises to God—and they were not whispered prayers and songs; the prisoners heard them.

Suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken. Those who do not believe in miracles are kept busy with explanations. This earthquake opened all the doors of the prison and loosed the bands of every one of the prisoners. It was more than a coincidence that it should have happened just at this time, and that which follows takes it out of this class of "happenings."

Those who live nineteen hundred years after the occurrence may endeavor to eliminate the supernatural element in it, but the jailor who was

PAUL AND THE PHILIPPIAN JAILOR

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan

(Acts 16:19-34)

And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the market place unto the rulers

And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city.

And teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.

And the multitude rose up together against them: and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them.

And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely:

Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them.

And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's hands were loosed.

And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here.

Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas.

And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?

And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway.

And when he had brought them into his house he set meat before them, and rejoiced believing in God with all his house.

Things New and Old About the Bible

The New Testament Canon

* * * *

BY REV. W. P. KING Pastor First Methodist Church Gainesville, Ga.

THE formation of the New Testament canon can be traced with more historical certainty than that of the Old Testament canon.

There are three distinct periods in the historical process of forming the New Testament canon.

The first of these periods comes to a close soon after the middle of the second century.

The writings from apostolic sources were used for religious instruction along with scriptures of the Old Testament. All but seven of the New Testament books were considered genuine.

The second period extended from the latter part of the second until near the close of the fourth century. It was necessary for the church to fix the limits of the scriptures on account of the opposition of various sects and heresies. All the books of the present New Testament were received into the canon, though the seven doubtful books were not considered of the same rank as the others. These seven, called the Antilegomena, were Second Peter, Second and Third John, James, Hebrews and the Apocalypse. The Third Council of Carthage, 397 A. D., confirmed our present New Testament.

The third period is from the close of the fourth century and onward. No change in the limits of the New Testament canon appears, but the distinction of the books into two classes is lost.

At first there was no thought of putting the New Testament writings on a level with the sacred Hebrew scriptures. Only the lapse of time could do this.

Before the middle of the second century the New Testament writings were used for public reading in the churches, but this does not prove the existence of a completed New Testament canon at this time.

As the church drew farther away from the time of Christ and the apostles, the unsatisfactory nature of oral tradition was made more emphatic.

The church was threatened in doctrine and life by heresies, so the demand for a canon became imperative.

The foundation of the entire Biblical canon was practically completed for all worshipping and working purposes about the close of the second century, A. D., although certain books, afterwards accepted as canonoical, still remained doubtful.

Despite the historical facts of the formation of the canon, the Protestant churches in the post-reformation period, swayed by unscriptural dogmatism, departed from the liberty of Luther and the early Protestants, and accepted the traditional nations of the canon. To distinguish different grades in the scriptures becomes a deadly heresy. Since the Roman Catholic church claimed an infallible church, the Protestants thought it necessary to claim an infallible book.

The Catholic position is consistent and false. The Protestant position is inconsistent. It is difficult to see how a Protestant can contend for the infallible canon and at the same time deny the infallibility of the church, which fixed the limit of the canon.

Both Catholic and Protestant positions are dogmatic and unhistorical.

But whatever may be said of post-reformation Protestantism in its bearing on the canon, genuine Protestanism must stand for the reason and liberty of historical research and the right of private judgment.

THE subjective test of the canon made by Luther and early Protestants led into error, but not into the same serious and fixed error as the objective test of Catholicism.

This test of Luther was the witness of God's spirit to the Christly character of a book. The witness of the spirit may help us in books like the Gospel of Saint John and the Epistle of Romans, but not in books like Esther and Ecclesiastes.

The canonical test which appeals to me as being the truest is one in which I find that Marcus Dods and A. B. Bruce concur. The test is the agreement of any book with the main end of revelation. Of course the book must have direct historical connection with the Revelation of God in history.

This test helps us through most canonical problems. Any problem that remains unsolved will be connected with books of minor importance. The truth is always best.

We must take our appeal from the false dogmatism of Catholicism and post-reformation Protestantism to the Scripture itself, to the teaching of Christ and the Apostles, and to the voice of the early church.

To break with the traditional view of the canon is not to weaken, but to strengthen the faith. All the books of the Bible shall gain in vividness of interest and even in spiritual value as their true history and difference of values are shown.

Dr. George T. Ladd writes, "The history of that process through which the Christian church has obtained its present collection of sacred writings—the Bible as we now have it—warrants a belief in the guidance of the church by the Holy Spirit. With certain plain limitations of our meaning we may speak of the "Canon of the Old and New Testaments" as inspired. Such a statement, however, does not imply the infallibility of the details of the process of selecting and combining the separate book. The process of forming the canon of sacred Scripture has been similar to that in which God's spirit has brought about all great moral and spiritual growths in the body of believers. The general result has been that the church has a perfectly unique collection of religious books which have come to be united as one into a volume called the Book, the Bible.

For all practical and religious purposes the canon is a closed question.

Won't "Settle Down," But

Why the Society Beauty Yo Him to Wait for His Divo sive Wife Than the Pr With Whe

Philander C. Knox, Jr., and Mrs. Knox No. 2, from whom he is now separated

PHILANDER C. KNOX, JR., is only a young man, but he has already played the hero—or the villain, according to the heroines—in two unfortunate matrimonial ventures. If he keeps on at this rate he may soon be as notorious in this respect as his late father was famous in a quite different way.

The senior Knox, as everybody knows, was one of the country's most distinguished lawyers and statesmen, a member of the United States senate from Pennsylvania and later secretary of state. And the young man's mother is a leader of wealth and fashion in the most exclusive circle of Washington society.

But it may be that he will not care to continue jumping in and out of matrimony when he sees how expensive it can be. He is now having to pay his latest wife and the two children a substantial separation allowance and, if she gets a divorce, there will be a far heavier outlay to meet.

Before affairs reach this point perhaps Mr. Knox will have come to the conclusion that it is cheaper to "settle down" than to "settle up." Some think that he will be anxious to try for a reconciliation with the Washington society beauty whom he felt so sure, just a few years ago, to be just the ideal love mate for him.

All this trouble very probably might have been avoided if Mr. Knox had not managed to wriggle out of his first experience with married life so cheaply.

Another view of the wife who got tired of waiting for Mr. Knox to "settle down"

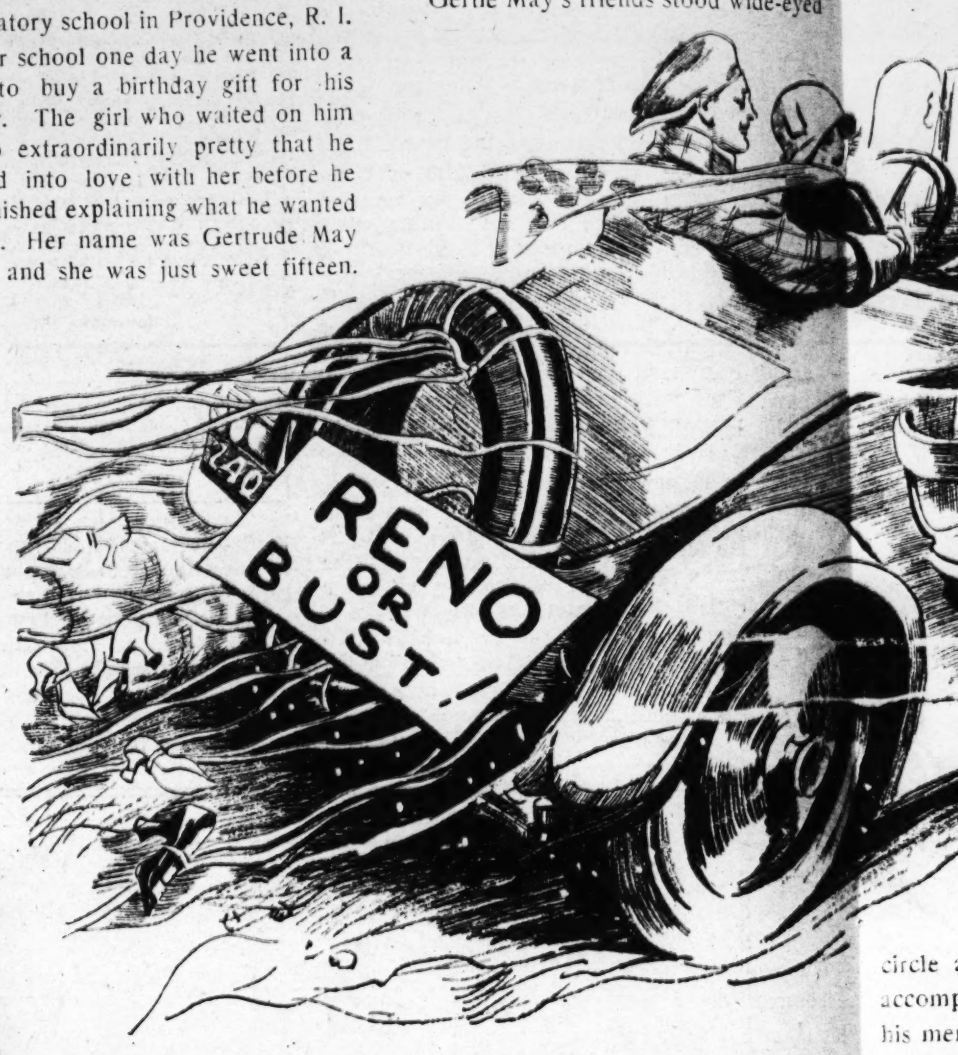

That initial venture cost him some social prestige, a good deal of parental disfavor and several years of education—but only a comparatively small amount of money.

This time it is very, very different. The present Mrs. Knox's family is socially prominent but not at all wealthy. If she and the two children are to be cared for in the style to which they have been accustomed the Knox fortune must foot the bills.

And, as everybody suspects from the grim way she went about getting her separation, she intends to be compensated very handsomely for Mr. Knox's alleged failure to 'settle down" and be a nice, kind and sober husband.

Philander Knox's first love affair—or, at least, the first one that tied a wife to him—came within a few months after he put on long trousers. He was a student at the Mount Morris Preparatory school in Providence, R. I.

After school one day he went into a store to buy a birthday gift for his mother. The girl who waited on him was so extraordinarily pretty that he flopped into love with her before he had finished explaining what he wanted to buy. Her name was Gertrude May Boller and she was just sweet fifteen.

By the time Knox was ready to start for Reno his future matrimonial plans were so settled that he took Josephine Poole and her mother along with him. His "Reno or Bust" expedition became a merry family party, joined later by the father of the new bride-to-be. And when the Nevada court finally freed Knox from his shop girl wife he promptly rewarded Josephine Poole for having kept him company for all those tedious months by slipping a wedding ring on her finger

That very evening the school boy put his arms around her and told her that she was the dearest girl that ever lived. Gertie May, as her friends called her, believed he meant what he said, but she couldn't help being incredulous of the promise he made her a few days later.

"I'm going to marry you darling," was what he said, "just as soon as I get my next month's allowance."

Marriage, a marriage to this good looking son of a rich and famous man—for such a glorious thing as this to happen, and all so suddenly, seemed quite beyond the bounds of possibility. But Gertie May did not express any of of her doubts to Philander.

Not long after this, as Gertie May was leaving the store with the other sales girls after her day's work was over, she found her school boy lover waiting for her at the employees' entrance, suit case in hand.

"Come on," he said, taking her masterfully by the arm and helping her on board a trolley car.

Gertie May's friends stood wide-eyed on the curb, wondering why on earth she was being carried away like this.

"Good-bye, girls!" shouted Gertie May as the car moved on. "Wish me luck—I'm going to be married."

Of course, they didn't believe this any more than Gertie May had believed what Philander Knox said would happen when his allowance came. They thought it only one of her jokes. But the next day they found it all as true as gospel.

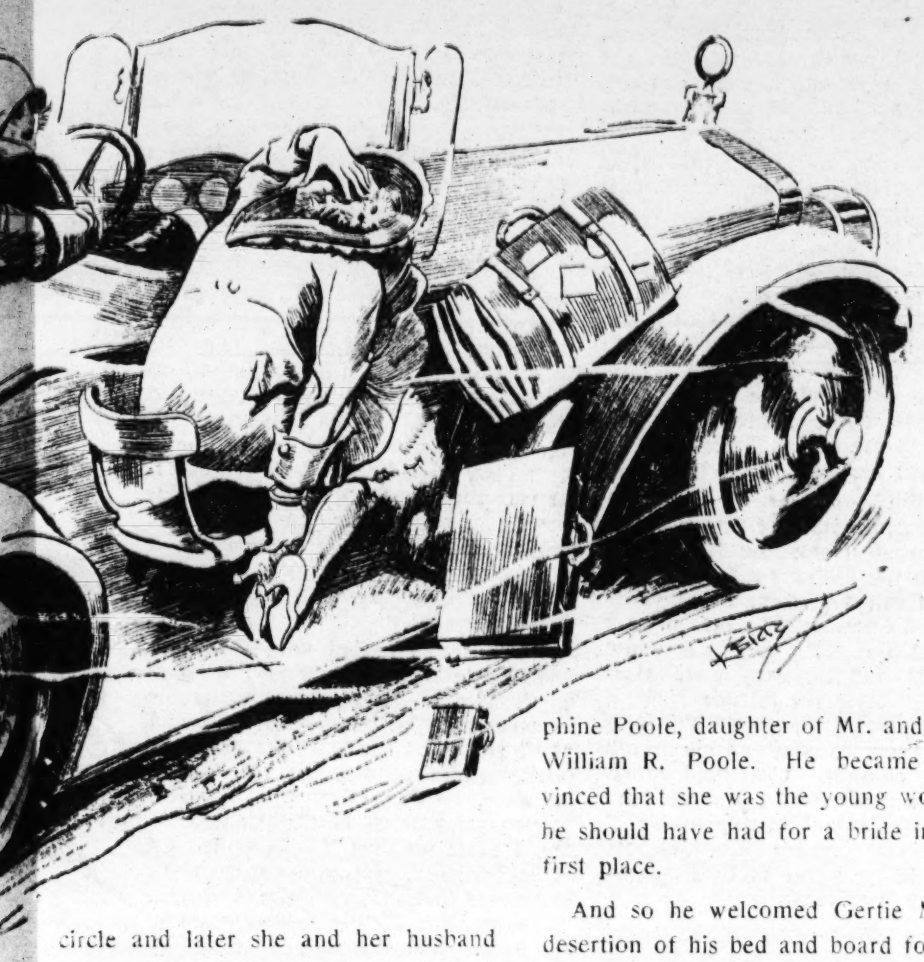

After some difficulty owing to their extreme youth the lovers had really been married.

Naturally, there was a tremendous explosion of wrath and dismay in the Knox family when young Philander revealed what he had done. It was rumored that the boy would be disinherited.

But when the Knox parents saw

But He Must "Settle Up"

what a charming specimen of girlhood their son had carried away from the Providence store they relented and became quite forgiving. Gertie May was welcomed into the aristocratic family circle and later she and her husband accompanied the secretary of state on his memorable tour of South America.

For a time it looked as if the youthful match was going to be an enduring success. The young husband, however, soon began to show the same unwillingness to "settle down" of which his second wife now complains.

The first public hint of the trouble in the honeymooners' home came when Knox suddenly skipped off to Bermuda, leaving his bride to face unpaid bills for rings, necklaces and other pretty things which he had lavished on her in their love's first warm flush. The jewelers finally had to sue to get their money.

After Knox's return things didn't get any better. Pretty soon the love nest was deserted again—this time by the young wife. Although she was careful to take along all the jewels and Paris gowns and other costly things her husband had given her, she announced that it was only a temporary separation.

"A little absent treatment will do Philander good," she confided to friends.

But Gertie May did not understand her husband so well as she thought. She never dreamed that before she was fairly out of Washington he would be laying his plans to settle down—with a brand-new love mate.

During the recent months of quarreling with his shop girl bride, Knox had been much attracted to Miss Josephine Poole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Poole. He became convinced that she was the young woman he should have had for a bride in the first place.

And so he welcomed Gertie May's desertion of his bed and board for the opportunity it gave him to get a divorce and save a lot of expenses "settling up."

By the time Knox was ready to start for Reno his future matrimonial plans were so well settled that he took Josephine Poole and her mother along with him. His "Reno or Bust" expedition became a merry family party, joined later by the father of the new bride-to-be. And when the Nevada court finally freed Knox from his shop girl wife he promptly rewarded Josephine Poole for having kept him company all those tedious months by slipping a wedding ring on her finger.

Then everybody felt sure that Knox was at last going to "settle down." And why shouldn't he? He was getting past the age of wild oats sowing and at last he had a wife whose social and educational background left nothing to be desired.

The birth of first one son and then another to the newlyweds strengthened the belief that his new matrimonial venture was a brilliant success.

Not very long after the stork's second visit, however, rumors began to float about that Knox was not getting on any better with his present wife than he had with her predecessor.

That there was foundation for all these stories was proved the other day when Mrs. Knox burst into court seeking a separation and separate maintenance. Intemperance and cruelty were the grounds for her suit.

Through her attorney she alleged that "four years ago he (Knox) started drinking and was frequently intoxicated and that he treated plaintiff and their children with systematic cruelty."

In June of this year, she declared, he struck her, knocking her down and injuring her.

"After this assault," she added, "plaintiff feared for her life and safety and therefore found it necessary to leave the home of the defendant, Philander C. Knox, and take up her residence with her mother at Charleston, West Virginia, where she is at present making her home with her two children.

The court agreed with Mrs. Knox's contention that there wasn't any use in trying to live any longer with a man who wouldn't "settle down" any better than her husband. It granted her the separation and ruled that Knox must "settle up" for the maintenance of her and the children at the rate of $4,000 a year.

And now everybody is speculating as to whether the separation will end in a divorce and, if so, what amount of alimony Mr. Knox will have to settle up."

The first Mrs. Knox—the pretty Providence, R. I., shop girl with whom he eloped when she was only fifteen and he was still in prep school

Although Knox has plenty of money, he does not like to part with it any better than most rich men do. He has never had to work—a fact which may account for his unwillingness to "settle down" and behave himself as two different wives have thought he should.

The young man's mother, widow of the former secretary of state

Mrs. Knox refuses to say whether or not she plans to punish her husband still further or whether she will consider a reconciliation.

As for Mr. Knox, he has vanished from view. His fine residence in the fashionable Washington suburb of Cleveland Park is deserted except for a few close-mouthed servants, who insist that they don't know where their master has gone or when he will return.

Can it be that, before his second marriage venture is fairly ended, he is arranging a third?

The Gates of Doom : The Story of the

ODDSLIFE!" swore Lord Carteret. "I suspected yesterday that he required Sir John's pardon for purposes of coercion with the lady. I did not know that the betrothal stood annulled. But you have made all clear to me. My Lord Pauncefort shall be taught a lesson that will last him all his life. As for you, sir, it remains for you to see to't that the lady's credulity is not abused as mine has been. I could desire no better agent than yourself. That rascal Pauncefort is to marry her this evening."

The captain's self-possession all deserted him on the instant. He changed color; his eyes dilated.

"This—this evening!" he faltered.

"Do not be alarmed," his lordship smiled. "You will be in time to prevent it." He resumed his seat. Under an exterior now of habitual iciness, anger still raged fiercely in Lord Carteret's bosom at the thought that he should have been no more than a tool—as he was forced to infer—in the hands of that spy whom he despised. Thus Lord Pauncefort was overwhelmed by the peril that ever threatens a traitor. The very hand that hires such men to do their work is the very first to turn against them at the suggestion that they betray their present as they betrayed a former trust.

"Even were I too late to prevent, I should not be too late to amend it," said the captain through his teeth. But the statesman held up a hand in warning.

"Do not misapprehend me, Captain Gaynor. Do not assume that I am sanctioning any such step as you have in mind. All that I desire is that you intervene in time to save a lady from marrying a blackguard. The rest you can very safely leave to others." He paused, then added: "If this wedding does not take place tonight, the world will be little troubled by my Lord Pauncefort hereafter." Then, taking up a pen, and speaking in a brisk voice: "I will issue an order for Sir John Kynaston's instant release," he announced, "and yourself, sir, shall be the bearer of it. Possibly Sir John may see fit to accompany you to Woodlands. Possibly, also he may show a proper gratitude for the very timely service you have rendered him in returning so opportunely from your wanderings."

HE wrote rapidly, almost whilst speaking; then, having sanded the document, he rose, and handed it to Captain Gaynor.

"There is the order," he said. He turned to Mr. Templeton and desired him to stay for a word in private, and then he escorted the other two as far as the hall.

"You were seeking an appointment in the colonies, sir, I understand," he said to the captain at parting, "but no doubt you will be changing your mind on that score if you think of marrying. If not, pray command me."

Captain Gaynor thanked him, and took his leave. But as he went down the steps of the mansion, arm in arm with Sir Richard:

"Whatever betide me," said he, "I'll never abide in England. Ye did me an ill turn in sending me hither, Dick. 'Tis too unsettled a country; too full of plottings and schemings and intrigues to suit my simple nature."

"I think you're right," said Sir Richard. "You men of action are no match for schemers."

"Ay, ay!" said the captain sadly, and he shook his head. Presently he sighed. "Heigho!" And Sir Richard was not to guess that this was regret for dissimulation and intrigue of a singularly subtle sort—a regret occasioned by the reflection that for his very life's sake—and for the sake of others—he dare not tell the truth to this good fellow and best of friends, who was so uplifted to know him alive and well."

"I am coming to Woodlands with you tonight," said Sir Richard presently, "to see the end of this affair."

Woodlands, my Lord Pauncefort's seat in Surrey, was a handsome, red brown Tudor mansion, situated in a park of some two hundred acres, within a couple of miles to the north of the town of Guildford.

His lordship had dined late on that July evening, for he had been late in arriving from town, and even then, ere he would dine, he must perform an elaborate toilet as befitted the bridegroom he hoped to be ere the night was out. He went below at length, an elegant, resplendent figure in a suit of gray satin with silver lace and dark purple linings; his pearl-grey stockings were decorated with ramifications of silver thread; diamonds hung like prismatic drops of water in the fine Mechlin lace of his cravat, and his long, graceful hands were almost hidden in his ruffles; buckles of French paste flashed on his shoes, and he wore a powdered tie-wig of the newest mode, which emphasized the swarthy male beauty of his face.

When he stepped at last into the long paneled dining room, where the Rev. Thomas Pugh—the seedy hedge parson he had brought from London—waited impatiently with his hunger, the clergyman had gasped his admiration of so very dazzling an apparition, and had all but forgotten his inner gnawings in the feasting of his eyes. And had my Lord Pauncefort been at pains to find a foil that should throw his own splendor into greater relief, no selection could have been more happy than that of this squat fellow, black as a crow in his rusty parson's livery, his lantern jaws blue from the razor.

His lordship ate but little, and spoke still less during the repast. He was in a state of obvious nervousness; vexed by the incompleteness of his preparations and anxious lest he should fail to ruffle through and conquer Damaris in spite of this.

THE dinner came to an end; the cloth was raised and the candles were lighted; still the two men sat on, over their wine now, with but little talk passing between them. Pauncefort reclined in his chair, frowning gloomily at the globular decanter of port, from which the candles struck fire, so that it glowed like a gigantic carbuncle. The long windows stood open to the stifling air, and the twilight sky was of a velvet blackness streaked with a fading but ominous purple. Not a breath stirred. The candles in their gilt sconces on the wainscoting burned steadily, throwing long shafts of reflection upon the polished timbers of the dark brown floor.

At last, from the distance, faintly came the sound of hoofs. It approached rapidly, and with it now came the grinds of wheels advancing up the avenue. His lordship listened, and he seemed to have ceased to breathe. His eyes glowed feverishly. She came at last!

"I think 'twill be the bride," ventured the parson timidly—for these long spells of silence and the moodiness of his host were fretting his ill conditioned nerves.

My lord paid no heed to him; so the reverend gentleman sipped his wine and uneasily eyed his companion from under shaggy brows.

The carriage halted. Unable longer to remain still, his lordship rose, thrusting back his tall chair. He glanced at the timepiece on the overmantel. It wanted a few minutes to nine; and nine was the hour appointed. This trifling earliness augured well, he thought.

The door opened quietly behind him. He swung round in sudden, trembling eagerness to face the liveried servant who entered, and to receive an announcement which was as a shower of cold water upon his feverish impatience.

"Mr. Suarez is here, my lord, asking to see you."

"Suarez?" His lordship's voice rasped harshly with sudden anger. Yet his dilating eyes and loosened mouth were evidences of still another emotion. "Suarez?" he repeated.

"I told him, my lord, that your lordship could see no one tonight. But he insists that his business is of the greatest urgency."

"And so it is, my lord," came a deep voice from behind the servant, and immediately the heavy figure and bovine face of the usurer made its appearance in the doorway.

He had followed the lackey, determined to force himself into his lordship's presence and fearing that did he wait for permission he might wait in vain.

The servant attempted now to detain him: but it was too late. The Jew thrust the fellow contemptuously aside, and rolled into the room.

"What do you want?" his lordship challenged him. His face was white with anger and his eyes were murderously set upon the intruder.

"Vat do I vant?" echoed Mr. Suarez, his manner excited and his speech thick with passion. "Vat do I vant? I vant a deal, my lord, I promise you. To begin vit', I vant an explanation."

"By God!' swore his lordship. "Ye're a daring rogue to thrust yourself in here in this fashion."

THE other waved a fat, powerful hand. "Bah! I don't vant vords, and I don't vant ugly names. I charge for ugly names, my lord, and the rate of interest on t'em is heavy. Shall I speak before t'ese?" And he waved his hand again, to indicate servant and parson. "Or vill you see me alone? 'Tis all one to me," he added contemptuously.

His lordship considered the man an instant, mastering his rage. Then he turned to the servant.

"Leave us," he said shortly, "and you, too, Pugh. Go wait in the library."

The parson finished his wine, and departed with the servant.

Suarez looked on, a sneer on his heavy face. "Ha!" he commented. "Very 'igh and mighty! Ve-ry lordly for a damned pauper!"

Israel Suarez, proud of his Jewish blood, had naught but contempt for those who despised it. Being enormously wealthy and knowing the power of wealth, he used that power remorselessly, and upon none so remorselessly as upon those who dared to show their scorn of him on the score of race. To these he repaid contempt with contempt, insult with insult; and since he had power on his side, his contempt and his insult usually proved the more hurtful and crushing in the end.

In appearance he had almost the air of a man of fashion, saving perhaps that with his natural taste for oriental splendor he rather overdressed the part. His claret colored coat was stiff with gold lace, as was the crimson waistcoat under it, every button of which was a ruby of price. Brilliants flashed in his lace neckwear and on two fingers of each hand. A gold hilted sword hung at his side.

Massive and powerful of frame, with large liquid eyes, a pendulous nose, and a shaven olive tinted skin, this Spanish Jew was a somewhat extraordinary and compelling personality. The consciousness of power he derived from his vast wealth lent him a forceful air. Obviously he was not a man with whom it would be safe to trifle. Save for a trouble with the aspirate, the "w" and the "th," his English was fluent and good.

My Lord Pauncefort had made the mistake of undervaluing him. He had trifled with him; he was trifling with him now, running a scornful, critical eye over the man's person and apparel, and expressing his contempt for one and the other by the deliberate curl of his lip.

The Jew's watchful eyes observed all this. His answer to it was not long delayed. He strode to the table, and poured himself a glass of port without hesitation or "by your leave." He tasted it, smacked his lips and paused appraisingly.

"'Tis a good vine," he said, with marked satisfaction. "I 'ope I 'ave a good stock of it in my cellar 'ere."

"What the devil do you mean—damn you!" said Pauncefort.

Mr. Suarez coolly drained the glass, and sat down unbidden, leaving his lordship standing.

"I suppose I can drink my own vine in my own 'ouse vit'out explanations to you—damn you!" he answered in the same tone. He had his anger under control now. Indeed, although by nature of a hot and fiery temper, he was your deadly fellow who knows how to be cold in the expression of it.

And then, before Pauncefort had recovered from that blow, Suarez crisply added enough to show his business there that night.

"You see, I've 'ad vord from my Lord Carteret t'at 'is varranty for you is vit'drawn. So my man Cohen is in possession of your 'ouse in town and I am 'ere. I 'ave a varrant in my pocket and t'ree men vit' me—in t'e 'all now. An agent of mine is on 'is vay to your place in Yorkshire. Ye see, I vaste no time." He smiled up at his lordship, who was too stricken to answer him. Presently he resumed. "You owe me t'irty t'ousand pounds, my lord. Voodlands 'ere vill bring four t'ousand; your 'ouse in town perhaps t'ree, and your Yorkshire estate seven or eight t'ousand vhen I sell it. For t'e rest I must take your body until you or your friends see a vay to ransom it. Now you know vat I vant," he leered. "Now you know vat a damned impudent rogue I am, t'rusting myself into my own 'ouse, eh!"

PAUNCEFORT leaned heavily against the overmantel to steady his trembling body. He was limp. His blood turned to water. Of all that the money lender had said, but one sentence remained with his lordship. This sentence he echoed now in a husky voice.

"Lord Carteret has withdrawn his warranty!"

"Just so," said Mr. Suarez. "Myself I marvel t'at he ever gave it."

"But—" faltered Pauncefort, ceasing to wonder or to seek a cause for this, and coming straight to the urgent effect of it, "but even so! What does it matter?"

"It matters just t'irty t'ousand pounds," said Mr. Suarez. "You know t'at not'ing but his lordship's varranty has kept me from claiming my own t'is mont' past."

"But my marriage is to take place tonight," cried his lordship. He was white and drops of perspiration stood upon his shallow brow—that one deplorable feature of his handsome face.

And now Mr. Suarez returned the other's late silent sneer of his apparel.

"Ah!" said he, sneering in his turn. "Ye look very festive, codso! A very pretty fellow in your bridegroom finery!"

His lordship attempted to stiffen, but failed. The other was too much the master of this situation.

"You know—it is your business to know—the wealth of Miss Hollinstone. Is not that warranty enough for you?"

"T'at? Pish! No marriage prospects are varranty enough for me, as you vell know. Not only vould I not advance you a shilling on such prospects, but t'ey vould never have kept me from foreclosing on you if you 'adn't obtained me Lord Carteret's varranty that you vould be in a position to pay, failing which, your estates and your person—"

"But, my God! you'll give me until tomorrow?"

"Not an 'our," said Suarez. "Vhy should I?"

"Because you'll be a fool if you don't."

Suarez laughed shortly. "I vas never a fool yet in business, my lord. Never!"

* * * * *

LORD PAUNCEFORT advanced to the table and flung himself into a chair. He faced Mr. Suarez with the board between them. He leaned across and his white, clammy face glistened in the golden candlelight.

"Suarez," he said, "consider, pray, that all I have had from you in actual cash does not amount to over fifteen thousand pounds. You hold Woodlands, my town house and my place in Yorkshire, and you know—in spite of what you have said—that they will yield more than that sum."

"Ye don't suppose I should 'ave advanced the money unless I vas satisfied of t'at? Or do you imagine money lending to be a philant'ropy, my friend? It is a risky business, and in risky businesses the profits must be heavy to compensate. And ye leave out of all account the interesht my money vould 'ave yielded me elsewhere."

"'Tis you leave that out of account when you come here with a warrant to seize my person. If you seize me you'll never see your filthy interest."

Mr. Suarez closed one eye. "T'ere's t'e interesht from the entailed property," he reminded his lordship. "It is close upon fifteen 'undred pounds a year. Now, nicely lodged in the fleet, my lord—and ve'll make you as comfortable as you can expect—you can live luxuriously on fifty pounds a year."

"D'ye mean I'm to spend ten years in a spunging house?" roared his lordship, turning savage.

"Rather more," said Suarez, with pursed lips. "Interesht will be running on the unpaid balances, ye see. But your lordship is very 'ealthy, and should easily last the time."

"Suarez," raged his lordship, "ye're a dirty Jew."

"Pauncefort," answered Mr. Suarez imperturbably, "ye're a dirtier Christian to incur debts ye cannot meet."

His lordship leaped to his feet as if he had been struck. To be insulted by this scum of Israel! It was past endurance, past belief!

He was unarmed at the moment, or assuredly he would have drawn upon the fellow. As it was, his hand flew to his side where his sword should have hung. The Jew watched the movement with a cold smile. With a steady hand he poured himself another glass of wine.

"I vonder," he said, smiling reflectively, "vhen your lordship vill learn t'at unprofitable insult is t'e sport of foois? I am endeavoring to teach you." He drained his glass, and rose. "Shall ve be going now?" he asked, and his question had all the ring of a command.

Pauncefort steadied himself, his hands upon the table, leaning so heavily that his knuckles showed white as marble.

"Going?" he echoed.

"Did I not say t'at I 'ave a varrant for you in my pocket and t'ree men to execute it for me? Ye'd never be so mad as to try resistance!"

"D'ye mean—" His lordship moistened his lips. "D'ye mean ye'll take me now—now? That ye'll not wait until tomorrow; until I am married and can repay you?"

"Married?" sneered the Jew. "D'ye still seek to bubble me vit t'at?"

"Bubble you? It's the truth, man."

Mr. Suarez considered him with brooding eye. "If it vere the trut', vy did Lord Carteret vit-draw his varranty for you? Pshaw!"

"It is the truth, nevertheless," the viscount insisted vehemently. "I await the lady now."

BUT Suarez was still incredulous. "To be sure you do," said he. "But I t'ink a bird in t'e 'and is vort'—"

"Listen, Suarez," cried the other desperately. "Leave me free to make this marriage, and you shall be paid in full by Monday next if not before. More, from now until the debt is liquidated I'll pay you further interest at the rate of a thousand pounds a day."

Now this was business, and to business Mr. Suarez could listen. Also the earnestness of the proposal seemed to argue that, indeed, his lordship counted upon being married. But, on the other hand, he might be counting upon something very different. It might be a ruse to elude the money lender and flee the country. He did not trust this gentleman who had manifested slipperiness already in the past. So he sighed over the offer, and shook his head.

"I'll make it two thousand—two thousand a day!" his lordship clamored.

But now the money lender's every doubt was dispelled. He laughed.

"Ye're over reckless to be 'onest," he said. "Ye're lying about t'is marriage."

A sound in the stillness of the night caught his lordship's ears. His face flushed suddenly.

"Am I lying?" he cried. "Am I?" He was almost exultant. "Listen!" And he flung an arm towards the open window and the night beyond.

Mr. Suarez heard the sounds of a carriage coming up the avenue.

"That will be Miss Hollinstone," his lordship announced with confidence.

The usurer stared at him for a long moment in silence.

"D'ye still doubt me?" cried Pauncefort. "D'ye still think that no marriage will take place? Why, man, did ye not see the parson here? Why else should I have sat at table with that crow?"

It was, indeed, something whose significance the Jew had overlooked. Quietly he resumed his seat at the table.

"I'll stay to see," he announced. His lordship heaved a sigh of relief, and fell to mopping his brow. A pause followed, ended at last by Mr. Suarez. "Two thousand pounds a day further interesht you proposed, I think," he said.

"Yes, yes," was the eager assent.

"I'll consider the proposal," said Mr. Suarez coolly.

"Will you, by God!" cried Pauncefort, who was rapidly recovering from his terror. "Ye'll accept it now, or ye'll refuse it."

"T'en I'll refuse it," said Mr. Suarez.

"No, no! I meant not that! Consider it, sir, by all means. But decide quickly—for heaven's sake!"

Mr. Suarez laughed. "Ye're all 'ot and cold in a moment," he sneered. "If I consider it at all, 'tis purely to oblige you. Vell, vell—"

The servant entered, and his lordship turned to him a white, excited face.

"Miss Hollinstone has arrived, my lord."

Pauncefort flashed a glance of triumph upon the usurer. "Well?" he demanded. "You accept?"

"Ye-es—when I am sure of t'e business vich brings t'e lady."

Lord Pauncefort stared at him. Then, in disgust: "Ye're a reckless fellow, Suarez!" he said.

"I 'ave to deal vit' so many rogues," said Suarez in explanation. Then he looked towards the servant. "Ah?" said he significantly.

"Wait without," barked his lordship, and the man vanished, closing the door.

"You tell me t'at the lady comes to marry you now?" Suarez questioned.

"Yes," answered his lordship. "You saw the parson."

"Ah! Vell, t'en, my lord, you shall 'ave t'is chance. I vill accept your proposal if t'e marriage takes place tonight, and I, myself, am one of t'e vitnesses."

PAUNCEFORT glared at him between impatience and anger. But he mastered his feelings. "Be it so," he consented. "Meanwhile, will you join the parson in the library, and wait there until the ceremony is to be performed?" And catching a fresh look of doubt in the money lender's eye: "You can place one of your men outside that door, another under the window, and another," he added, sneering, "on the roof, if you please, to see that I don't go up the chimney. Arm them, and thus you should be sure that I shall not escape you."

Mr. Suarez bowed. "Very good," was all that he answered.

Pauncefort, alone in the dining room, with pulses throbbing, partly from anticipation and partly from the stress of the recent interview, awaited the coming of Damaris.

Mr. Suarez had left him shaken and rather dazed. He realized that, after all, he might be unable to constrain Damaris into the wedding, seeing that he could not produce the pardon, which was the price agreed upon.

He beat down his fears almost angrily. He crossed to the massive sideboard and poured himself a glass of brandy to quiet his tremors. Scarce had he drained it when the door opened and, in wimple and hood, Damaris stood before him.

He sprang to meet her, at once the eager lover with no thought in the world that was not of herself.

"My dearest Damaris!" was his greeting, and he would have caught her to him but that something in her face and bearing held him off as if a barrier stood between them.

She was very pale, and under her eyes there were dark lines that told of the anguish in her soul. She stood erect and with a calm that was something like the calm of the martyr in the hour of doom. Her long, black cloak had fallen open, disclosing a deep purple gown below. He observed it, and almost shuddered at the omen of such colors on a bride.

"You have obtained Sir John's pardon, my lord?" she asked him.

"I have," he answered promptly.

She drew a deep breath, and for a moment closed her eyes. It was almost as if his answer occasioned her a shock—as if she had hoped that he would fail. Though, had he answered in the negative, it is possible that she would have experienced a stab no less acute. Before her had lain a choice of evils so terrible that the abiding one must ever seem the worse because the more imminent. In either case must she have steeled herself to resignation.

She held out a hand. "Let me see it," she begged, her voice expressionless.

He showed no slightest hesitation, such as might convey to her that all was not as he would have her believe.

Many movie celebrities crowded the floor or sat at tables in the grove. Lew Cody in striped flannel trousers and dark coat was with Mrs. Mae Ayer, who wore a henna silk cape over a black satin gown with a small satin hat of henna and black. Lew rarely, if ever, appears in a tuxedo, as it has gotten to be sort of a stage uniform with him and he doesn't like to be going out in his working clothes.

Greta Nissen in black lace over white was present. Claire Windsor and Bert Lytell, Claire in white chiffon over a flesh slip were giving a party. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Borzage, Mrs. Borzage all in white, were dancing. Mickey Neilan, alone since Blanche Sweet has gone to New York, was chatting with Lew Cody. Estelle Taylor, in a Paris creation with a white beaded waist and full black skirt of chiffon with black suspender-like straps was with Jack Dempsey, her husband, for dinner.

Much joy is being felt in Hollywood that the accident in which Zasu Pitts was injured had not turned out as badly as at first feared. Louise Fazenda, busy on her new picture "Compromise," and her two new houses that she is building, spent much of Friday with red eyes, waiting for news of Zasu, who is a dear chum of years.

ALL along the line of the Dixie and National highways between Atlanta and Macon it is confidently believed that every foot of the way will be paved within five years. The completion of the paving to Jonesboro will give a considerable stretch of paved road at the northern end of the Macon-Atlanta highway. Every foot of the highway in Spalding county is paved. Recently a stretch of paving was laid at Forsyth. Fulton and Bibb counties have already done their part in paving. The interesting opinion is expressed that within 20 years the highway between Atlanta and Macon will be practically one continuous procession of homes. One thing is sure, there will be a tremendous amount of home building on this heart-of-Georgia highway.

Answers to the Young Women Who Require Fifty a Week as Marriage Minimum

A COUPLE of weeks ago I printed in this column the verdict rendered by the young women of an insurance company in Newark, N. J., on the salary a young man should have before they would consent to marry. Fifty dollars a week was the minimum, according to the business girls' answers to a questionnaire.

The verdict was not a popular one, judging from the protests that reach me. I came in for a good deal of censure for taking sides with the girls. My argument was based on the theory that if a girl has $50-a-week tastes, she would need that much to make her home successful. Another point was the fact that girls who begin to work at 14, 15 and 16 have had a pretty exhausting career by the time they have reached 24, 26 and 28, and when they marry they cannot be blamed for wanting some sort of rest, some sort of security. And the only security of this sort that can be had is through an adequate income.

Another thing, the girl who has been earning and has been able to provide herself with a few little luxuries, and a few of the pleasures of life, is going to find it harder to adjust herself to sacrifices than one without this experience.

It is the penalty of present-day civilization that business girls' tastes are what they are and economic conditions are what they are. And it is one of the greatest tragedies of present-day life that many young men are prevented from marrying because of limitations in their weekly earnings.

However, arguments based on hard-headed pay envelope calculations are subject to utter annihilation where love and sacrifice enter. Of this I have evidence aplenty in the letters of protest on the $50 a week demand.

There are girls, thousands of them, just as willing to make sacrifices today as their grandmothers were, just as willing to buy remnants and make their own dresses, just as willing to scrub and clean, to bake and economize in every conceivable way, just as unselfish and just as noble. It was vastly worth while producing the New Jersey business girls' demand if merely to prove this.

Here is a woman on $32 a week, with two children, who manages to put away $1 a week for a rainy day. She is happy, too. The children are healthy because they have good food to eat. Another is doing even better on $35 a week, with four children.

R. A. R. has been married one and a half years. Her husband is making $39 a week. Until three months ago he made only $37. They have $1,500 in the bank and a real estate lot worth $500 paid for. They have furniture enough and good enough, though it is not the very best, says R. A. R., but it is all paid for.

"When we were married we had $400 between us," she writes. "Of course, I have worked the year and a half, along with my husband, and we have saved what we could without sacrificing at all.

"I stayed at home for two months after we were first married, during which time I managed on the $37 and saved $60. We paid $40 rent, and stove heat, of course, and we believe in eating. I perhaps would not have been able to save quite that much if I had had to pay for coal during those two months; still I felt I was doing pretty well, considering.

"Now we pay $50 rent, furnish our own heat, pay $75 a year for insurance, and still I figure that were I at home I could save at least $25 a month without skimping on anything, either. And I do quite a bit of entertaining, which is not considered easy to do on small salaries these days.

"You see it is being done, and can be done, if the girl and the fellow will only put forth efforts to get along on what the husband makes. We are as happy as can be, have all the clothes we need and want, and really think we have done marvelously, considering we have been married only one and a half years.

"Since I have been working I have made $100 a month, otherwise we would not have had more than $400 or $250 in the bank."

Mr. S. Hannon, another correspondent, calls my attention to the fact that the government statistics on income tax returns show over 90 per cent of the wage earners make less than $2,000 a year. One person out of seventy-five has an income of $4,000 a year, and 53 per cent of the wage earners of the United States make $25 a week or less. The largest employers of labor in the United States, the railroads, show an average earning of all employees to be less than $1,700 a year.

"In other words," says Mr. Hannon, "there are less than ten wage earners out of every hundred that earn $50 a week or more, and I would assume they have been in service some time and most of them are probably married. Certainly the majority of them are not in the young man class, and therefore are not available to young ladies looking for husbands.

"This being the case, will you please explain to me, assuming there are an equal number of marriageable young men and women, what the girls are going to do when the ten fifty-a-week men out of the hundred are married? It seems to me there will be a lot of old maids in this country if girls follow the advice to demand $50 a week.

"As a matter of fact, printing stuff like that does a lot of damage. It leads young married women whose husbands do not make $50 a week to feel that their husbands are not as efficient as other men and causes discontent, with disastrous results.

"On the latter point, I'm not much worried. They are not the kind who would be easily swerved from the duty they have imposed upon themselves. They are made of better, sterner material. Outside influence does not affect them, else it would have shown earlier in the game. Temptations to become discontented have been all about them, all the time. They're bigger than any temptations."

As the evidence stands now, the answer to how much salary must a man have is not in the pay envelope's makeup, but in the makeup of the two who are to share it. What is one couple's necessity is another's bank balance.

plays the heroine in a way that makes you have more respect for heroines in general. Let it be emphatically said, the ladies in this show do not rely merely on this pulchritude to win you, but act quite well throughout.

I am sorry the author found it necessary to turn his comedy into melodrama before he got through, for as a melodrama, "The Morning After" still remains a good comedy. I might even go so far as to suggest your including it on the "Must" list when you come up.

THE William McKenzies, after a few weeks with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis at "Ellislea," the Ellis' summer place at Narragansett Pier, have recently been in New York for a few days. While here, they were the guests of their uncle, Mr. Kenneth Murchison, Mrs. Ellis' brother, at his home on Park Avenue. This, I believe, is the first time Frances and Bill have together been in New York since their honeymoon some few years ago.

The Charles Ormes have also been in these parts of late, in fact judging from the recent New York appearances of the Godfrey MacDonalds, the "Bus" Bruners, the Orme Campbells and the McKenzies, I would say Atlanta's younger married contingent see nothing wrong with New York as a place to come to. Emory Flynn is also in the regions for a visit. I have heard on several occasions that none other than Richard Hull (himself) of Atlanta is planning an eastern trip, but as yet I have not heard the fanfare of trumpets which would most assuredly announce his arrival.

I have recently seen one Atlanta man who asked "for certain reasons" why I did not mention having seen him in New York. However, from what I have learned of human nature, I believe this was merely his way of letting me know he'd like to see his name in capital letters as having been here. Accordingly I cannot overlook this opportunity of being disagreeable by refusing to list him as "among those present."

THE Marquis Gloria and her title bearing husband are now comfortably esconced in New York. Miss Swanson is beginning to film "Stage Struck" in the Paramount Astoria Studios. At an early date I am going out to be presented to the Marquis, and at that time "will write you more about it." Opposite Miss Swanson in the new picture is Lawrence Gray, the young leading man "whose meteoric rise" as they say in the trade journals "has been phenomenal." By the way, when you see Norma Shearer in "A Slave of Fashion" be sure that you notice the boy she makes friends with in the theater scene, for he, William Haines, is the chap whom rumor has it is Pola Negri's favorite boy friend these days.

THE thing which puzzled me most about the summer edition of "Ziegfeld's Follies" is detecting just wherein they differ from the spring edition. In one or two places, of course, particularly in the opening and the finale, but with the exception of a few new songs and skits, it's just like the spring edition.

In no sense of the word am I complaining, however, for the spring edition was as good a show as I ever want to see, and furthermore one I'd be willing to see spring, summer, fall and winter. You would, too. W. C. Fields is just as funny as ever, so is Ray Dooley, and Will Rogers' chatter is not to be overlooked. None of the Ziegfeld beauties have acquired any superfluous weight or clothes since I last saw them and Dorothy Knapp's figure is still deserving the Pultizer prize.

There's a new finale to the show which is more beautiful than any I've ever seen. Each costume has on it enough plumes to trim yours, Aunt Margaret's, and Cousin Hazel's hats for years to come. After seeing this scene, I wonder if there's an ostrich left with a tail. The "Toddle Along" number, one of the spring edition hold-overs, is as haunting a melody as ever and a piece which begs to be whistled. "The Follies" should still be included among the first shows you are to see. You'll find it still in vogue when you get back home to say, "Yes, um hum, I saw the new Follies and — I beg your pardon, I thought hearts were trumps."

This is as good a time as any, I suppose, to suggest that you be the one out of ten who realizes the second syllable of Mr. Ziegfeld's name is spelled as well as pronounced "feld" and not "field" as the other nine are bent on pronouncing it.

I do not exactly understand what Mary Louise Spas meant when she said, "I am going to get even with the world for the way they've treated me. I am going into the movies." Can it be that "the former Miss Browning," who knows more of her acting ability than anyone else, feels, that after her first picture has been released, she will have more than repaid the world, for anything it has done to her? Can Miss Spas' statement be a possible solution to the frequent appearances of certain actresses whose fearful performances make you wonder why they persist in staying in the movies? Is it that after each of these pictures, they derive a certain satisfaction in feeling that they have, more and more, gotten even with the world at large for whatever it may have done to them?

The Peanut Zoo is different from any zoo you have ever visited, for here you will find a spider as large as an elephant, and a great lobster that the camel would run away from.

To make this interesting zoo you will need peanuts of different sizes and shapes, wooden toothpicks, a package of pipe cleaners, light brown wrapping paper, bits of colored crepe paper, and paste. If you have water colors, buy Chinese white with which to mix them, or perhaps you have tempera colors, such as you use in school, which are better.

The secret of making these animals is in the selection of peanuts. The solemn owl needs only big, round, dark eyes, and his curved beak painted. The wings may be painted, but are better cut from paper, traced from pattern 2. You can only follow the general lines of these papers, as the peanuts will vary in size, so you will have to cut either inside, or outside the lines of the pattern to get the proper size for your particular peanut. Sew the owl onto a twig, allowing the stitches to form his toes—two on each foot being all that show.

Make the parrot of the same shaped nut as the owl, but use bright crepe paper for wings, back and tail—orange, green and red. The long tail feathers may be curled at the end by drawing them along the blade of a knife. Paste the long tail feathers on first, then a narrow strip of paper along the back, extending over the place where the tail feathers are attached, and the wings last.

The lobster and spider have bent toothpicks for legs, and pins for antennae. If you would like to have your lobster boiled, paint him bright red. The spider should be painted black and yellow.

The natural color of the peanut will do for the camel, the giraffe and the elephant. Cut your brown paper from patterns 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, the points inserted in small slits in the nut, and pasted, will be firm and likelike. The giraffe is covered with large dark brown spots.

The little pigs need small pointed ears and snouts, and toothpick or pipe cleaner legs. They may be black, white, red or spotted, according to your fancy. In choosing nuts for pigs, those with the little dried stem are best, for it is more like the curly tail than any you could make.

The plumage of the flamingo is scarlet, pink and white. Use pipe cleaners for legs, and paste on the patterns as indicated in the drawing.

These attractive birds and animals make nice favors for a party. The diagrams on this page are merely a few suggestions, for there are many others animals that will suggest themselves to you as you look at the great variety of peanuts that come in a single bag. With this page to start you off you will soon be the owner of a large Peanut Zoo and you might even build cages and houses for the animals out of cardboard and small pieces of wood. There is a lot of fun in making the animals, and everybody will be delighted with the result, if you are at all careful in your work.

HERE'S SOMETHING MY DOG DOES

"My dog will jump through a hoop. Hold a hoop about a foot high and he will run and leap through," says Ruth Collins of Wichita Falls, Texas. Ruth goes on to describe her dog. "He looks like a shaggy, long-haired collie. He is black with white legs and feet, has a white ring around his neck, white from between his fore legs up across his nose and up in a sharp point on his forehead."

Above is a picture of Ruth and her dog, as she described him.

What tricks can your dog do? Every week a picture of a clever dog and one of his stunts will be published. If your dog does any smart things you will want to tell other boys and girls about him. Write to the Dog Editor, Boys and Girls Page, in care of this paper, telling what your dog can do and giving a description of him. The most original or unusual stunts will be published with a picture of the dog drawn to match the description.

THINGS TO MAKE

THE HEAD HUNTERS OF SAN BLAS

By Jack Gihon

SYNOPSIS

Frank Mulroy and Tom Benson, with Tom's father and a white guide, Daig, have come to the San Blas region of Panama—a section reputedly filled with head hunters. While walking in the woods, the two boys are followed, and Frank, seeing a movement in a clump of bushes, fires his rifle. A moment later, a machette, a sharp steel knife with a curved blade, is thrown, and narrowly misses Tom. The two retreat, lose their bearings in the woods, and climb a tall tree in an effort to determine their position. While in the tree, two Indians advance upon them, and attempt to bring the boys down by piling burning embers at the foot of the tree.

INSTALLMENT V.

Tom looked down, and saw the flaming wood, thrown at the foot of the tree. "They'll have to do more than that, then," he said. "This is moist, green wood, and those two little firebrands won't set it afire. And if they try to put any more, we'll be ready with our rifles."

Every sense alert, the boys waited for the appearance of the Indians. They did not have long to wait. Back the Indians were coming, and again, each of them carried a firebrand, running in their zigzag course, but making directly for the tree.

Both boys lifted their rifles, and fired simultaneously. Again they fired, but neither shot took effect. And the Indians, throwing the embers at the foot of the tree, dashed back to safety in the jungle.

The smell of green wood burning reached them, and the two boys looked blankly at each other. As yet they could not appreciate any real danger from fire; this massive tree in which they were perched seemed sturdy enough to resist any advances made on it. Those few puny firebrands thrown at its roots by the Indians did not seem to have the power to destroy this great pillar. Yet already a few curling wisps of smoke were rising and spreading out in the air, and below them, they could hear the sharp crackling of fire licking its hungry tongue against green wood.

"What are we going to do?" Frank asked his comrade.

"Fly, of course," said Tom. "It looks easy enough."

"Well, one thing's a cinch. If we don't get out of here soon, we'll never be able to. We'll just sit up here and be roasted like pigs on a spit."

"Then we've got to make a dash for it," said Tom. "Maybe we'll get away and maybe—"

"But no matter what happens, we've got to get down from here," Frank broke in. "If the tree falls, with us in it, the very least we'll get will be a broken arm or leg.

They looked down into the forest, that was getting darker now; the sky was gray, with a great splash of purplish crimson where the sun was setting.

There was no trace of the two swarthy little men that were causing all this trouble for them. The boys knew from their past experiences, though that the Indians were somewhere close; at this moment, likely, peering through the heavy underbrush at the tree from which they knew the boys must descend, or be burned to a crisp in the fire that already was mounting higher.

Frank hitched his rifle to his shoulder, and rubbed his hands. "Are you ready?" Tom nodded, and swinging lithely from branch to branch, the boys began their descent. They got to the lowest branch of the tree, and stopped there a moment. Around the base of the tree a little circle of fire was burning energetically, yet still the boys were given no inkling that the Indians were in the vicinity. To all appearance, after building this fire, the Indians had given up the chase, but the boys felt that the natives were too wily for this.

"If we climb down the trunk, we'll fall into the fire," said Frank. We've got to get out on this branch and drop to the ground." The distance was about fifteen feet, an easy jump, and below was a soft, sandy soil. They both were accustomed to climbing trees; they had performed harder feats than this many times. But now there was a perilous aspect to it, and they felt, as they edged out toward the end of the branch that is was a hazardous undertaking.

It was, too, for unseen by the boys the Indians were watching every move they made. Not fifty feet away, lying flat on the ground, behind a little clump of bushes, they saw this effort to escape, and they were prepared for it. As Tom and Frank swung by their hands, and dropped to the ground, the Indians were on their feet; before the boys were able to regain their balance, the natives were upon them.

Both Tom and Frank, startled by the suddenness of the others' appearances, attempted to loosen the rifles which were strapped on their backs, but they did not have a chance. With a savage squeal of delight, one of them seized Tom; the other had his heavy powerful arms around Frank, held in a grip that the boy could not break.

The Indians were talking in an excited gibberish that neither of the boys could understand; they were grinning, too, as though pleased with the result of their chase, and in a twinkling, the two had been tied, their hands behind their backs, with a hemp rope that one of the Indians carried.

This same Indians, the one who had been injured by the rifle shot, was addressing the boys. Though they could not understand his words, they gathered that he was pronouncing vengeance upon them; he gesticulated freely, and pointed to the injury to his arm, the wound hidden now by large tropical leaves that had been bound around it.

Gazing blankly at the natives, the two boys stood passive, pale of face, and wondering what would happen next. The Indians were addressing Tom, as though he were the leader, and did not notice that Frank, his arms still tied behind his back, was edging, an inch at a time, away from the circle.

The injured Indian continued to talk; the other, as though impressed by his eloquence, stood watching him with a certain expression of admiration in his eyes. Meanwhile Tom, who was facing Frank, saw what the other was attempting to do. It was Frank's plan, apparently, to break away; to make a dash, hands bound though they were, for the density of the forest. Would he be able? The suspense of it was too much for Tom; he lowered his eyes, fearing that the others would read what was going on, in his own face.

Suddenly there was a snapping of a twig. The Indians turned suddenly, just in time to see Frank, turning on his heels, making a break for the underbrush. The Indians leaped forward to stop him; one of them, then, thinking better of it, came back to stand guard over Tom.

Tom was glad Frank had been able to escape. That the other had deserted him, left him alone to face an unknown fate, he did not believe for an instant. Somehow, now with Frank free, he felt more assurance as to the future; some way, he felt, his pal would be able to free him.

Perhaps the Indian standing guard was having the same thoughts. Suddenly he bent to the ground, picked up several twigs, and made a strange formation with them. Then, giving Tom a push, he signified for him to start walking, and pointed the direction, the Indian following in his footsteps.

Tom walked heavily as he could scuffling as he went along, with the idea of leaving tracks behind him. Yet on through the forest they walked, miles and miles, it seemed to Tom until it was pitch dark. Now the Indian was holding Tom by the shoulder, guiding the way, which seemed to be along a sort of path.

Then, suddenly, they came to a clearing, where there was a camp fire burning, and moonlight that threw into relief a few squat little thatch huts. A native or two, of the type of Tom's captor, and some women and children, came up; the Indian said a few words to them, pointing to his injured arm as he did so.

Tom was led to a tree, where he was tied, still standing, his arms behind him. The Indian disappeared into one of the huts, several others gathered around, looking at him curiously until their curiosity was satisfied and they then paid scant attention to him. The hours wore on.

But what had happened to Frank? Tom wondered; wondered whether his pal had been recaptured, or whether he had been able to make good his escape. He hoped it was the latter. For then Frank would find a way of coming back and saving him—he knew it.

His arms were beginning to hurt from the pressure of the cord around them. He wondered how long he would be held like this.

Poppy Is Known as Sleep Flower

Perhaps you would like to know something about poppies because they are the flowers for people born in August. In olden times they were thought to be the blossom of a weed of evil omen, probably because of their color which symbolizes blood. Thus they were a symbol of death to the ancients.

There is a fantastic tale told of the son of Tarquinius Superbus, that old Roman emperor. The father had taken captive a city and was uncertain whether to sell its inhabitants into bondage, so he asked the advice of his son. The Romans were at that time a stern and warlike people and the son listened scornfully to what his father said. Then, when he had finished, without a word the young officer walked into the garden of the palace and with his sword slashed the heads from a bed of poppies. In that way did he tell his father what to do with the captives of the conquered city, and his father did what his son had told him.

Later, when more was known about the poppy, the properties of poppy seeds became known. People learned how to make these seeds yield opium, and the poppy came to mean the flower of sleep. Because of this and its connection with the Orient, it now signifies languor and drowsiness. Maybe you have seen these little poppy seeds scattered over the tops of shiny breakfast rolls. You need not be afraid to eat them, however, for such small quantities can have no effect, and if you are sleepy afterward, it is only because you went to bed too late the night before.

Johnny Wattel was a disagreeable badger. His boots were always muddy and he had a nasty temper. He growled too much to have many friends, and he never combed his hair.

Johnny spent most of his time prowling in the woods for bugs and worms—he had a wonderfully strong stomach.

Mr. Nickeldick put on his glasses

One day while he was digging into a decayed log for grubs he unearthed a scrap of paper. There was writing on the paper, but Johnny couldn't read—he wouldn't go to school when he was a boy.

Johnny studied the paper for a long time. There was a map on the paper and around the edge there was some writing. Johnny was so mad because he could not read, he threw the paper on the ground and started to tramp on it with his muddy boots, but suddenly he had an idea.

"I'll take it over to Mr. Nickeldick," he growled. "He can read and maybe it might be something of value."

Johnny stuffed the paper into his dirty pocket, and ate his way over to the Nickeldick home.

He pulled the little silver knob which rang the Nickeldick doorbell. No one answered. Johnny was terribly impatient, so he lost his temper. He caught the bell knob in his two big paws and, bracing one of his short legs against the house, he gave an awful pull. The door knob was attached to the bell by a wire. The wire broke and Johnny fell backward off the Nickeldick porch into the Nickeldick flower bed. He heard the doorbell fall away back in the kitchen, so he lay in the flower bed and waited. Presently the door opened and Tilly, the colored cat, peered out.

"What you all tryin' fo' to do? Pull de house ovah?" said Tilly.

"I want to see Mr. Nickedick," growled Johnny, throwing the door knob, with about ten feet of wire attached to it, into a plum tree.

"Mistah Nickeldick is done takin' a wink of sleep," said Tilly.

"Well, call me when awakens," grumbled Johnny, and he turned over and made himself comfortable among the flowers.

"That's about de ornerist, no accountest, good fo' nothinest, mostest ungentlemanest, rumskullion badger ah ever done see," snapped Tilly.

She went into the house, gently slmming the door, so as not to waken Mr. Nickeldick. Mr. Nickeldick, however, had been awakened by the commotion, and after he had had a cup of rabbit tea he went out to see Johnny Wattel.

"This is a comfortable flower bed," grinned Johnny.

Mr. Nickeldick was somewhat vexed at the badger, but he could not help smiling, for Johnny was a funny sight, lying there in the flower bed.

"What can I do for you" asked Mr. Nickeldick.

"I want you to read this for me," said Johnny, pulling the paper out of his dirty pocket.

Mr. Nickeldick put on his nose glasses, and carefully studied the paper.

"It's a chart, Mr. Wattel, it's a a chart," said Mr. Nickeldick, looking over the top of his glasses.

"What sort of chart" asked Johnny.

"Why, a treasure chart," answered Mr. Nickeldick, who was strictly honest.

"What kind of treasure?" asked Johnny.

"It doesn't say," said Mr. Nickeldick, pulling down his ear and biting at it nervously. "It simply gives direction as to where the treasure is buried."

"Well, let's go and dig it up," suggested Johnny.

"We can't, Mr. Wattel," said Mr. Nickeldick, still nibbling at his ear.

"It wouldn't be correct to dig for treasure without first organizing a company. The treasure is buried on Mr. Slig's land, and he will have to share in the treasure. Billy Skittel will have to be taken in, for he likes to work."

Johnny agreed to Mr. Nickeldick's plans, and a meeting was decided on at once. Word was sent to Mr. Slig and Bill Skittel, and in a short time those two gentlemen arrived.

The meeting was held in Mr. Nickeldick's kitchen, as Tilly, Mr. Nickeldick's colored cat, would not allow Johnny Wattel to go into the parlor with his muddy boots.

The meeting was a success. It was agreed to start work at once, so Mr. Nickeldick slipped into an outing suit as most fitting for the occasion. The four started off with proper tools for digging treasure. They carried a pick, a shovel, a lantern, a coil of rope, and a checker board.

"What's the checker board for, may I ask?" inquired Mr Slig.

"For us to amuse ourselves if we should get tired watching Mr. Skittel dig for the treasure," answered Mr. Nickeldick.

When they arrived at the big rock, mentioned in the chart, Mr. Nickeldick took out the paper.

"Now, I'll read the direction," said he, putting on his glasses. "It says the treasure is buried twenty rat tails' length, due east, from the rock in a line with the cottonwood tree on the bank of the river and then one rabbit's jump to the south."

"Give me your knife and I'll go and get the twenty rats' tails," said Johnny, Wattel.

"What do you mean, Mr. Wattel?" gasped Mr. Nickeldick. "Do you mean you will go and cut off twenty rats' tails?"

"Sure," answered Johnny. "It won't take long—it says in the chart we've got to have 'em to measure by."

"Land sakes!" exclaimed Mr. Nickeldick, looking aghast at Billy Skittel—Mr. Slig had gone to sleep. "That isn't necessary, I can guess a rat's tail to a hair's length."

Mr. Nickeldick measured off the distance of twenty rat tails, then he gave a mighty leap to the south.

"Here's the place—right under my feet, he said, pointing at the ground. "Dig here, Mr. Skittel, dig here."

Billy Skittel set to work digging. The ground was terribly hard and he had a difficult time of it.

"Let's dig some place else," suggested Mr. Slig, who was half awake.

Mr. Nickeldick was vexed. He stamped on the ground and wiggled his ears.

"Mr. Slig, your brains are addled," cried Mr. Nickeldick. "We've got to dig where the treasure is—not just anywhere."

"It's all the same to me," answered Mr. Slig.

Billy Skittel dug and dug. It was quite tiresome for the rest, so they, started a game of checkers.

At last Billy Skittel's shovel struck something solid. Every one stared.

"Gentlemen," said Billy Skittel, "we have struck the treasure."

"Let's go home and go to bed," yawned Mr. Slig. "We can finish the work tomorrow."

No one paid a mite of attention to him, for they were peering excitedly into the hole. Billy Skittel shoveled feverishly, and presently he uncovered a white spot. Johnny Wattel jumped into the hole and clawed wildly with his great paws. Mr. Nickeldick urged them on with excited squeals. Mr. Slig lay down under a tree and went to sleep.

"It looks like a bone," cried Billy Skittel.

"It is a bone," growled Mr. Wattel.

"It's a soup bone!" exclaimed Mr. Nickeldick, peeping into the hole. Some dog has buried this bone and left that chart where you found it," cried Mr. Nickeldick, frowning at Johnny Wattel. "I ought to have known it, for the writing on that chart was a queer sort of doggerel."

Johnny Wattel was in a most quarrelsome mood, and would have liked nothing better than to have started a fight. Mr. Nickeldick, being a gentleman, had no taste for fights, so he pleaded for peace.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," he said. "This is no time for quarreling. We have had a delightful experience. We have all got our share out of the treasure hunt. I have had a delightful time, Mr. Skittel has had plenty of work, Mr. Slig has had a pleasant sleep, and you, Mr. Wattel, have got angry. What more could be expected? I suggest we go to my home and have tea."

Tools for digging treasure

Mr. Nickeldick's colored cat made wonderful tarts, so Johnny Wattel and Billy Skittel quickly accepted the invitation. They picked up the tools and set off for Mr. Nickeldick's house, leaving Mr. Slig asleep under the tree.

What's Funny?

Agent: "Sir, can I sell you an encyclopedia?"

Prospect: "I couldn't ride one if I had it."

"Mary, come and take the parrot downstairs. Your master just stubbed his toe."

Mushrooms or Oaks

How would you like to have a house built of mushrooms? Chances are it wouldn't last long—at least, not as long as would a house built of good, sturdy oak.

The mushroom springs up overnight. But the oak takes years and years to acquire its full growth.

The mushroom, fragile thing that it is, is here today and gone tomorrow. But the oak, intent on its purpose of becoming a tree, has kept on plugging, growing stronger and sturdier every day. Barring accidents, or the steel ax of the woodcutters, it will be in its same place centuries hence.

Put a few of the oak tree's principles into your own daily life. Whether you're trying to make the football team, or hoping for good grades in school, get right down to your task and stick to it until you win. Success doesn't come over night—but then, you wouldn't want to be a mushroom.

TAMPA, FLA.

Dear Members: How are you? Why me, I feel like a brand new silver dollar. Who ever got up the idea of this dandy club sure must have some brains. I am a letter writer myself, and I sure do like the ieda. I've been trying to get some more friends of mine in Tampa to join, but they hate writing letters. They are out of style. I've received a letter from a boy and I lost his card with his address. I'll bet he thinks I don't write to boys, but I DO. His Name is Ben Hunt, I think. I am not sure.

Davis Island is sure growing. The first time I went there it was small or my eyes saw wrong and now when we drive there on Sundays (some times) itt has grown more every time. All of Tampa's subdivisions are getting more beautiful every day. Beaches, when we pass them on a drive (Papa is a real estate man) to show a man out or for a pleasure drive, I can just feel that water.

I sure wish I could get more friends. I have got just a few. One is Lois Rainwater, another is Lois Hardwater and if I tell you the other that will be all. Well I will have to close right now or I will write too long a letter and it might be an airship, like I said in my first letter.

Yours truly,
DOROTHY HODGES.

P. S.—I am still a Georgia peach, even if I am among the Florida oranges. I like Georgia peaches.

CONYERS, GA.

Dear Everybody: I have been a reader of the letter writers' page for a long time. My grandfather has been taking The Constitution for about 35 years and I always read this page when I can. I am 12 years old and will be a freshman this term. I can hardly wait for school to start. I go to the Lithonia High at Lithonia, Ga. You see, I live between the two towns, Lithonia and Conyers, but it is nearer to Lithonia.

How many of my friends, I hope they are not unknown, like pets? I do, and have three, Laddie, a big collie; Lady Gray and Boots, two maltese kittens. I am crazy about them. And to read, all king's horses and all king's men can't pull me away from a good book. Favorite author, did you say? I have none unless it is Zane Grey.

Well, I hate to leave your cozy corner, but a more known writer is knocking at the door.

Lots of luck to you all.

I have a little brother 3 years old and a little sister six years old. My little sister's name is Irene and my little brother's name is Kinzel. My little playmates are Agnes and Vonice Ruth Brown. I have lots of friends at Fitzgerald. Some of their names are Evelyn Tamm, Dorothy Walker, Grace Smith. I certainly do love them.

SOUTH MILLS, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: This is the first letter I have ever written to The Atlanta Constitution, and I hopé to see it in print.

I am 13 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall and I weigh 98 pounds. I have black, bobbed hair, bluish-gray eyes, and light complexion (except for a few sun freckles.) Isn't that a horrid description.

Now, everybody that can hold a pen write to me. I promise that I'll answer all letters received.

An unknown friend.

GADSDEN, S. C.

Dear Friends of the Letter Writers Club: For the first time I thought I'd write you a letter, and here's the first one. I will tell you about myself now. I am 9 years old and I want to know who has my birthday. It is December 19. The one who has the nearest one to mine please write me a letter. I was in the fourth grade last year and will be in the fifth when school starts again. My teachers' names were Miss Nettie Alice Abney of Columbia, S. C., and Miss Mary Berry. I like them both and like going to school very much. Since I have no picture I will tell you of myself. I am four feet and one inch tall and just as all other kids, I have a few freckles. I have dark hair and real dark brown eyes. I would not weigh 35 pounds now for I have been to the hospital and am now just over bronchial pneumonia. My throat is still sore and I am still in bed.

Well, I have written a long letter and must close. I just have a few more words before saying "goodbye."

I beg some of you to write me and I will answer. I am sick. Write your country S. C. friend.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN'S WEEKLY BIBLE TALKS

present at the time and was awakened had no difficulty in recognizing the opening of the doors of the prison as something more than a natural event. Supposing that the prisoners had fled, he drew his sword and was about to kill himself. Paul saved the life of the jailor by calling to him, "Do thyself no harm: for we are all here."

When the jailor found that Paul and Silas had not taken advantage of the opportunity to escape, he fell down before them and cried, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Here was another opening for the gospel and they immediately offered him salvation through Christ. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house."

We see here the simplicity of the plan of salvation. It could be offered to a jailor in the middle of the night and it could be accepted immediately.

Paul did not suggest to the jailor that he should enter upon a long course of investigation of all the religions of the earth and compare their respective merits. It was not an intellectual process; it did not require special training or prolonged study. It was not necessary that the jailor should occupy an extended period in deliberation and he was not warned to beware of emotion. Paul did not say to him, "As the earthquake has evidently excited you, come back in a few days and we will confer with you when your mind is calm."

None of this: The jailor's heart was awakened; the supernatural events of the night had convinced him that Paul and Silas were ambassadors of the Most High. He recognized their credentials and threw himself down before them, a suppliant for the forgiveness which they were able to proclaim.

There was no delay; conversion was just as easy then as it is today—it has always been easy. Because Christianity meets human needs and is the only religion that does meet human needs, it is spreading throughout the world.

If conversion were a matter of the mind, the benefits of conversion—or, to speak more accurately, the Completeness of conversion—would depend on the mental ability of the individual and there would be degrees of salvation. But conversion is a matter of the heart and hearts act more uniformly than minds.

The heart of the child and the heart of the adult are equally able to exercise faith. The heart of the uneducated and the heart of the learned are equally able to comprehend Christ and to accept His offer of salvation. Redemption, therefore, does not depend on age or intellect or wealth; to be one with Christ is a privilege extended to all—a privilege that can be unavail themselves.
derstood by all and of which all can

Is it not strange that a salvation available for anyone, at any time, anywhere, and on a moment's notice, can be belittled after centuries of proof? Is it not unreasonable that the skeptical should ridicule it instead of trying it? "Taste and see that the Lord is good."

What a happy ending to the night! It began in cruelty to the prisoners, was followed by the despair of the jailor and concluded wiht the relieving of the pain of the former and the baptism of the latter! The dramatic and the tragic are mixed in the events of a few hours.

The jailor, converted and rejoicing, washed the wounds of Paul and Silas, and Paul and Silas baptized him and all his family. We have here another illustration of the remarkable literary perfection of the Book of Books. Where else can we find a story so thrilling set fort hin so few words? Where else does one great event tread upon the heels of another so closely and with results so important?

Note the transformation in the jailor; when the prisoners were entrusted to his care, he put them in the stocks, stolidity indifferent to their comfort and determined that they should have no change of escape. When he was merely the servant of the Roman government, he considered them felons, deserving punishment. When they became his brethren he took them, into his house, "set meat before them, and rejoiced." And why? Because they were joined together in one faith—were new creatures in Christ Jesus.

We see here, as in all other conversions, the completeness of the change that takes place in the life when the heart is changed. Before regeneration, the jailor's mind was the same as it was afterwards. It was the servant of his heart and worked just as diligently to make the apostles secure in the stocks as, after regeneration, it worked to provide the food that they needed.

It is this spiritual transformation in man that proves the power of religion and the existence of a spiritual gravitation that acts upo nthe soul of man. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he"—the words embody a truth that is just as indisputable today as it has been throughout the ages. "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still," runs the old adage, but when the will is changed the mind ceases to resist and becomes entirely submissive.

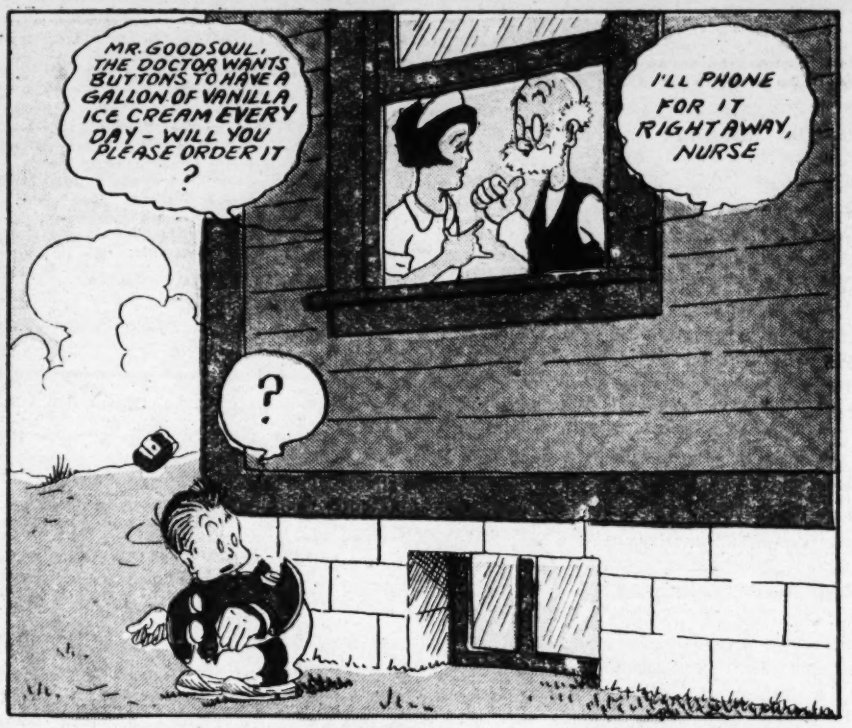

The preaching of "Christ and Him crucified" was again triumphant—no other kind of preaching can hope to be successful.

her father, a stethoscope to his ears, his white head bent, listening to the heartbeats of some stranger. She ran upstairs. How funny her room looked! Unreal. And going to the mirror, she stared at herself. "That's me! Joe Burch asked me to marry him. And never will again! Never will again!"

She took off her hat and put it in its round paper box. She folded her dress, placed it neatly in its accustomed place. She unpinned her hair. It was thick, coarse, lustrous, and it tumbled in a cascade over her shoulders. Then she knew what she had lost. Then Gerry cried.

Joe Burch kept away from the Reynoldses. Weeks and weeks passed, and every time a carriage rattled by, Gerry's heart contracted as if it were never again going to let go, as if a hand were squeezing, squeezing.

He did not come. "Funny, Joe Burch hasn't been around, Gerry. Nice fellow. They tell me he's going to buy Fillmore's acres and build."

So Gerry went back to her laurels.

When she was twenty-five no man would have been moved to imagine her with her hair down. She wore it uncompromisingly back, even when Gibson was insisting upon the part, the soft wave and the loose knot. Gerry was an old maid in a period of our social history when to be an old maid was to be despised and scorned of man. The new woman had not penetrated to Paris, although there were intimations of her arrival in Chicago. Either you were married or you were not.

Gerry had to see her contemporaries, one by one, enter the mysterious portal, lingering on the threshold, engaged, passing through into matrimony, emerging again, smug, self-satisfied, settled down. Wives. She had to submit to their smugly complacent pity and to know the bitterness of being left out because "after all, Gerry, you don't belong in the married set." She had to pretend an enthusiasm she did not feel when accosted by mothers with perambulators. "Isn't he a darling, Gerry? O, Gerry, what an awful pity——"

After all, Gerry's debut had not been hailed with enthusiasm. It had been, first and last, Maisie's triumph. But Gerry always said, "Perfectly darling!" And allowed herself to be pitied, because she knew that when these women were work-ridden and calloused, she would be in France. The dream persisted. She cherished it, hugged it to her breast. It was her compensation.

When Will died, she was twenty-eight. He said to her, that last morning, "Everything I've got is yours. This house. The furniture. My books. All the outstanding bills. Only don't collect from the Kenyons They haven't a red cent." He groped for her hand. "You're a good girl, Gerry. I hope you'll marry."

She did not remind him that she was a genius and that art would claim her. She kissed him and cried as if her heart would break.

After the funeral she thought, "Now I can go. There is nothing to hold me."

The doctor had always forgotten whatever had no importance for him. The house, Gerry discovered, was mortgaged. The furniture was worthless. And since Will had never kept track of his affairs, there were no "outstanding" bills.

So Gerry went to work at the public library. Out of pity, remembrance, perhaps, of Will Reynolds' thirty years of service, an office was created for his daughter. This could not happen in cities larger and less pitiful than Paris. It is even possible that it could not happen at all, anywhere, today. Joe Burch, the Kennedys, the Sanford brothers were members of the library board. They put their heads together and offered Gerry the post of art curator and lecturer.

She had an office of her own, a desk; a potted plant in a petticoat of green tissue paper added a feminine touch. Promptly at nine, wearing brown pongee with a brown lace collar, she reported for work. This was the period of princess dresses, tight fitting from throat to ankle, boned about the neck and flounced about the feet. But Gerry clung to the dear, glamorous styles of her youth. She would not move with the times, because to do so was a subtle admission that time had passed. She must be twenty, no more, when her dream came true. She saw herself swaying along the boulevards in one of those tailor-made masterpieces of the early nineties, with a little parasol and bronze shoes, and a "figure." She never saw herself as she was, but as she some day would be.

She lectured on Michael Angelo, Watts, Raphael and Burne-Jones to the more wide awake women of Paris. There were never any men in her audience. It was considered effeminate to have an interest in the arts. The men of Paris, released from the day's work, forgathered in the lobby of the Kennedy house and swapped stories—mostly smutty.

Gerry's salary could be stretched to cover the mortgage and to buy food and clothes. She reckoned that by going without new clothes and by reducing her grocer's bill, she could save two hundred dollars a year. She wrote it out, in a neat, spidery hand, in a ruled notebook. Five years. A thousand dollars. She would rent the house and go to Paris.

And so, for the first time, she began to speak of "my trip abroad." There was about her a new dignity and a new sweetness. She was like a woman going toward a lover. "My studio in the Latin Quarter." Or: "My work at the salon will be the gift of Paris to Paris." This was a delicate allusion. But no one thought to smile. Gerry's dream of Paris, France, was becoming an accepted fact. And she had the small personal triumph she had expected. "I wish I were you, Gerry Reynolds. Free to go and come. I'm tied down with babies and housework so's I can't call my soul my own."

"O, now, Nellie, I know you'd do it all over again if you had to."

"Maybe. But life isn't what they'd like to have us believe. The real thing isn't as good as thinking about it."

Gerry went on painting. Her memory of the canvases exhibited at the fair was not insistent. She was not limited by the doubts and confusions which beset her contemporaries. She knew nothing of impressionisms. She had never heard of those disturbing and revolutionary Frenchmen who were painting in terms of light. To Gerry a landscape was a landscape, and her formula never varied. She painted girls with cherries and children with kittens and cobblers and moonlight. She remained, unchallenged, the only artist in Paris.

When Joe Burch married, the Gerry of Maisie's creation died and the real Gerry came into being. Life had always been life with the glorious and remote possibility that Joe Burch might ask her to marry him. Now life was life with the possibility left out. Joe Burch married Astrid Ericson, and they went to live in the house he had built out on the prairie. Gerry read the notice in the Star and caught herself all crumpled up on her bed, sobbing as if she never could stop. "What's the matter with me? I'm crazy. I didn't love him. I'm happier as I am." And she lay on her back, dry-eyed, staring up at the crack in the ceiling, exhausted.

Ten dollars. Forty dollars. A hundred dollars.

She told herself she would rather be an artist than a farmer's wife. Astrid Burch cooked for Joe and the hired men, cleaned the big house, washed, ironed. Her hands were swollen and pink, her strong arms looked always as if they had been immersed in hot suds.

Gerry cooked her own meals and ate them alone. She always set a place for herself in the dining room, using Maisie's wedding linen and the silver Will had inherited from his grandmother. She always removed her apron, smoothed down her dress and ate with punctilious attention to the niceties. No one but the grocer knew she hadn't enough to eat.

As she grew older, she grew thinner. Her black hair was streaked with gray. Her eyes, seeming always to look ahead at some vision, were magnificent.

Two hundred dollars.

Five hundred dollars.

"A nice steak today, Miss Reynolds? We have some fine porterhouse."

"No, thank you, I prefer a small slice of ham. Very thin. Only one slice."

"That woman don't eat enough to keep a bird alive. Ham! Ham! Ham! Or maybe a chop. But mostly tea and rice."

Six hundred dollars.

Mrs. Joe Burch's Scandinavian good looks disappeared behind layers of fat. But Joe Burch, waxing richer, remained always Joe Burch.

One day he came into Gerry's office at the library.

He stood in the doorway, his thatch of upstanding hair touching the lintel, his eyes, with that humorous twinkle, taking in the framed photographs of Notre Dame and the Louvre, the potted plant, the orderly desk and Gerry behind it—Gerry. Curator of the arts.

"Thought I'd drop in and see how you're getting along. They tell me you're going to Paris."

Gerry flushed a dull red from throat to forehead. "Some day." And then she blurted out: "I'm saving the money. I've got six hundred dollars saved."

Joe Burch came in, closed the door, and seated himself beside her. Then she knew he had not changed. He smiled at her in that old way—as if she would agree with anything he might say, because she could not help herself. "Why, you're not going to France with six hundred dollars!"

"In four years I'll have a thousand. And the mortgage clear."

"Four years——" His eyes deepened. "Why, good Lord——"

"Don't pity me!"

"I don't. Only it's all wrong. Waiting twenty years for something to happen. Why, dreams have got to come true. They do! I've never had a dream that didn't come true if I dreamed it often enough. It's some sort of law. But twenty years!" He broke off and stared into the crown of his hat at a gilt label inscribed: "Hirsh's Emporium." Then he said: "I'm ashamed, Miss Gerry, when I think of the salary you're getting. Why, you're the leading citizen of Paris, an influence for good. We're back numbers out here. I guess we didn't realize how much you were worth to us."

He leaned forward, and, for the second time in her life, Gerry noticed the wrinkles in his skin—lines carved there by sun and wind and dust and rain. "I'll tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going to hurry that dream along. I'm going to give you a thousand dollars, and you can pay me back when you get rich."

Gerry shook her head. In a panic, she cried: "No! No! I couldn't! It's impossible."

"You're not thinking of that day you said you hated me?"

Covering her face with her hands, she trembled violently. "I didn't! I don't. It isn't that."

"Because I forgave you a long time ago. And I'm married. And we're grown up, you and I—getting to be old folks. This isn't the time to be foolish. I've always been fond of you, Miss Gerry. Call it what you like. I always admired the way you went out after your dream. I wasn't it. You had your mind set on a city, a big, beautiful, white city full of statues and parks and pictures. You didn't hate me. You were just fighting the best way you knew how to get what you hankered for. Now, I had a dream of my own. And I've got it. Twenty thousand acres of prairie, all in bloom!" He put his hand briefly on hers. "What do you say?"

She shook her head. "You're awfully kind. But don't you see, if you gave it to me, it wouldn't be mine? I've got to earn it."

"Well," he said, slowly, "perhaps you're right."

Eight hundred dollars.

Nine hundred dollars.

Gerry knew, now, that she would have fulfillment. Her cheeks always burned a bright, feverish spot of color painted her cheek bones. A year—

She got out the tailor-made suit she had worn at the fair, cleaned and mended it, pressed the monstrous sleeves, stuffed them with tissue. Hanging in the closet, the garment had a frivolous, eager look. The stuff was as good as new. The silk petticoat rustled crisply. From its round box Gerry took the cherished hat, a "sailor" of the nineties. She hooked her gaunt body into a watered silk afternoon gown trimmed with circular ruffles. From the bodice an odor of rose sachet floated up, assailed her, so that for a moment she was faint. It never occured to her that these clothes, twenty years old, were ridiculous. Paris, France, had waited for her.

But, after all, it was time that changed everything.

Joe Burch was driving in to the city one day. Beside him, fat, contented, red cheeked Astrid Ericson Burch looked out upon a landscape that was hers from horizon to horizon. Joe had never driven an automobile. He preferred horses, pacers, well matched. Automobiles, he argued, were dangerous. Always getting into trouble, turning over, smashing into things, burning up. No, he preferred animals to machines. Machines couldn't think. You couldn't leave an automobile alone and expect it to find its way to the stable. No, sir-ee.

A light snow had fallen and had melted again, leaving a treacherous outer crisp upon a sea of mud.

A mile from Joe's house the railroad cut west and east, two shining tracks that linked the prairie to the seaboard.

As they approached the crossing a plume of smoke curled up, thick, black, moving. "The train. The twelve-thirty. We'll wait a minute."

Joe drew the pacers to a walk. He could hear the train now, that long drawn whistle which always sounded as if the great steel monster fled across the plain crying: "Where are you? Where are you?"

Joe Burch glanced at Astrid and his mouth twisted into a wry smile. It had been just here, twenty years ago, that——

Gerry did not hear what had happened until the next day. It was the grocer who told her.

"A slice of ham? Thin. Yes'm. I don't suppose you've heard the news about the accident? Terrible accident. People named Burch. The rich Burch. Lived out Fillmore way in a big brown house with a red roof. Nice fellow, too."

Gerry hung on to the edge of the counter with both hands. She watched the long, bright butcher's knife slice into the ham—fat, lean, fat—slap. "Quarter of a pound."

"They were waiting for the train to pass. The engineer whistled. You know how it is. Awful noise. That twelve-thirty's the California express. It came tearing through and caught the buggy right on the track. Maybe the horses were scared. Tossed 'em up. Killed them both."

"The horses?"

"The horses?"

"Yes'm. Killed Mrs. Burch, too."

"Killed—him?"

"I guess not. They've got him over at the hospital. All smashed up."

Paper. String.

"Twenty-five cents. Anything else, ma'am?"

"No."

Gerry wandered up the street toward the library, her mind vacant. Funny that people could still be going about their business, laughing, meeting, talking, quite as if nothing had happened! She saw old Mr. Shultz standing in the doorway of the new Star building.

When she approached him with that blind look in her eyes, stammering: "Where have they taken him?" he caught her by the arms and shook her. "Miss Gerry, what's the matter? Where have they taken who?"

"Joe Burch."

His look softened. "I didn't know, Miss Gerry, you cared for him. At the County hospital. We'll take a cab."

"No. No."

"You come right along."

They were in one of the station hacks, sitting side by side in a musty half twilight. Mr. Shultz kept mur-

He was too busy to dream of the murmuring: "Too bad. Too bad."

Gerry tried to explain, but the weight against her heart was too great. She leaned forward, staring out of the window.

At the hospital a nurse, glancing at Mr. Shultz's card, said crisply: "Come upstairs. You may see him for a moment. He will never walk again."

He lay on a narrow crib in a room that was too bright and clean; his face was averted. Gerry went forward, leaned over him. He turned his head, slowly, slowly.

"It's me—Gerry. I heard only a few minutes ago. Don't you believe them. Don't you believe anything they tell you." Out of her pity and her dread she said a strange thing: "The desert bloomed, Joe. Remember."

He looked at her. His eyes were dull. He licked his lips and turned his head away again. He shut her out.

All the way home Mr. Shultz patted her back with his delicate, withered hand. "There, there. It was nice of you, Miss Gerry. Now, don't you worry."

Again the agony of waiting! Weeks and weeks of waiting for some one to come who did not come, with that catch of dreadful hope every time the bell rang. Always it was the grocer or the postman or the newspaper man or some one selling something. But never was it Joe Burch. She heard that he had left the hospital, that he walked with crutches. "I guess I'm a fool. I shouldn't have gone to the hospital." And again she surrendered her delicious possibility.

In the spring she sold the house.

"Paris is growing in the other direction, Miss Reynolds, toward Fillmore. I could have sold the house for you five years ago at quite a figure! Quite a figure. The best I can do now is to accept, say, three thousand cash and a mortgage. Say, eight thousand. Terms. Easy terms. A Chinese laundry is looking for a house in this neighborhood."

Gerry received the Chinese laundryman in Maisie's parlor. He was young, this Chinese, with a puckered, sensitive, eager face. He fingered Maisie's treasures, rubbed his tapered yellow fingers over the surfaces of things, peered, sucked in his breath, carrying on like a bird singing to himself as he tiptoed from room to room. The doctor's charts attracted him: "Velly nice. Velly plitty."

It was done. In the bank, charged to Miss Geraldine Reynolds' account, there were one thousand and nine hundred dollars. Her father had been dead eight years and she was thirty-seven. And Paris, France, Maisie's promise, lay upon the horizon like a beautiful mirage.

It was then, while she was waiting for the sale of the furniture, that she met Rossi's son. He came out of the past—young, dark, foreign—to confront her. "I'm Guglielmo Rossi. My father sent me. You used to study with him."

"Of course. Come in."

She led the way into the parlor.

"Won't you sit down? Of course, I remember. But I was a little girl. Not more than seven. How is your father? I didn't know he was living in Paris."

The boy did not accept her invitation. He stood in the middle of the room, his quick eyes flying, taking in everything. He stood straight with his head thrown back, braced as if nothing could shake him. He was like a statue or a tree, Gerry thought.

"My father has a store on Warner street. He's a photographer."

Gerry could not help an exclamation of sympathy and disappointment: "O! He used to be an artist!"

Rossi's son turned on her with a flame in his eyes. "Used to be! He gave it up because he had to. Artists starve out here. These people don't know—" he hesitated as if doubtful of a word she might not understand. Then, breathlessly, he said, "They don't know beauty when they see it. My father was a great painter, but he's spent his life taking cabinet photographs of Bohemian farmers."

"Don't you like Paris?"

He shouted: "No! Do you?"

Gerry shook her head. "I suppose not."

Rossi's son began to pace the room, peering at everything. He stopped before Gerry's canvas in pastel: "Christmas Eve." He swung out his arms.

"Now, terrible things like this!"

"Isn't it good?" Gerry asked in a small voice. Something clutched at her heart.

"Of course not! Didn't you know? You ought to know. You teach art." He began to make big, sweeping motions with his hands over the precious surface. "The whole thing's silly. It isn't drawn. It's smeared on. It doesn't move, as nature moves—is always moving. It's static!"

"Static!"

There was something dreadful, final, about this word.

"It's dead. Like these houses out here. Like the Kennedy house."

He seemed to push Gerry's canvas out of his offended sight. He crossed to Gerry's side and took the chair she had offered him when he came in. Then she saw that he had a curious, whimsical face; his nose tipped up and when he smiled his upper lip was drawn away from his teeth, showing his gums. He had an Irish smile. There was something compact, alive and pugnacious about him, like a prairie wind. "My father took me to Chicago a year ago, and I saw a canvas by a man named Homer. Now, there was snow! Real snow! Not talcum powder. Snow you could smell and touch. And under it, the earth."

Gerry thought: "Talcum powder. Does he know how he's hurting me?"

Apparently, he did not.

"Some day I'm going to paint like that. Nature, plus me."

A voice within Gerry, demanding: "Is it true? Must I believe him? A boy." But she believed. Suddenly she felt drained, empty. It was as if her body sat there, a husk.

"You're an artist, too?"

"That's why I came to see you. I want to study. My father told me you lectured at the library. I thought you might teach me."

"Not I! O, no. You don't know what you're talking about. I couldn't."

He flushed. "I could pay—a little. Maybe two dollars. I'm working in my father's shop. But I want to study. I can't wait."

"I don't teach. I don't know anything."

For some reason she did not say, "I am going to Paris."

He rose, offering her his broad hand which tapered from a capable palm into a flexible wrist.

Bracing herself, summoning herself, she said: "You see, I painted—that."

HE let go of her hand and rushed back to stare at that frozen blue glitter, that innocent and terrible work of art. He shook his head and turned to her again with a serious, gentle face.

"I'm sorry. I guess I've hurt you."

"You have."

"I can help you, too."

"Not now."

"I'll show you something you've missed. And it was right here all along. I'll take you out on the prairie some day and show you. Maybe I've hurt you. Maybe I was sent to help you. Why, you've been painting pictures of stage scenery! I'll show you the prairie. The prairie's real!"

"Real!" Gerry repeated.

What Rossi's son showed her, presently, she saw. She saw, too, that what she had lacked, he possessed. Gerry was no fool, in spite of Maisie.

She rode with him as far as the trolley went, and then they walked toward Fillmore. The boy was hatless. He kept turning his face up toward the sun. He wore a shabby, short waisted coat and sneakers.

Gerry wore her brown pongee and carried an umbrella. She had to hurry to keep up with him.

In the distance, topping a small swell in that limitless sea of plowed land, Joe Burch's house.

"Belonged to a fellow who was injured a couple of years ago."

"My house," Gerry thought.

They climbed through a fence and stumbled across a field, following the line of the plowshare. The earth smelled hot and sweet. Little flies buzzed up and settled down again. Great smoldering clouds heaped themselves into pyramids, towers, anvils, and glowed and burned.

On this and many other days Gerry listened and learned. In this boy, the son of an Italian father and an Irish mother, there was the spirit of an art that was American. There was something spiritual, religious in her perception of it. Her own dream vanished. And simply, without self-pity, without even full realization of her purpose, she dedicated herself to it.

"I'm going to send you to Paris for a year, maybe longer," she said one morning. "I intended to go myself, but I know better."

Rossi's son remained silent, staring down at his hands. He did not protest. It was as if he were considering not his part in all this, but the large, impersonal issue.

"I'll go," he said. "I'll learn to paint. Then I'll make them see what they've got here and now."

Gerry sold the furniture.

The day came when the Chinese laundryman appeared on the threshold, bowing and smiling no longer, but impatient to enter, the owner of the house. Where "William Reynolds, M. D.," had been written in gold upon black, "Ah Sing, Laundry," would be written in black upon yellow.

Gerry moved into a boarding house. And Rossi's son went to Paris. Gerry saw him off. She found herself on the station platform. Rossi, gray, rusty, violent as ever, a little, dark, blue eyed mother; friends, relatives, neighbors. Rossi's son with his letter of credit, his passport, his cheap suitcase, not flustered at all, kissing and patting everybody. "Goodby, mother. Don't cry. I'll be home before you know it. I've got to go!"

Suddenly he swept them aside. Gerry was caught and held close. She heard his heart thumping. "Goodby." He kissed her before everybody.

He was gone.

Gerry went back to the boarding house. She said to herself, "This is the end. This is the end of me."

She thought, "I'll go upstairs and cry. I'll cry all I want to. For hours. For days. I'll cry."

But before she could climb the steep flight of stairs carpeted in thick, turkey red Axminster, the landlady gave her a letter. "This came for you while you were out."

Gerry stared at the envelope. "Miss Geraldine Reynolds."

"I must say, Miss Reynolds, you were mighty generous to send that boy abroad."

Gerry climbed the stairs. She sat on the edge of the bed. "I'll cry in a minute. After I've read this." She took off her hat, unpinned her hair and let it ripple down on her shoulders. Then she slit the envelope, opened it and read, written in a big, scrawling hand:

"Dear Miss Gerry: After all, it isn't the prairie a man needs. Since I was crippled I've reached out. It seems I haven't got anything. What I need now is what you've got, knowledge of things. The prairie is the prairie. God made it. But He gave men souls. I need to understand what is a closed book to me. I guess I need you. "JOE BURCH."

"Killed—him?"

"I guess not. They've got him over at the hospital. All smashed up."

Paper. String.

"Twenty-five cents. Anything else, ma'am?"

"No."

Gerry wandered up the street toward the library, her mind vacant. Funny that people could still be going about their business, laughing, meeting, talking, quite as if nothing had happened! She saw old Mr. Shultz standing in the doorway of the new Star building.

When she approached him with that blind look in her eyes, stammering: "Where have they taken him?" he caught her by the arms and shook her. "Miss Gerry, what's the matter? Where have they taken who?"

"Joe Burch."

His look softened. "I didn't know, Miss Gerry, you cared for him. At the County hospital. We'll take a cab."

"You come right along."

They were in one of the station hacks, sitting side by side in a musty half twilight. Mr. Shultz kept mur-

He was too busy to dream of the murmuring: "Too bad. Too bad."

Gerry tried to explain, but the weight against her heart was too great. She leaned forward, staring out of the window.

At the hospital a nurse, glancing at Mr. Shultz's card, said crisply: "Come upstairs. You may see him for a moment. He will never walk again."

He lay on a narrow crib in a room that was too bright and clean; his face was averted. Gerry went forward, leaned over him. He turned his head, slowly, slowly.

"It's me—Gerry. I heard only a few minutes ago. Don't you believe them. Don't you believe anything they tell you." Out of her pity and her dread she said a strange thing: "The desert bloomed, Joe. Remember."

THREE METHODS OF "CARD READING"

GUS JUD -

No amateur conjuror's repertoire is complete without a "card-reading" trick; that is, a method by which you read the cards of a thoroughly shuffled pack, one after another, without apparently having seen them. Harry Houdini here gives three favorite methods of accomplishing this feat.

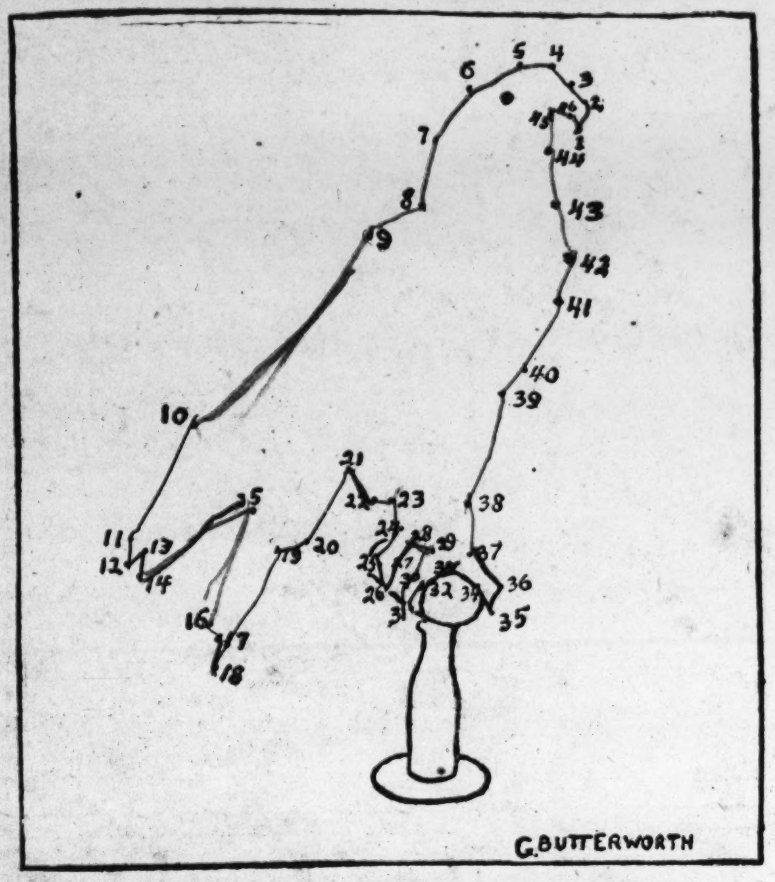

Numbers 1 and 2 are self-explanatory. In number 1 the pack is shuffled by the audience; you put it into its case and hold it against your head. You announce the cards one by one before drawing them; the audience is amazed to see that each card drawn is the one you have called. A small opening cut in the corner of the case allows you to spot the index of each card. Number 2 employs a tiny spangle fastened to the tip of the forefinger with a bit of wax. You hold the deck facing the audience and see the value of the card reflected in the spangle. This is most mystifying, as there seems no possible way for you to see the cards, yet you name them one after the other, running through the entire pack if need be.

Number 3 is probably the best of all. You hold the deck behind your back, name a card, and show the deck to the audience; sure enough, the card you named is on the front of the deck. You repeat this performance till you have named the entire deck.

The secret is simple. Hold the deck face down and secretly turn over the top card. This you show to the audience, naming the card. They think the face of the deck is toward them, while in reality it is toward you, and as you show the card to the audience you have the bottom card of the deck in plain view. This you bring to the top, face out, behind your back, name it and show it; once more you see the next card on the bottom, with which you perform the same evolution, and so on through the whole pack.

CONTRIBUTES

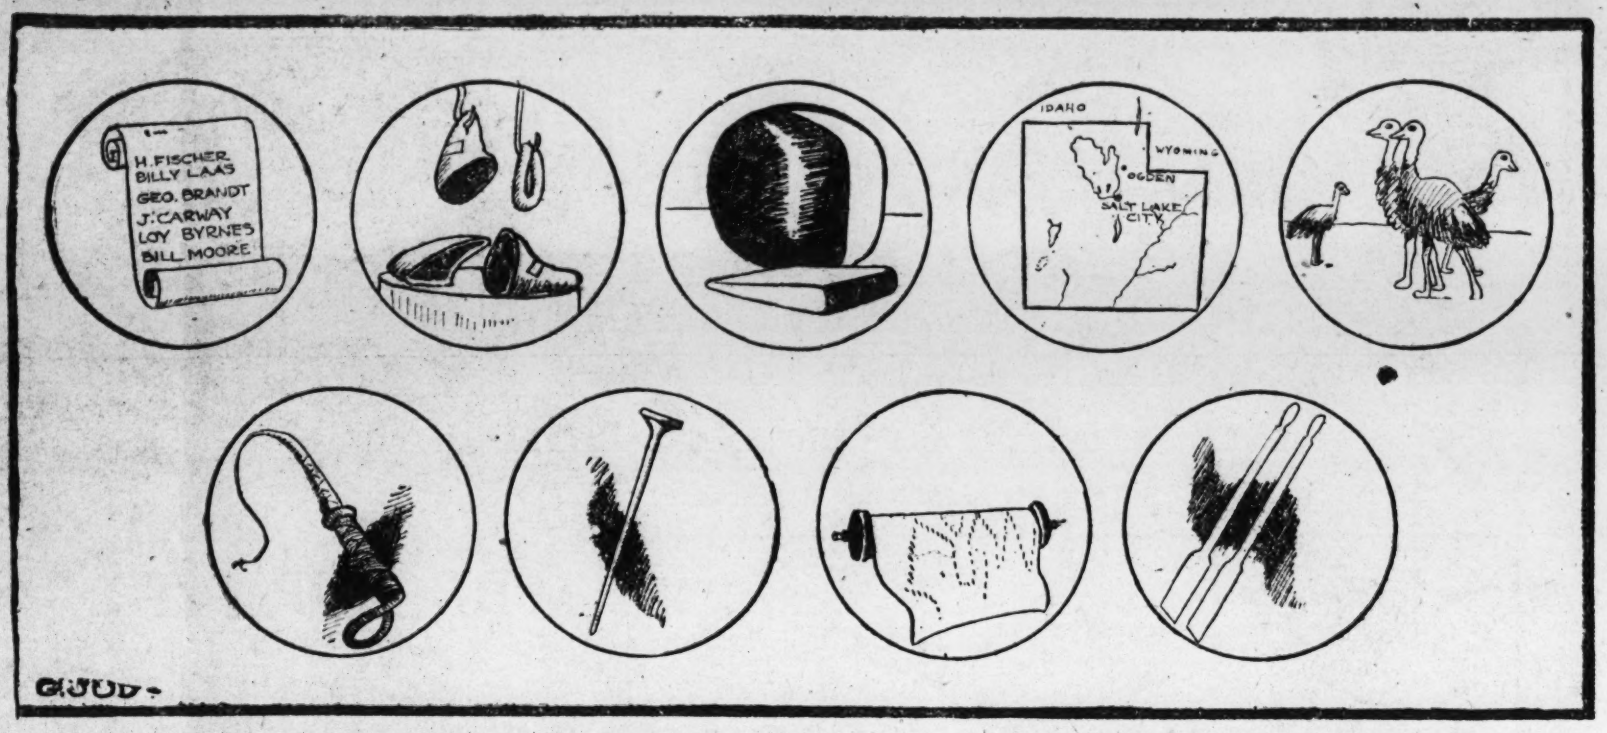

TO EVERY NUMBER

Here is a good joke on our granddaddies, who used to play this puzzle game seventy-five years ago, when it was universally popular. The old books explain how the solution is accomplished in fifty-two moves, "the shortest possible method." As a matter of fact it can be done in forty-seven moves, which will be very surprising information to the "shades" of the old fellows if they are hovering around!

The old game was made of wood, with black and white pegs fitted into holes in the centres of the squares. The object of the puzzle was to transpose the pegs in a series of moves and jumps, so that the whites should occupy the upper positions and the blacks the lower. The pegs were moved from one square to another, with the additional privilege of jumping over a peg to a vacant hole. Moves and jumps are made north, south, east or west; diagonal moves or jumps being barred.

To work out the puzzle on our diagram it is only necessary to place eight black markers upon the eight black disks, and eight white markers upon the eight white disks. Different colored buttons or coins of different denominations will do. Then to make forty-seven moves and jumps, through the medium of the one vacant square, that will effect a complete transposition of the sixteen pieces, so that the white group will be in the N. W. positions and the black group in the S. E. corner. The black and white do not have to move alternately—move and jump the sixteen markers in any order you like so long as the direction is always horizontal or vertical. You see, for the opening, you may move or jump north, south, east or west. To keep a record of the performance write down a sequence of the moves and jumps according to the direction they take. For example: Move east, jump west, move west, etc.

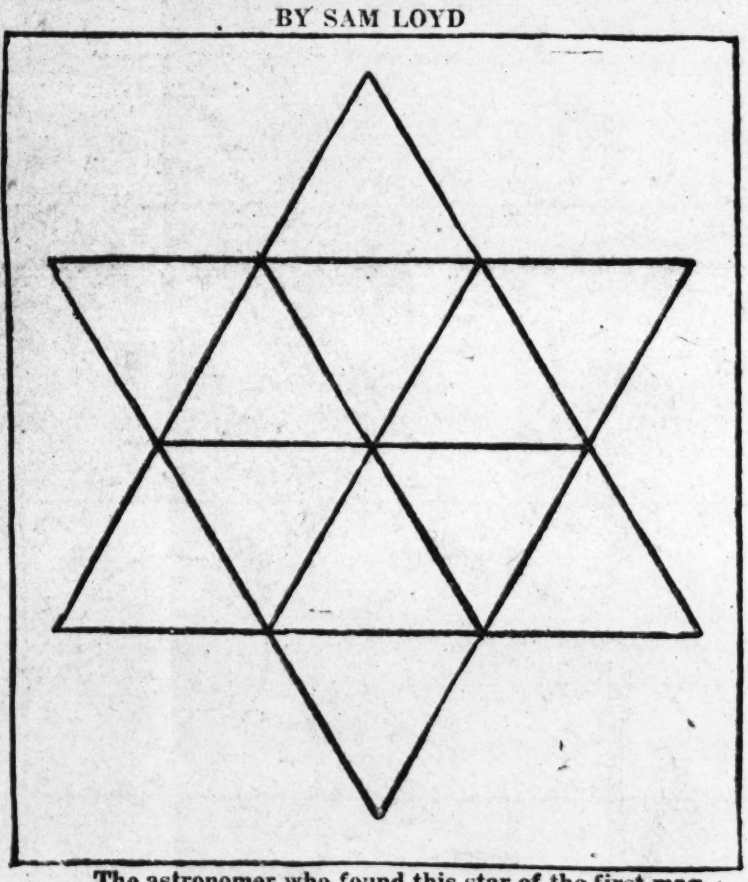

WHAT CITY IS BURIED HERE?

Each of the above objects can be named by a word of four letters. When rightly guessed and written one below the other in the proper order, the third letters, reading downward, will spell the name of a great continent, and the initial letters a city, the capital of one of its provinces.

AN ASTRONOMICAL PUZZLE

BY SAM LOYD

The astronomer who found this star of the first magnitude was surprised to notice that it was covered with lines, like canals. He went on to note that the line divided the star into triangles. He counted twelve small triangles, and several other larger ones. But he could never decide Just how many there were, so he calls on the puzzlers to help him out. How many triangles of any size can you find in the astronomer's star?

THE SQUARE PARADOX

You will find that the cut pieces do not actually fit perfectly. There is a small space along the long diagonal line. This space equals exactly two square inches, and thus accounts for the dimensions of the rectangular figure.

TRANSPOSING THE COINS

The coins can be transposed in ten moves, as follows: 2-1, 5-2, 3-5, 6-3, 7-6, 4-7, 1-4, 3-1, 6-3 and 7-6.

AN ANIMAL CUTOUT

The pieces, when properly put together, make the picture of a hippopotamus.

THE PUZZLING PROBLEM

The three numbers that total up ot 50 are 19, 6 and 25.

CAN YOU FIGURE THIS OUT?

Here is a problem that puzzled the ancient Greeks and has caused arguments even to the present day. A man starts out to race a turtle. He can run ten yards while the turtle runs one. He gives the turtle one hundred yards start. Now, says the original questioner, while the man runs one hundred yards the turtle runs ten; while the man is running that ten yards the turtle goes one yard; while the man is running the one yard the turtle runs one-tenth of a yard; while the man runs the one-tenth of a yard the turtle runs one-one-hundredth of a yard; and so on—in other words, run how he may, the man can never catch the turtle! Of course we know that the man really would catch the turtle; but can you find any flaw in the old Greek's reasoning? It seems clear according to that that the man cannot catch the turtle. Where is the fallacy? Try arguing this question with your friends—it should cause considerable discussion.

A PUZZLING PARTNERSHIP

By Sam Loyd

In the old days when it took a strong man to lift a dollar's worth of apples Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones were selling pippins on the same street corner. On this particular occasion Mrs. Smith was selling her stock at the rate of two apples for a cent, while Mrs. Jones sold a smaller fruit at three for a cent. Well, Mrs. Smith, so the story runs, was called away, and so she turned her affairs over to Mrs. Jones who undertook to conduct both businesses as a joint account.

Mrs. Jones combined the two stocks, containing a like number of apples, and proceeded to dispose of them at the rate of five apples for two cents, which appeared to be the right thing to do. However, when Mrs. Smith returned, after all apples were sold, and the ladies counted up receipts from the partnership stock, it was discovered that they had taken in seven cents less than what their receipts would have been had their stocks been sold separately at the original selling prices.

Now, who can tell how many apples were disposed of in that joint account to which each of the ladies contributed the same number of apples?
